

LIBRARY University of California Irvine

. .

.

* 1

5/ Enly 10 colorize D1972 $225

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

http://www.archive.org/details/strappadofordiue00bratiala

Brathwaite's Strappado for the Diuell. 300 Copies only Small Paper and 50 Large.

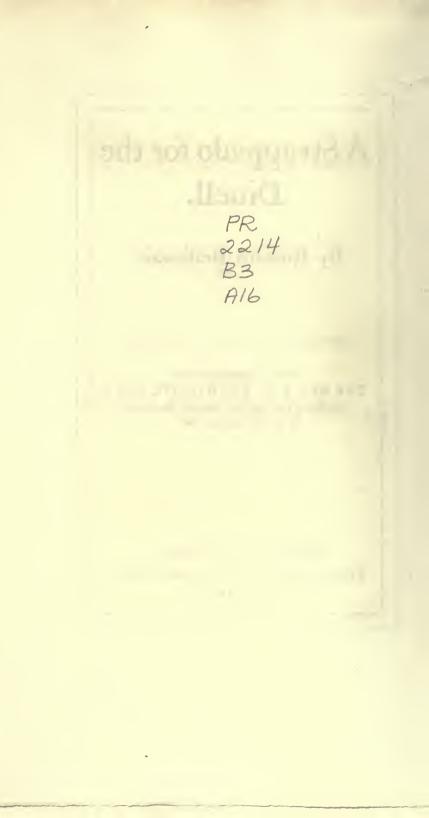

This is No. fine 10 copies only on Frawing Paper RR

A Strappado for the Diuell.

By Richard Brathwaite.

with AN INTRODUCTION BY THE REV. J. W. EBSWORTH, M.A., Editor of the Bagford Ballads, Drolleries of the Restoration, S.c.

BOSTON, LINCOLNSHIRE: Printed by Robert Roberts, Strait Bar-Gate. M,DCCCLXXVIII.

INTRODUCTION.

"A mirthful man he was: the snows of age Fell on, but did not chill him. Gaiety Even in life's closing, touched his teeming brain With such wild visions as the setting sun Raises in front of some hoar glacier Painting the bleak ice with a thousand hues."

ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN.

OOD Wine," says the Proverb, "needs no bush." Nevertheless, while wine is in demand, there hangeth out the advertising bunch of leaves above the door where it is offered to consumers, reminding them of care having been taken to keep the barrel from the sun's scorching heat, when it was brought and stored. So it is with Richard Brathwaite, whose Strappado for the Diuell is now ready for the entertainment of revellers. "Taste and try!" is all that is absolutely necessary to be said or sung; yet are we called on, by our friend whose labours have provided this choice and accurate reprint, to write a few lines of introduction.

In sooth, the book well deserved to be copiously annotated, for, like others by the same author, it is full of quaint allusions to subjects out of the common road of thought and conversation, even in the days when it was first given to the world. It, moreover, illustrates the time by innumerable jocular quips and cranks, proverbs, and a detailed record of the contemporary customs, so that every thoughtful Shakesperian student may rejoice at now possessing the book. It was published in 1615, when Beaumont and Shakespeare had reached their last year, but while most of the other great dramatists were at their best. It exemplifies alike the laborious trifling which continued to find favour among the wits, as it had done during the reign of the Virgin Queen; and also that robust and boisterous vivacity, suited to men of adventurous spirit and hardihood at the time of England's greatest intellectual vigour. Of late there has been felt an increased interest in all of Richard Brathwaite's writings, and certainly his Strappado for the Diuell well deserved to be made more generally accessible to students. Fairly to do justice to it, a commentary equalling it in bulk; although without redundancy of annotation, would be required. This is at present deemed inexpedient. The book is offered entire, unadulterated, a verbatim reprint, but nothing more. Those who have detected the inaccuracies of most modern editions of old authors will be, doubtless, gratified at securing such an exact reproduction of this rare work as may be deemed equivalent to the original.

An excellent portrait of Richard Brathwaite is in the frontispiece of his book, A Survey of History; or,

A Nursery for Gentry: Contrived and Comprized in an Intermixt Discourse upon Historicall and Poeticall Relations, 1638. It is one of William Marshall's choice engravings, an elaborate composition in eight compartments; the oval portrait forms the centre. With pointed beard, stiff horizontal moustache, and cleanly shaven cheeks, it gives us such a likeness of the man as carries its own warrant of fidelity. The full pointlace collar falls over a slashed doublet of dark velvet. The strongly-marked features betoken a somewhat fierce animalism: great capacity and impetuosity. The eyes are already dimmed; they show in their worn and wearied expression a remembrance of bygone revels, not altogether pleasant. They have lost all the joyous light of youth, and under the knotted brow look out sadly upon the world. A stalwart combatant is this, ready at all times for a struggle against any odds that offer. He bears the bruises and the scars, in furrowed front and sunken cheek; but evidently he is unsubdued, though weakened, and will "die game," with his face to the foe. He has drank deeply of the cup proffered to him, and has known the bitterness of after-reflections. He has clasped hands firmly in friendship, and has struck hard, when needful, at those who may have hated, but dared not scorn him. Yet this face, with its wealth of varied memories, is of a man no older than forty-eight years ! It is thus certified in the engraving. The flame must have burnt fiercely, to have calcined so much in that short time. With this portrait in view we the better understand and prize his works.

He is believed to have been born about 1588, and this would make the portrait, marked "ætatis 48," to be representative of him at two years earlier date than when it was published, in 1638, in A Survey of History. It corresponds more closely with William Marshall's full length of him, as "Barnaby," merrily enjoying his newly-lighted pipe at the ale-house door, than with the lean-visaged yet smooth-browed decorous gentleman in a plaited ruff, whose portrait is prefixed to the Psalms of David, in the same year 1638. Joseph Haslewood writes of this second oval portrait, subscribed, "quanquam ô," that it "appears to have been intended for our author, when advanced in years." But Brathwaite can scarcely have been represented as more than two years older than the portrait issued almost simultaneously, in the Survey, wherein his age is stated. Elsewhere, in his biographical account, Haslewood refers to this "engraved title to the Psalms, where he has a more aged appearance, probably adopted as the sedate Christian moralist-a character he seemed desirous uniformly to sustain in all his serious and religious pieces." It may be that the biographer intends to admit a certain amount of falsification in the Psalms' portrait: that it was, in fact, like the picture of an actor "in character," more or less disguised in its se-

viii

dateness. Otherwise, we should be led to believe that the assigned date of our author's birth may have been a trifle too late. We hold firmly by a belief in the literal fidelity of the original portrait in the Survey, with its motto "Meliori nascimur ævo."

It is not necessary to repeat here the short account of his life given by his loving biographer. In few of his labours had Haslewood so satisfactorily acquitted himself as when he gave back the Barnabæ Itinerarium to the world. He left little for after-gleaners. The first duty now is to reprint Brathwaite's various works with scrupulous fidelity : the second is to add to them such a comprehensive and exhaustive introduction with annotations as they well deserve. From first to last they throw light on our English social history at the most interesting period, from before the time of Shakespeare's final retirement to Stratford, throughout the struggle of the Commonwealth against the Monarchy, and beyond the Restoration until 1673. So voluminous an author, one who wrote with a flying pen, and loved to record his own habits, whims, and experiences, beside his allusions to contemporary topics, must reward the student of literature. Nor is he ever wearisome, except by an excess of sparkle and point. His vivacity sometimes fatigues readers who cannot keep pace with his sportive sallies. But he is no mere witling, and quibbler with words. He offers subjects for thought, and would himself have scorned to be considered a jester or buffoon for idle hours. He has some kinship with George Wither,* his contemporary; resembling him alike in the pastoral poems, and in the pungency of his Satires. In the under-current of religious seriousness the two writers are not so far apart as might be imagined. Both were confessors, not martyrs, enduring persecutions for conscience sake. Brathwaite proved his sincerity and fortitude in manifold sufferings for the Royal cause, but he seems to have led a much happier and more jovial life than Wither, who was always in opposition amid a factious minority; always coming into collision with authority, and suffering imprisonments or humiliation, without much benefit to any cause that he chose to advocate. Both men deserve our affectionate remembrance, and are unlikely to be forgotten in the coming age. There will be made a diligent search for every scrap of writing that they left behind them. Except the dreary religious poetry whereunto they piously turned in later years (as a compensation for having earlier indulged

* Of George Wither, and of William Browne, the author of Britannia's Pastorals, Brathwaite was a warm admirer. In his poem "Vpon the Generall Sciolists or Poettasters of Brittaine (our p. 23) he writes "On witty Wither neuer-withring plaines," and declares that "long may England's Thespian springs be known By louely Wither and by bonny Browne."

Again, in Nature's Embassic, he distinctly alludes to Wither's Abuses Stript and Whipt: "Thou must be Stript, and Whipt, and chastis'd for 't."

in much satirical "stripping and whipping" of whatever they believed to be Social Abuses), they wrote few things which the world is inclined to cast aside as "alms for oblivion."

Even without assuming the received date of Brathwaite's birth to be slightly post-dated, we find him certainly reaching the venerable age of eighty-five years. That he retained his mental faculties until the end, or very near the end, seems to be clearly proved. Whatever may have been the wild excesses of his youth, the actions and the words of his closing days were such as secured respect. Anthony a Wood, who is by no means lavish of praise, declares that "he left behind him the character of a well-bred gentleman and good neighbour;" and his later biographer gladly adds, "a consistent christian and upright man." As to his appearance, attire, and disposition, "Tradition reports him to have been in person below the common stature, well-proportioned, and one of the handsomest men of his day; remarkable for ready wit and humour; charitable to the poor in the extreme, so much so as to have involved himself in difficulties by it. He commonly wore a light grey coat, red waistcoat, and leather breeches. His hat was a high-crowned one, and beyond what [height] was common in those days, when such hats were worn. His equals in life bestowed on him the name of Dapper Dick, by which he was universally known. In disposition he was as admirable as in person; and, always taking from the gaiety of heart a conspicuous part in the neighbourhood in promoting the festivities of Christmas, those good times gone by long beheld him the darling of that side of the country."

We need feel no scruple in borrowing one more paragraph from Joseph Haslewood, for it assists to bring before the reader Brathwaite's Cavalier spirit of hospitality, already mentioned. Soon after 1639, when he married his second wife, a loyal Scotch widow lady, he quitted his own family-residence at Burneshead, in Lancashire, which was probably in disorder and difficulties, and, as it seems, removed to Catterick, her jointure manor-house, in Yorkshire. "The fevered state of the times might in part occasion his quitting the family residence at Burneshead. Brathwaite was 'a subject sworn to loyalty,' and not likely under any sway at that lawless period to escape the common wrack of power. Lavish hospitality in support of the royal cause on the one hand, and contributions imperiously demanded and violently enforced in the name of either the Parliament or the Usurper upon the other, would serve equally to impoverish his hereditary property, and make a removal to the newly-acquired estate at Appleton a matter of convenience to prevent shading family honours. He declares himself to have been 'a resolute sufferer for both' sovereign and country, and depicts the very impaired state of his fortune at the Restoration, in a poem addressed 'To his Majesty upon his happy arrivall in our late discomposed Albion' (1660), which he describes as written 'by him who ever held his intimacy of Loyalty a sufficient reward for all his sufferings; and his house most happy in the hospitality of your [the king's] servants.'

xii

⁶ My ruin'd fortunes I shall nere bemone, Though I have felt as much as any one Of the Delinquent's whip: I'm still the man I was, before the Civill warrs began; Those capitall grand-bugbears had no power T' affright your servant, though they might devour That small remainder which he then possest; Wherein they grew half-sharers at the least.'"

Thus loyal to King and Church he held his way with cheerfulness, despite the troubles and material losses which it was his lot to encounter. He uses the whip of the Satirist, sometimes playfully, and sometimes in grim earnest; but in his hands it is not the implement of ruthless cruelty and destruction that it would have been if wielded by a Puritan fanatic. This was no narrow-minded sectary, incapable of feeling any bright influence of joy and beauty from the world that lay before his purblind eyes. No prurient moralist was he, secretly enslaved by desire for the luxuries he could not compass, but openly denounced, in language more offensive than the love-ditties which the Precisians declared to be idolatrous and blasphemous. It is not laid upon us to attempt to reconcile the selfcontradictions of such a complex character as Brathwaite's, where the reveller and gallant is conjoined to the austere moralist and pious churchman. We see that he was of open-handed liberality and robust geniality, yet religious-minded withal. Like him, in those. days, were many others, so that he was not an eccentric humourist, flighty, and almost unintelligible, but a fair sample of a large class of men. Most of them fought for the king's cause against the tyranny of faction, and suffered sore hardships without losing heart or hope; in many cases yielding up their lives, as well as their estates, in attestation of their loyalty. With this clue to an understanding of the man himself, the writings of Richard Brathwaite become doubly valuable. He is not only an illustrator of rural customs, and of transitory habits in the busy city-life; not only is he of assistance to the commentator who desires to learn more of the obsolete phraseology and folk-lore belonging to our richest dramatic literature. He is all this, but he is also a bold and genial Englishman, representative in no small degree of other Cavaliers, who had been roysters and revellers without ceasing to be gentlemen and christians.

As to the manner in which he looked upon the prim Sectaries, the men whom later days designated the "unco guid and rigidly righteous," we have a notable example in the present volume, on p. 109. It is an address "to the Precision, that dares hardly looke (because th' art pure, forsooth) on any book, saue Homilies," &c. He gibbets the class of men for posterity, by a reference to this one being

xiv

" wont to slay

His cat for killing mice on th' Sabboth day." *

We desire not to imitate our author in one thing, viz., the keeping back readers from his book by an accumulation of prefatory matter. Among the few

* It may be the phrase was already proverbial, for it has the imperfect quotational marks before it. This is the earliest-known appearance of the allusion in print. John Taylor the Water-Poet uses it, several years later, of a Brownist, in The Praise of Hempseed :---

"The Spirit still directs him how to pray, Nor will he dresse his Meate the Sabbath day, Which doth a mighty mysterie vnfold, His Zeale is hot, although his Meat be cold ; Suppose his Cat on Sunday kill a Rat, She on the Munday must be hang'd for that."

Dr. James Smith or Sir John Menzies in Musarum Deliciæ, 1655, mentions "some close-pared Brother" who will work retributive vengeance on a Cat (guilty of having eaten certain lute-strings),

" Or else, profane, be hang'd on Monday, For butchering a Mouse on Sunday."

It has also been noted that the incident had re-appeared in Wm. Sampson's play of The Vow-Breaker 1636. Modern adaptations of a civil-war ballad, telling how "A Presbyterian Cat sat watching of her prey," are found in The Linnet, (=Orpheus), 1740, p. 20, and (altered into "There was a Cameronian Cat") in James Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1st. series, p. 37, 1819.

printed copies of the Strappado, still remaining, there are differences in the arrangement of the leaves. Imperfections, similar to what we find in the rare Drolleries and early song-books, arise chiefly from the books having been roughly used in frequent perusal. Even in the best libraries, where any apparently unmutilated volume of such class may be stored, it has been generally made complete (like the unique first 4to. of Hamlet, 1603), by intermixture of several imperfect exemplars. Our publisher and printer, with whom had rested the labour of preparing this reproduction, has spared no pains to make it as nearly as possible an exact reprint of Brathwaite's interesting pages. In them we see the author at an early part of his joyous life. He was not more than twenty-seven years old when it was published. Some parts of it may have been written earlier, but we do not think this is probable. He was a quick producer, and seems to have generally flung out whatever he wrote without much delay. Elaboration suited not his humour, and it is not likely that he kept many unused manuscripts long beside him. When he had executed any piece of work that his own judgment approved, as worthy of being tossed out to an expectant public of good fellows,* he probably searched amid his loose papers,

* In general he seems to have hurried his writings into print, and almost always left them at the mercy of typographical blunderers, until such time as he could add an "Apology for the xvi

xvii

the fly-leaves of favourite volumes whereon he had jotted down some odd thoughts in epigrammatic form. With the aid of such waifs and strays as these (tokens of their fugitive character remaining visible at this day), he would increase the bulk of his book until it looked big enough to face the world. Even when consecutively paged, his volumes are often composed of several distinct works. Separate titles, dedications, tables of errata, and other camp-followers are accumulated in each. They resemble the highland clans that followed the standard of Prince Charles Edward, each under its own feudal leader, and his chosen subordinates ; so that they look less like a disciplined army, than a melée of ill-disciplined and incongruous forces, ready at a word to fall asunder.

Thus, in the present volume, we find his "Love's Labyrinth; or, the true-Louers knot : including The disastrous fals of two star-crost Louers Pyramus and Thysbe," following, with no poetic or logical link of connection, closely after the "Strappado for the Errata," under an excuse of the author's absence. But there are a few instances of his keeping manuscript by him for a long time, as in the case of his Comment upon the two Tales of our Ancient, Renowned, and Ever Living Poet S^{T} . Jeffray Chaucer, &c., which was not printed until 1665, but appears to have been (in part, at least), written half a century earlier, having been in 1617 announced for early publication. The Barnabæ Itinerarium also bears clear marks of having been written at intervals, and long retained in hand before its appearance about 1649.

Deuill." Even so in "Nature's Embassie : or, the wilde-mans Measvres," 1621, (already reprinted at Boston by Mr. Robert Roberts, in 1877) : the charming "Shepheard's Tales," with its separate title-page, and "Omphale, or, the Inconstant Shepheardesse," beside "His Odes, or Philomel's Tears," all of the same date, are formed into one volume, consecutivelypaged in the reprint.

There seems to be good reason for believing that the author designed "Nature's Embassie" to be accepted as a continuation of "A Strappado for the Deuill." After our present p. 234 had followed two leaves having signature and direction. "¶ Place this and the leafe following after the end of the First Booke." In lines addressed, at that place, "To the equall Reader," he is told,

We entertain no doubt whatever that the "Second Part" thus announced was none other than the book published in 1621, under the full title of "Natvres Embassie; or, The Wilde-mans Measvres: Danced naked by twelve Satyres, with sundry others contained in the next Section." That no close connection exists between the two works, and that no declaration is made to the effect that "this is the promised Second

xviii

Part of the Strappado," are facts of infinitely small weight in the balance against the supposition. Puritanism was growing more powerful, and there had evidently been objections raised against the introduction of the Devil's name into the title of the earlier volume.* As to connection, there is still less between the component parts of the present, and many another volume, by the same author, than there is between the Strappado and the Wilde-men's Measures. So much need was felt for a "taking title," and the appearance of novelty, that the publisher, Richard Whitaker, would be indisposed to risk the success of the book, in 1621, by permitting the author to call it a "Second Part," even of the successful Strappado. As a matter of fact, we know that two years later the unsold copies were helped into circulation by fresh title-pages, with the more acceptable name of " Shepheard's Tales. The two books ought never hereafter to be separated.

Although his name appeared thus prominently, and

* Thus, in his Essay on Detraction, Brathwaite writes, "Wonder I cannot chuse (for else should I wonder at my own stupidity) how any should harbour the least conceit of an intended Detraction by mee, or by my Labours, unlesse my title of Devill imply so much, which may seem to have affinitie with that which the Greeks terme $\delta_{la}\beta_o\lambda\eta$, Detraction." This extract has, in 1625 (ten years after the publication of the Strappado) the following marginal note:—"A pleasant poeme by the Author, long since published; and by some no lesse censoriously than causelessly taxed."

caused all this connection, the "Deuill" had left very few of his hoof-marks behind him in the books. Personally, he resembles the "harmless fairy," whom Stephano and Trinculo* found to lead them into a

* The allusion to "Tom Trincalos" on p. 114 is certainly not to Shakespeare's Tempest, but (like Milton's) to a play which was a favourite among the Cambridge students : "Albumazar, A Comedy presented before the King's Maiestie at Cambridge, the ninth of March, 1614: by the Gentlemen of Trinitie College. London, Printed by Nicholas Okes for Walter Burre, and are to be sold at his Shop, in Paul's Church-yard. 1615." Another 4to. edition was issued in 1634, and a third in 1668, with an Epilogue (instead of the short original), written by Dryden, beginning,

"To say this Comedy pleased long ago Is not enough to make it please you now. Yet, gentlemen, your ancestors had wit, When few men censured, and when fewer writ; And Ionson, (af those few the best) chose this, As the best model of his master-piece. Subtle was got by our Albumazar, That Alchymist by this Astrologer. Here he was fashioned, and we may suppose He liked the fashion well who wore the clothes. But Ben made nobly his what he did mould; What was another's lead became his gold." &c.

This Epilogue appeared in Couent-Garden Drollery, 1675, no doubt in the same form as when first spoken (afterwards slightly changed), and probably in the characters of Albumazar, or of Trincalo. The latter person had spoken the original Epilogue. The comedy has been included among Dodsley's "Old Plays," and is in the eleventh volume of the recent edition, 1875, in 15 vols. Unless there had been an earlier production of "Albumazar" than 1614, Dryden must have mistaken the supposed paternity of Ben Jonson's "Alchymist," which was certainly printed in 1612. The author of "Albumazar" is believed to reeking horse-pond (where no horses came, any more than to Venice). He is conspicuous by his absence. It might have been said, "omitted by particular desire. Brathwaite has given us the fitting explanation, so far as it goes, in his reference to the $\delta \iota \alpha \beta o \lambda o s$ as the Spirit of Detraction : this it is that receives the whipping, as is due. He writes (on p. 33) of his "sharp tooth'd Satire," but he is not venomous. He rebukes the poetasters for their fantastical and mischievous perversions of language and thought, "transform'd from English to Italienate." By their indiscriminate adulation of the unworthy, for self-interest, he declares they " bring The Art of Poetry to Ballading." He knows well the price likely to be paid by any true Poet who dare to rebuke the vices of the Court,

XX

"As some have done, and have been mew'd up for 't." He hesitates not to speak his indignant scorn of those who act as poetic panders to luxury,

"As they runne still in that high-beaten way Of errour, by directing men amisse, Penning whole volumes of licentiousnesse, Descanting on my Ladies Rosie lip, Her Cinthian eie, her bending front, her trip, Her bodies motion, notion of her time, All which they weaue vp in a baudy Rime."

have been one John Tomkis, or Tomkins. R. Brathwaite's "Epigramme" speedily followed the publication of the play, to which it alludes. Milton's reference to the Cambridge performance of Trincalo is in his Apology for Smectymnuus, 1642.

Even in his address "To his Booke" he had glanced at the prevalent error of allowing rich and powerful offenders to escape unpunished, while those in lower condition were treated with severity.

"----let this be vnderstood, Great men though ill they must be stiled good, Their blacke is white, their vice is vertue made: But 'mongst the base call still a spade a spade. If thou canst thus dispense (my booke) with crimes, Thou shalt be hugg'd and honour'd in these times."

As Shakespeare puts it: "that in the Captain's but a choleric word, which in the Soldier were rank blasphemy." It may not improbably be, that the thought in Brathwaite's mind was to make the Devil the representative of evil-greatness: "spiritual wickedness in high places," and to hint, by his title, that he was not afraid of laying on the lash, if it were deserved, because of the dignity in station held by the culprit. No honest men need fear him, they are avowedly "out of the survey of his Strappado;" but those who prove "Recreant" by consorting with "the swartie miscreants of Lucifer," are fairly warned of his intentions.

We find little here of that strange perversion or confusion of ideas that meets us in all the art and literature of the middle-ages, and still survives to our day, by which the horror against sin and its embodiment in the Arch Spirit of Evil is joined with a sense of the ludicrous, prompting to jests and buffoonery, even to contemptuous scorn; as though we held it to be true, what Ben Jonson took as title for one of his Comedies, "The Devil is an Ass." Those dangerous tamperings with solemn thoughts, traversing them by daylight, shrinking appalled from them in darkness and solitude, were not besetting failings with Brathwaite. He was of healthier taste and sounder judgment. His "Ciuell Diuell" is an ensnaring wanton, whose place of resort and evil enticements are painted with marvellous power and distinctness; affording a companion picture to John Dickinson's finished portraiture of the downfall of "the faire Valeria," in his Greene in Conceipt, 1598, or Thomas Cranley's Amanda; or, The Reformed Whore, 1635. But it was not any inability to make a "righte merrie Ieste" on the subject of the Arch-enemy, that kept Brathwaite to more legitimate sources of humour; as any one can see who turns to p. 95, and reads the laughter-stirring tale, which Admetus used to relate in his hearing, whilst he sat roasting a crab-apple by the fire, on winter nights. It briefly shows the misery of a hen-pecked husband whose helpmate was "an arrant Deuill of her tongue," and how (after time-honoured custom) the poor man sought consolation in "a potte of nappy Ale:" how this prototype of Tam O'Shanter stayed too long at the ale-house, fortifying himself against the home-comforts of his wife's tongue, which he knew to be awaiting his return ; and how, instead of Alloway Kirk full of witches, he encountered what seemed to him the very Leader of that unholy revel. His absence of fear is accounted for by himself in words of wisdom :

xxii

"Good Spirit, if thou be, I need no charme, For well I know thou wilt not doe me harm: And if the Deuill; sure, me thou shouldst not hurt, I wed'd thy Sister, and am plagued for 't. The Spirit, well-approuing what he said, Dissolu'd to ayre, and quickly vanished."*

No less true in humour, and longer sustained, is the excellent poem "Vpon a Poets Palfrey, lying in Lauander, for the discharge of his Prouender," (p. 156). To be "laid in lauender" was a mild euphemism for being in pawn. With wit that tires neither its exhibitor nor the reader, he courses through a multitude of suppositions, incidentally repeating to us the cry of

* We well remember an ancient Kirk-yard in the north of Scotland, where-through a path ran straight from the publichouse to the minister's manse, often trodden, alas! by an irreproachable Mess-John, whom friends had vainly attempted to convert to ways of sobriety by serious advice, and even by that heaviest of trials, praying at him ! One night a well-intentioned clerical-brother disguised himself in a sheet, and awaited, beside a tomb-stone, the return home of the unsteady wanderer, in hope of alarming him into repentance and the Pledge. When fairly holding in view the tall white figure, which a struggling moon-beam made visible, the only ejaculation that expressed consciousness was the pathetic enquiry, "Oh, mon ! is it the general resurrection ? or are ye taking a daunder yer lane?" Nothing was left for it but the Presbytery Kirk-sessions, and their sentence of deposition.

xxiv

Shakespeare's Richard III., "A horse, a horse, a kingdom for a horse!" and the very line from Marlow's Tambourlaine which Pistol mocks, "Hallow, ye pamper'd Iades of Asia, what draw but thirty miles aday ?" Don Quixote's Rozinante, the Trojan Horse, Phaeton's borrowed coursers of the Sun, are brought in, with a snaffle, to trot before us. As the mother of the minotaur, Queen Pasiphæ, is mentioned, we might have expected to encounter Queen Semiramis; "that injured queen, by chroniclers so coarse, Has been accused, I doubt not by conspiracy, Of an improper friendship," &c. But no, we never mention her. The wonderful performing-horse of Banks the cunjuror (which was burnt, with its master, in Italy, because this cleverness was believed to be of magic), appears in the twelfth and fifteenth verses. The Pageants and religious moralities, from Adam and Eve to Noah and his ark, which were represented at Bartholomew-Fair, are glanced at. So are Duke Humphrey's dinner-less guests. This poem alone might make the volume precious to us.

In a Satyre, called "The Coni-borrowe," we find a palpable allusion to one of the characters in Shakespeare's Pericles, "the damned door-keeper" Boult. The public hangman is mentioned in the proverbial saying of "going to Heaven by Derick in a string :" there was a tune known about that time, with a burden "Take 'm, Derrick !" See our Bagford Ballads, (p.

778). Brathwaite's abhorrence of wantonness is spoken with a convincing earnestness, such as few writers have equalled. He uses strong language, but it is because he feels strongly and will not palter with the truth. Our only surprise is that he has not taken his place higher, in the ranks of poetic Satirists, as he deserved, while men inferior to him in command of words, and less impressed with an indignant scorn against uncleanness, are belauded, if not read, as though they were the masters of their art. The clearness, the colloquial English, the force and brilliancy of his style, at his best, merit the highest praise. This volume cannot fail to make thoughtful readers desirous of knowing more of Richard Brathwaite.

That the writer of such scathing rebukes of lustful dalliance should also be the author of some wanton trifling, as "A Marriage Song," can only be explained by our recollection of the tyranny of moods in destroying self-consistency, and especially by our making allowance for the warmth of the poetic temperament. One never can depend on these Satirists being entirely truthful. They have first revelled in iniquity, and then turn approvers or king's evidence, and bear witness against old associates to secure their own escape from punishment. No one knew this better than our greatest poet. When Jacques in the forest of Arden claimed the privilege of satirising whomsoever he would, to blow on them with "as large a charter as the wind," he made the banished Duke tell what would happen :—

xxvi

"Most mischievous foul sin in chiding sin; For thou thyself hast been a libertine, As sensual as the brutish sting itself; And all the embossed sores, and headed evils, That thou with license of free foot hast caught, Would'st thou disgorge into the general world."

Our author is singularly free from the worst vices of these ill-conditioned "censors of the age." He had never been so debauched with pleasures, and he never became so malignant in his vituperation, as most of the gang who assume the vile hangman's office for hangman's wages.

While there is such richness of allusion to contemporary matters in his pages, that scarcely one among them fails to yield something valuable to the student of antiquity, we are apt to forget the genuine sweetness and musical fluency of his best lyrics. The rich flow of his lines makes him pleasant reading, even on such comparatively dull subjects as his address to the Alderman of Kendall, or the companion poem To the Northern Sparks, the Cottoneers (in both of which, nevertheless, appear a multitude of ripe suggestions to cultivated students). We see in these latter the progenitors of those industrious communities at Wakefield, Bradford, and the other manufacturing towns of the North, whom Brathwaite knew well, and could bring before us both in their hours of steady labour at the loom, and in their wakes and revels, May-games on the green, with Robin Hood and Morris-dancers :

"One footing actively Wilson's delight, Descanting on this note, I have done what's right, Another ioying to be nam'd 'mongst them, Were made Men-fishers of poore fisher-men. The third as blith as any tongue can tell, Because he's found a faithfull Samuel. The fourth is chanting of his Notes as gladly, Keeping the tune for th' honour of Arthura Bradly.* The 5. so pranke, he scarce can stand on ground, Asking who'le sing with him Mal Dixon's round?" &cc.

There is poetic grace and daintiness of expression in the charming little lyric, (on p. 93,)

SUNG TO MAIDS' INCONSTANCY.

"Foolish I, why should I grieue To sustaine what others feele? What suppose, fraile women leaue Those they lou'd, should I conceale Comfort's rest, From my brest, For a fickle, brittle woman? Noe, Noe, Noe, Let her goe, Such as these be true to no man.

* See the whole available information on this subject gathered by the present writer in Choice Drollery re-print, 1876.

xxviii

xxix

"Long retired hast thou beene, Sighing on these barren rocks, Nor by sheepe nor shepheard seene, Now returne vnto thy flockes, Shame away, Doe not stay, With these mouing-louing women, They remoue From their loue ; Such as these doe oft vndoe men." &c.

So, too, with its own charm of music and deep affection, more quaint in form and expression, The funeral Elegy, (on pp. 242, 243,) has the true ring of poetry. And he who likes not "Admetus's Sonnet" is hard to please.

The breezy freshness of Browne's Pastorals fans our brow as we read that hearty song of The Woodman, Arthur Standish (pp. 168 to 172), with all its nice discrimination of timber and thicket greenery.

To some readers the so-called "Epigrams" descriptive of various characters, such as The Courtier, The Wooer, will commend themselves; a class of compositions then in fashion, and such as Brathwaite excelled in.* There is also work worth studying in his "Panegirick Embleame, intituled, Saint George for England." It has the tenderness and intricate lingering cadences of the old romances : as befitted days when knights and ladies were content to yield ungrudgingly their time to a perusal or recital of such tales of maiden's sorrow and knightly valour.

* "See his prose "Whimzies; or, A new Cast of Characters," 1631.

No more need we add, unless we were to annotate his every page, in commendation of this worthy, toolong neglected, but never quite-forgotten. We have not written half the praise we could have ventured, not a tenth part of his due, but those who read him without prejudice will find a hearty friend in Richard Brathwaite, fresh and wholesome, like this first day of Spring.

J. W. E.

MOLASH VICARAGE, KENT, March 21st, 1878.

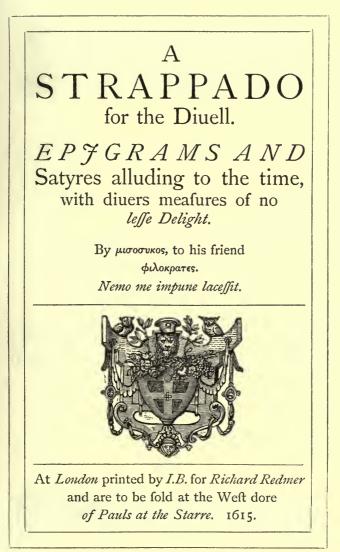

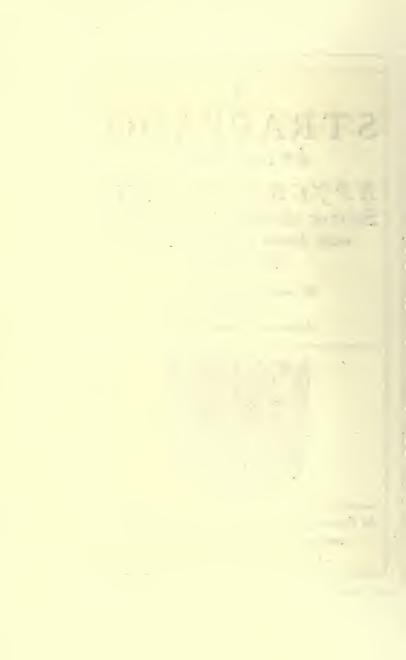

XXX

The Authors Anagram.

RICHARDE BRATHWAITE.

Vertu hath bar Credit.

This Ile anow, (for it is I that faid it) If Vertue have no coine, she has no Credit.

TO THE WORTHIlie efteemed the true Character of a Generous difposition, Sir THOMAS GAINSFORD Knight, his Vertues endeered Admiror, witheth fulneffe of content in the Dedication of thefe his Anagrams extracted from his Name, and concording with his Nature.

Thomas Gainsforde. Anagram So fame doth raign.

SO Fame doth raigne with Anagram's fo fit As if that Nature had inuented it: For he that knowes thy Vertues and thy Name, Will fay all raigne in thee, all ring thy Fame.

> Thomas Gainfford. Anagram

Shade t' Honours game.

A pale for shelter of her game is made, And thou to Honours game art made a shade, Thy Huntsup's Vertue, and thy Beagle grace, Which (well in winde) hath still the game in chace. To

To his much honoured and endeered Meccenas (the expressiv's Character of a generous Spirit) iudicious approver of best-meriting Poesie, Guerdoner of Arts, cherischer of Wittes, and ferious Protectour of all free-borne Studies, Mr. THOMAS POSTHVMVS DIGGS, the Author humbly dedicates himselfe, his Time-suting Epigrams with the vse of his divinely importing Anagram

Anagramma.

Thomas Posthumus Digges.

Though time paffe, God fumms.

In Anagramma Distichon.

H Ow well thy Anagram with truth it runs, Though time pas nere fo faft, yet God ftill fums.

> Or thus. Hopes iffu moft dem' gag't. A 4 An Another Anagram.

Two verses including the Anagram.

PVblique and priuate men in young and ag't, on whom moft hope is, the we deem moft gagt.

Annexed.

At you (faire mirrour) aime I; you'r my fcope, Much are you gag't vnto your Contries hope.

To the gentle Reader.

F I giue thee a deferuing Title (Gentle Reader) no queftion but thou wilt expreffe thy felfe in thy cenfure: th'art no wri-neck critick, politick informer of States, deprauer of wel intended lines, nor maligner of others labours: Bee thine owne prefident in the furueigh of thefe diftempered Epigrammes; and therein thou may performe the part of an honeft man: cancell the bill of errours, or chalke them on, & they fhal ferue to make vp a greater volume for next impreffion. If thou bee gentle (as I tearme thee) and and haft fenfe, thou wilt supplie many defects, committed in the Preffe by the Authors abfence. Be honeft ftill and thou art out of the fwing of this ftrappado: if thou play Recreant (by conforting with the fwartie mifcreants of Lucifer) the Author hath vowed hee will play Arch-Pyrate with thee, tie thee like a Gallie-flaue to the Maft of his Malu-Sperauza, and ferrie thee ouer into Tartarie.

Farewell.

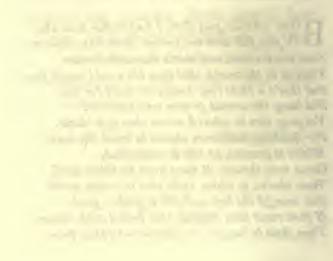

To his BOOKE.

B Ooke whither goes thou, I had rather have thee To flay flill with me, for my Booke may fave me: Save me, its true, and that's the caufe I crave Thou'de to the world, that thou the world might fave; But that's a taske (my booke) too hard for thee, Bid hang the woreld fo thou wilt fave me: Yet pray thee be advis'd whom thou doft checke, For fpeaking truth may chance to break thy necke. Which to prevent, let this be vnderflood, Great men though ill they muft be flied good, Their blacke is white, their vice is vertue made: But 'mongft the bafe call ftill a fpade a fpade; If thou canst thus difpenfe (my booke) with crimes, Thou fhalt be hugg'd and honour'd in thefe times.

CODE AN INCORE.

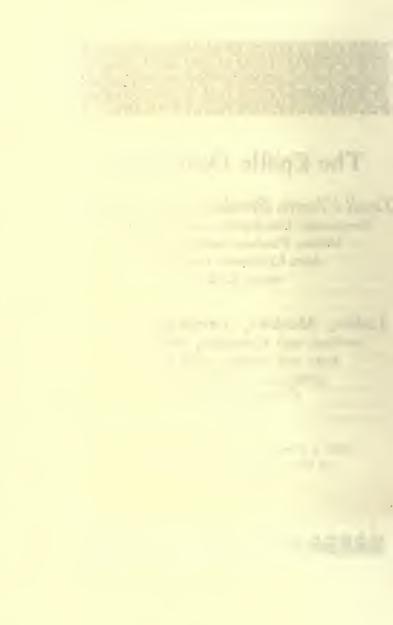

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

To all V furers, Broakers, and Promoters, Sergeants, Catch-poles, and Regraters, Vihers, Panders, Suburbes Traders, Cockneies that haue manie fathers.

Ladies, Monkies, Parachitoes, Marmofites, and Catomitoes, Falls, hightires and rebatoes, falfe-haires, periwigges, monchatoes: graue Gregorians, and Sheepainters.

Send I greeting at aduentures, and to all fuch as be euill, my ftrappado for the Diuell.

Vpon the Errata.

Gentlemen (humanum eft errare) to confirme which polition, this my booke (as many other are) hath his fhare of errors; fo as I run ad prælum tanquam ad prælium, in typos quaft in fcippos: but my comfort is if I be ftrappadoed by the multiplicitie of my errors, it is but anfwerable to my title: fo as I may feem to diuine by my ftile, what I was to indure by the preffe. Yet know iudicious difposed Gentlemen, that the intricacie of the copie, and the abfence of the Author from many important proofes were occafion of thefe errors, which defects (if they bee fupplied by your generous coniuence and curtuous difpolition, I doe vowe to fatisfie your affectionate care with a more ferious furueigh in my next impreffion.

Errata.

P Age 2 line 23 for Pine read Vine. p. 10. l. 20 alone wanting. p. 16. l. 13. for fenfelefneffe read fenfeleffe. p. 15. l. 27. for vainelike, r. vainly. p. 26. l. 11. for both, forfooth fo delete. p. 25 l. 25. for wherefore, read wherefore. p. 43. l. 22. for fhirts r. fheets, for weaues, r. woes infra p. l. 25. p. 48. l. 4. r. cloze. ilid for backe r. barke. p. 266. l. 23. for miftruft, r. inftruft. for curfe read fcarfe.

For other errors as the mifplacing of commaes, colons, and periods (which as they are in euerie page obuious, fo many times they inuert the fence) I referre to your difcretion (iudicious gentle-men) whofe lenity may fooner fupply them, then all my induftrie can portray them.

TO THE TRVE DIS-

couerer of fecrets Mounfieur Bacchus, fole Soueraigne of the Iuy-bush, Master-gunner of the pottle-pot ordinance, prime founder of Red-lattices, cheerer of the hunger-staru'd Muses, and their thred-bare followers, singuler Artist in pewter language, and an obseruant linguist for anon anon Sir. His dere Canary-Bird, wisheth, red-eyes,

His dere Canary-Bird, wilheth, red-eyes, dropfie-legges, and all other accoutrements befitting.

B Ottle-nos'd Bacchus with thy bladder face, To thee my Mufe comes reeling for a place : And craues thy Patronage ; nor do I feare, But my poore fragments fhall be made of there, For good reuerfions by thy forambling crew, That belch, and reade, and at each enteruiew Of a fharpe temper'd line, commend the vaine, Digeft it, and then rift it vp againe ; But know thou cup fhot god, what is expreft, Within thefe Pages doe deferue the beft Of thy light-headed Shamroes, nor 's my tutch For fuch as loue to take a cup too-much. No, no my lines (though I did feeme to ftand, And begge a poore protection at thy hand,)

Shall

Shall liue in fpite of Time, for Time shall fee The curtaine of her vices drawne by me ; And though portraide by a leffe art-full fift, Yet he that limm'd them is a Satyrift, For th' lines he writes (if ought he write at all) Are drawne by inke that's mixed most with gall. Yea, he was borne, euen from his infancie, To tell the world her fhame, and bitterly To taxe those crimes which harbour now and then Within the bofomes of the greateft men. "Yea, nought I doe but I againe will doe it, "Nor ought will write, but I will answer to it : Yet would I not, great Bacchus, have thee thinke My Mule can into that obligion finke, As to become forgetfull fo of thee, (For fo fhe might vnthankfull feeme to be As neuer to record thy worthy Name Since I confelle from thee that fpirit came, --Which first inspir'd my Mule (by thee express) For when the fpoke the leaft, the wrot the beft. Yea, thou it was, (and fo Ile euer hold,) That quickned me and made me fpeake more bold ; By that rare quinteffence drawne from the pine, Or from those fluent Hogges-head pipes of thine, And I doe thanke thee : yet thus much Ile fay," For any kindneffe fhowne me anie waie, By thee, or thy attendants, I may fweare Not any one did euer yet appeare : Nay, I could fay (and truly too) far more I neuer ran ten shillings on thy skore,

2

Which

Which may feem ftrange, that I which am fo grown Into acquaintance, and to thee well knowne : "Should in thy booke haue fuch a diffidence. As not be chalkt for want of ready pence ; Nay, there's another reafon I could fhew, Which might infer that thou doft duty owe To men of our profession, and its this ; (If my conceipt make me not thinke amilie.) Tell me, Where hadft thou Iuie-bufh, fay where? Which as thine ancient liv'rie thou doft weare ; That garland fure me-thinks that I fhould know it, From th' Temples fure of fome pot hardy Poet; Who, caufe he had not wherewithall to pay, VVas forc't to leaue his Garland, or to ftay Till fome of 's Patrons pittied his eftate : But he, poore man, cleere out of hope of that Hauing difcuft it often in his minde, Did think't more fit to leaue his wreath behinde, Then into fuch apparent danger fall, And fo did vnto one of th' Drawers call To tell thee, if thou would'ft be fo content, He would engage his Iuie-ornament ; Which thou being glad of, for thy private vfe Wore it thy felfe, and cheat'd the Poet thus. Now doeft thou thinke, that we can brooke to haue One of our fort thus iniur'd by a flaue, Without all fatisfaction : Bacchus no, Vfe 't to thy groomes, we'le not be baffelt fo. Make reftitution of thy bufh againe, And tie thy wreath about the Poets braine :

Of

Or fatisfie his damage in fome fort, " Or be thou fure that thou fhalt answer for't. But thou wilt lightly weigh fuch threats as thefe, And fay thou canft bring vs vpon our knees By th' power of thy commaund : true thou canft fo, Yet (bleere ey'de Bacchus) I would have thee know That we do fo efteeme thy power and all Thy followers, we'le vent thee 'gainft the wall : Yea euen the kennell shall a witnesse be. Of the fmall refpect which we do beare to thee. Refigne then what thou oweft, or forbeare, To taxe our credits when our skore's not cleere. For well may'ft thou forbeare both them and me, Since thou doft owe vs more, then we owe thee. Thou know'ft it Bacchus (if fo thou wilt knowe it) That garland which thou weares, it was a Poet That first empaund it, and thou like a Iewe VVilt not reftore to him what is his due. But thou wilt anfwer (as I know thou may) Yes, I imagine what tis thou canft fay : " Bacchus cares not for outward fignes a rush, " Good wine needs not the hanging of a bush. Doft not thou vizzard-fac't ingratefull Elfe ? Yes, for want of a bufh thou'd hang thy felfe. And caper like a zuinglian (ô my malice Burfts out against thee) titted vnder the gallowes. For tell me how fhould men diftinguish thee ? Thoul't fay by thy fire-fparkling phifnomie, Those wink-apipes of thine, those ferret eies, Those bag-pipe cheeks, those special qualities

4

Thou

Thou art endew'd with : true by th'first th'art known, But for thy qualities thou haft not one To glory in : for fpeeches ornament Anon, anon fir :--peutor complement Is all thou canft, and this, thou knoweft is fuch. As th'Iay or Parrat they can doe as much; But I am loath to taxe each crime of thine, For I do know thou lou'ft the Mules nine, And they loue thee, yet it is fit their vs'd With more refpect, then to be once abus'd By any apron-prentice that thou haft : Yea, fit it is not they fhould be out-fac't By fuch vnletterd Animals as thefe, But reuerence the Muses on their knees, For what be thefe attend thee, fuch as loft Their tongue to gaine two or three words at moft, As for example neate and briske, and then Anon, anon fir, welcome gentlemen. And is it fit that fwads of fuch defert Should ftay the very quinteffence of art For a non-payment ? or make Sergeants ftand In a croffe-lane to laie vnhallowed hand On Albions Mercuries? no, its not fit That Hypocrenes pure riuelings of wit, Should have their ftreame with honour doubled) By fuch bafe tenter-hooks once troubled. Let this be then amended (and with hafte) Left fome of these professors should be plac't, Before thy prohibition come to ftay Thy will-for in, they'le hardlie get awaie.

But

5

6

But if I heare thee Bacchus after this That thou arrefts but any one I wifh Thou fhould'ft exempt I will reuenged be Ere many daies, of fome of thine or thee. And thanks vnto my Genius (as I craue it) Without invention further now I have it. And thus it is : Ile to the Peuterer To make thy quart pots greater then they were ; And fo condition with him, as't may be Thou wilt confesse one day I begar'd thee : Or if I cannot by my meanes intreate Thy pottle-pots for to be made more great Then th'order is, or th'Citties ftampe allowes, I hope I fhall preuaile with fome of those that 1- 21 Who are appointed by their charge to know,.... Whether thy pots be fealed yea or no, That fuch as are not feal'd they would reueale them, And not take bribes in private to conceale them : Or if this will not ferue, I will deuife How to bring th'potts vnto a larger fize; Which if they do neglect but to performe, . According to that Nature and that forme They are prefcrib'd, then on default they shall Make prefently a forfeiture of all, (Which goods confifcate for their great abufe, May afterward redound vnto the vfe Of all fuch noble skinkers (by confession) As were deceiv'd by men of this profession ; But this's not all Ile doe: Bacchus shall knowe His naprie-drawers shall not end it fo.

Surueighers

Surueighers fhall be-gett (and well may be) (For worfer trades have fought monopolye; And rais'd their flate by't) which fhall flrictly take Examination, whether you do make Your pottles to be bruis'd, bough'd, crusht, & bent Vpon fet purpose and for this intent, That you thereby (which is a common crime) Might fill your crazie pots with leffer wine, For leffer will they hold, through your deceit, Being drawne in and made by you more ftraite: Yet haue I left the Coopers all this while, Which I do know have fome art to beguile. And therefore, if all will not ferue ; Ile feeke And bribe them too, to make your veffels leeke. Yea, befide this (know Bacchus) I'ue a meane. Which put in practice will vndoe thee cleane, And thus I lay my project : Ile expresse What motiues there be of licentioufneffe. Within thy brothel clofures, and with-all Complaine of thy partitions, how the fall Of many a fimple Virgine (though fhee's loath, To do't poore-wench) coms from a painted cloath, A curtaine, or fome hanging of like fort, (for't. Which done god-wot, they'ue caufe to curfe thee And that this might better preuented be, I will prefer petition inftantly, That thou nor none of thine fhould fuffer thence, (for to auoide this inconvenience) Any of different fexes being but payres, To goe in private manner vp the ftaires : B 4 And

7

8

And this I know (if that my aime be right, VVill goe well nie to ouerthrow thee quite. If none of thefe will doe, yet fure I am There is a creature call'd the Puritan. Who'le ferret thee, and by a ftrict furueigh Fine thee for bouzing on the Sabboath day, VVhich if they finde, the Righteous they will curfe Though their example it be ten times worfe. But I would have thee to represse all this. VVhich thou fhalt do by doing what I wifh, And that with reafon, which (as I have favd it) Is but to give to our profession credit : They'le pay the man, and if the world goe hard, VVith them at this time, yet they'le afterward, Regratulate thy loue (paying th'old skore) VVhich paide they will make bolde to run on more. For tell me Bacchus, though the world appeare To learned men as if no learning were : And that the golden age (not as it was) Smiles on the filken foole, or golden Affe ; Yet time will come (yea now it doth begin To fhew it felfe (as former times have been) VVhen wife Minerua shall no honour lacke, For all the foole, whofe honour's on his backe. But I shall stagger Bacchus if I stay Longer with thee, therefore Ile packe awaie Vnto thy fifter Ceres :- I have fayd -Onely looke to thy plate, for all is paide.

To the Queene of Haruess, daughter and heire to Saturne, and Ops, Goddesse of the Corne sheafe, Ladie Soueraignenesse of the three Vales Esam, Beuar, and White-horse, Inwentres of the Sith Sickle, and weeding-Hooke: much honoured by the Reede, Corne Pipe, and Whissle; and with all observance attended by Hobnaile and his company.

Her Deities admirer wisheth many a feasonable Haruest.

T Aile fruitfull Ladie, cheerer of our time, Rare in thy bewtie, in thy ftate diuine, Ripener of Harueft, thou it is whole birth Yields full encreafe vnto the fertile earth : Thou art that cheering mother that renues (dewes. The Plow-mans hope, and giues their toile those Which makes them happie, may my Poems pleafe Thy honourd felfe, that glads vs with encreafe : Yet in my mirth I cannot but repine At that vnhappie ackward loffe of thine, That thou which euer haft been debonaire. Faire in thy felfe, making our fields as faire, With thy ender'd refpect, fhould be exilde, Of due content, by loofing of thy childe, Thy heart, thy hope, thy loue, and thy delight, Thy deare Proferpina, whole vowe is plight

Vnto

10

Vnto, alaffe I cannot fpeake it well, That black-blacht-blabber-lipt foule Prince of hell. Yet be contented, manie one there bee. Yea I know fom which may lament with thee For their straide daughters, who I much doe feare Are lodged now, or will be lodged there. Laffe it is nothing for maides now adaies For which of them (though modeft) hath not ftraies, In youth, in age, which straying I doe call, Dotage in maides, and that is worft of all. How manie haue wee in this error fwerud, Who in themfelues have iufty wel deferud. That punifhment thy daughter first regainde, 'Las I have known them, though they feem containd In modeft bounds, yet thus much I will fay, Thy daughter was vnchaft, & fo were they. And (pray thee Ceres) credit me in this, Though my proceeding was not to my wifh, Yet this to thy due comfort I must tell, Thy daughter doth not liue in Hell Without acquaintance, yea I know there are, Though they in fumptuous raiment and in fare Seeme to excell the worthies of our Land, Yet being iuftly poized vnder hand, They are as neere to Pluto and his heire, As if those perfons that leffe gorgeous were, May I fpeake more, for I am in a vaine, To cull ftrange things out of a ftragling braine, That there's no wench truly ingenious, Wittie by nature, or ambitious

In her conceipt, but that the time will come, That fhe will wander full as farre from home, As ere thy deare Proferpina distraide, Transform'd from beauty of a louely maide, To be a drudge ('laffe I am forc't to tell) Vnto the bafe-borne Skinkird bred in Hell. Doe I not know thee Ceres? yes, I know Far more of thee, then I intend to fhew In publique eie: 'Laffe I doe know thy worth, To be the fruitfull Mother of the earth, Albions faire-Fostermother, yea that Queen, That makes a hopefull Harueft to be feene. Within our flourie Fields : if I might fay, What I in due refpect am bound alwaie For to expresse I might example thee, To be the glorie of our progenie; Honour of ages, and fucceffe of time, Errecting to thy felfe that noble fhrine, Which nere fhall be defaced by time or age, The beft of labour in our Pilgrimage. Then Ceres let thy daughter work, for one Thou art in due refpect admir'd alone To be the foueraigneffe of Albions Ile, Who when retired braines doe fleep the while, Shalt flew thy felfe worthy a facred power, Though thy vaine daughter play in hell the whore. Yea fit it is, and futing to her birth, She fhould play baud in hell plaid whore on earth.

. .

II

To the Amarous Queene of Delights, Sole Empressed of loue-ficke Bedlams, profes'd patronessed to all young Letchers, Foundressed of Midnight-Reuels, Sentinell to many a crackt Maidenhead, and sole Benefactor to all lascinious Nouices; Best habilimented by her Coach drawne with foure Turtles, bearing for her armes a Pricke in the midst of a Center, with this Motto;

Pungimur in Medio.

And on the other fide a woman-captiue (instanced in Penthisika) with this word, Vincitur a victo, victor.

Her much Endered and affectionate Paliurus wisheth manie long delightful night, Mars his prefence, Vulcans absence, much good sport without discouerie, and many yeeres yet to continue her husbands Liuery.

^a Bacchus and Ceres if they be away,
 ^b Small good doe I looke for, may Venus fay.

CHerry-lipt Venus with thy dimpled Chin, Who by our Letchers, honourd ftill haft bin : For a braue trading damfell, though't may feeme, By my neglect of thee, that I haue cleane · Carpit enim vires paulatim vritq. videndo. Femina. Virg.

Res vulgaris amor, semel insanimius omnes.

Defcar-

Defcarded thee and thine, yet thou fhalt know it ; Venus hath fome aliance with a Poet. And that a neere one too: for pray thee fay, Who can expresse thy bewty anie way, So well as they ? and though they onely write, having nere hap to come to more delight ; Yet art thou much endeared to their Art, Though they can fay nought for the practick part: Yet mongft our Albion Sibils that are more, In number far, then merit, wit, or power. Some I doe know, euen of the pregnant'ft men, That love to trade with Venus now and then. And this the caufe why they obferue that vfe, (As I have heard) for to enflame their Muse: And fome I could produce, had their defire ; For they, their Mufe, and all were on a fire : More could I write to touch thee neerer'th quick, But as thou loues those ftroakes are short & thick. So I defire the very fame to be In writing out that is concerning thee.

13

Honora.

An Heroycke Embleme vpon the Warriour called HONORA.

Ara, Tantara, Honours fignall come, VVhofe beft of Muficke is the warlike Drumme, Come braue Tyndarian fpirit, heare thy glorie, Shrouded too long in pitchie darke, whofe ftorie, Shall fhine and fhew it felfe more faire, more bright, Then chaft Latona on the fableft night. Now art thou much admird by every eie, Though lately vaffald to captivitie. Now art thou fhowne to be a Monument, Of former glorie, and an ornament, Fit for the eare of Kings, now art thou one, Highly effeemed, that was of late as none. Now canft thou fhew thy merit and defert, To be derived from a royall heart. Not chafd with perfumes, like a Carpet Knight, That cannot fight but in his Ladies fight. Not fick ofth fashions, (like this amorous frie Of Nouice, who nere knew Enemie) Saue their difdainefull Miftres : not enthrald To loue, for loue thou knowft not how its cald. What file it has, or what be louers charmes, Saue that pure loue which thou doft beare to Armes. Not feruile to each apifh complement, Saue Honours feruice, and VVarres management. Not flaue to Fortune, nor engagd to fate, But heire to refolution, an eftate More eminent and glorious to thy felfe, Then all the mifers-Mammons mouldred-pelfe. Not vaine-like proud of Titles, but haft Art, To make thy waie to Honour by Defert. Not gage to proftitution, for the name Of Souldiour hate fuch an ignoble flaine.

Not

Honora.

Not lure to lucre, but doft make thy blood, An inftrument vnto thy countries good : Not in appearance, or in outward fhow, To feem to know what thou didft neuer know. Not humorous, occasioning offence, But with pure valour mixing patience ; That two reduc't to one, one drawen from two, Might make thee apt to fpeake, & prompt to doe. Long haft thou flept, and fome did thinke it ill To wake thee, but to let thee fleepe on ftill. But how can refolution lie inter'd Alas how far haue vulgar iudgements er'd? To thinke thee fenfelefnes? No, thou didft but winke, For to obferue what other men would thinke Of thy retired filence, now thou haft Rub'd ore thy gummie eies, & ruunes as fast To thy intendements forct from coaft to coaft. As willing to redeeme what thou haft loft. Hallow amaine, downe by the flowrie vale-Of honour and renowne difplay thy faile, Trample on Bastard-greatnesse, bruite their shame, That are effeemed onely great in name, Without demerit, tell them worth fhould be Drawn from our felues, not from our familie. Bid them wipe of that painting from their cheeke, Its too effeminate and bid them feeke. Actions that feeme them better : its not amber, Sleeking, or chafing in a Ladies chamber, Phantaftick humors, amorous conceipts, Fashion inuentors sinne feducing baits,

16

What

of Brittaine.

What fuch a Mounfeyr wore, or what Tyres be Of eminent requeft in Italie. No, no, our perfum'd Gallants now muft looke, Like to the fonnes of Valour, fmer'd with fmoke, Steeled with fpirit, arm'd with beft of youth, Directly planted 'fore a Cannons mouth. Shake not (my dapper Courtier) though thou heare Nought but the voice of thunder euery where : Or if the noife of armes breed in thee feare. (No leffe then death) go on and ftop thine eare? Bouge not a foot (or if thou feare to kill) Winke, and then fay, thou murders gainft thy will. How likeft thou this? This is no camp for loue, Nor muft thy wreath be heere a Ladies gloue. Anticke and apifh fashions will not ferue, In this enobled field, fuch as deferue, By a peculiar merit shall receive The Guerdon of their Valour, and in Graue · Shall finde a liuing monument, which men Admiring much, shall ever honour them. And is not this a nobler monument, Then fpend our time in fruitleffe complements. Spend a whole age in making of a legge, Or feeking how fome office we may begge. Trading for vndeferued Honour, got By feruile meanes, and by the fimpleft fot, That knowes not Honours effence, O may I Rather then be fo Honor'd wifh to dye In the obfcureft manner, that when Time Shall fhroud my afhes in a homely fhrine,

Some

Honora.

18

Some earthy vrne, yet may my memorie Live without reach of enuie after me. Sacred Bellona, valours choiceft Saint, For now by thee flie we vnto our tent. Infuse true refolution in the minde Of thy professors, that their fpirits may finde What difference there is in honours fight, Twixt a good Souldier and a carpet-Knight. His perfume's powder, and his harmonie Reports of Cannons, for his brauerie, Barded with steele and Iron, for the voice, Of amorous Ganimedes, the horrid noife Of clattering armour, for a Downie bed The chill cold ground, for pillow to their head, Tinckt with muske Rofes. Target and their fhield, For gorgeous Roomes, the purprife of the field, For nimble capring, Marching, for the tune Of mouing conforts, ftriking vp a drumme, For dainties, hunger ; thus is honour fed, With labour got, and care continued. Can this content my Courtier? yes, it may, VVhen his laciuious night and fruitles day, His manie idle howers employed worfe, (Though better deem'd) then fuch whofe vagrant Incurs a penal cenfure ; fhall be paft, (courfe And he with whip of confcience throughly lafh't, Shall bid adue to Ladie vanitie To Courts applaufe, to humors phantafie, To honours vndeferu'd, to parafites, To fashions-brocage, and to all delights.

VVhich

Honora.

Which reape no fruit, no guerdon, nor reward, Saue care on earth, repentance afterward : VVhere Iuffice oft is forc't from her intent. Goodnesse being onely cause of punishment. VVhere violence (fo ftrong be great men growne) Makes right fuppreft', and iuftice ouerthrowne. VVhere finnes in cloth of Tiffue faire defcri'de, Make that wife Sages Axiome verifi'de. " A great mans foe oft by experience proues, " Of all that be, no thunder like to Ioues. Heere Magistrates are clad in violet, Becaufe pure Iuftice they doe violate. Here vice is mounted, vertue liues defpif'd, The worft efteem'd, the better meanely priz'd. Corruption rides on foote-cloth, (fome auerre) And vpright dealing fhee does lackie her. Honour's afraide of Sergeants, merits fad, And lives as one without obferuance had. VVifdom's out of requeft, for temperance, Shee's neuer knowne but in a Moris daunce. And purple Iuftice feldom's feene to paffe, To any Court, but riding one an Affe. VVhat then but valour fhould fupport the State, And make a Realme by vice growne defolate. See her owne fhame, and in her fhame conceiue, The bleft memorial of an happie graue. "On then with honour, let the vfurer Made ftiffe with plenty, feele the flock of war, And tremble, fearing leaft' fhould be his lot, To loofe by warre what his opprefiion got.

C 2

Let

20

Let the prophane contemner of Gods power Be mou'd by terrour, let the Paramour, Glaz'd with a shamelesse fore head leave her sinne, The youthfull Prodigall, those nets hee's in. Let the prodigious state-engrosser feele, What harme h'as done vnto the Common-weale. Let th'aspiring birth of Dathan fee, The end of them, and their confpiracie. Let all lafciuious Minions hence reclaime. Their odious liues, and put on robes of fhame. Let publique Haxfters (now the moft of all) That in their heat, would quarrell for the wall, Stand to their Tacklings, let both youth and age, Show diffinct worths in diffant Equipage. Lead on Honora, that in time report, May make a Campe-Knight gracious in the Court. So nobleft minds in beft of Actions flowne. May challenge Honour when it is their owne.

Vpon the Generall Sciolifts or Poettasters of Britannie.

A Satyre.

Ome Arethufe come, for nere had we, At any time a greater need of thee. No Lawrell now, but Nettle's beft to grace Our Laureat Poet : fee his vncouth face, Vnapt for poefie : his ftrange difguife, Onely addreft (in Verfe) to Temporize : Now Parafites proue Poets, and express Their oyly workes : for what is more or leffe

Dilated

Dilated on, is confecrate to men, That are the greateft : O what need is then, To thee (deere Arthule) that didft frame, A Poet to the nature of his name? No time-obferuing fmooth-fac'd fycophant, No ftrange conceited Affe whofe Element Is to infinuate vnder the fhade Of a great Mounfeyrs elbow, thour't prou'd Iade To thy profession, not a faffron band, But like a roaring boye, can make thee ftand And yeeld obferuance to him : filly foole, That Artleffe idiots fhould bring to fchoole, The beft of Mufes, thou that once waft borne. Not as our great Acteons, to the horne Of their difhonour, (being of ioy bereft) Leauing to others what themfelues have left. (Worfe by degrees then was that Phæbus Car, Which Phaeton by rafh attempts did marre : And cleere diffolues) laffe fee thy Trophies torne, Thy ftatues razed : and that Mount forlorne Which first posses the Muses : now no wreath Can be hung vp to memorize the death Of any great man, why for vertues due, Bids euery Poet (in his verfe) fpeake true Of fuch as are deceafed : its true, who then Speaking no more then truth, can praife fuch men, As rather were then liu'd ? being, but not In reall effence, las what fame is got By fuch as write of these (whose only good) Is to auerre they were of Noble bloud.

C 3

But

2 I

22

But fo much difproportion'd to their name, As what thy feem'd, they feldome were the fame. The fame; O noe, their garifh ornament, Their wanton guife, their Loue-ficke complement, Their ftrange diffractions, their deformed ftate, Transform'd from English to Italienate, Expresse fmall comfort to a Poets penne, Which onely fhould delight in fhewing them Vnto the worlds eye, whofe fame fucceedes, And makes them Noble by Heroicke deedes, Drawen from the line of Honour : but how farre Seeme Poets in thefe latter times to erre? Who write not for refpect, or due efteeme, Had to their owne profession, but to gaine The fauour of a great one, this it is, Giues priuiledge to men that doe amiffe : Such be our ranke of Poets now adayes, As they adorne th'Immerited with praife Aboue defert. Hence is it that we bring The Art of Poetry to Ballading. Hence is it, that the Courtier may intend A ftrange pretended project for no end, Saue to augment's expence, a fuites begun, Which makes a filly Farmer quite vndone, Without all hope of composition : l'affe That fuch transgreffions should fo freely passe, Without controulement. Many we have heere, That can compose their Verse, but in a sphere So different to the time, as they defcry Their want of braines to each iudicious eve.

Yea

of Brittaine.

Yea fome I know are Poets in this time Who write of fwains, might write as well of fwine, For th' profit of their labours is fo fmall, As t'were farre better not to write at all. Then to confume fuch pretious time in vaine, About a fruitlesse, and defertlesse straine : Better indeed : when in their Makers fight, They must accomptants be of what they write, Whofe eyes be purer, and extension beare, Aboue th'Dimension of a common sphere. Yet ranke I not (as fome men doe fuppofe) These worthlesse five amongst the laies of those Time-honour'd Shepheards (for they ftill fhall be) As well they merit) honoured of mee, Who beare a part, like honeft faithfull fwaines, On witty Wither neuer-withring plaines, (feru'd. For these (though seeming Shepheards) have de-To have their names in lafting Marble caru'd : Yea this I know I may be bold to fay, Thames ner'e had fwans that fong more fweet than they. It's true I may auow't, that nere was fong, Chanted in any age by fwains fo young, With more delight then was perform'd by them, Pretily fhadow'd in a borrowed name. And long may Englands Thefpian fprings be known "By louely Wither and by bonny Browne, Whileft folid Seldon, and their Cuddy too, Sing what our (Swaines of old) could neuer doe. Yea I do hope, fith they fo well can write, Of Shep-heards fport, and of the fields delight.

C 4

That

24

That when they come to take a view of th' Court, (As fome haue done) and haue bin mew'd vp for't, They'l tell her freely, (as full well they may) That in their Iudgements, after due furuay, Of th' Court & th' Cottage, they may well maintain, Vices in the Court, but vertues in the Swaine ; And happy be those Authors which doe giue Vertue and vice their titles, they shall live In fpite of Enuie, when fuch men as teach That fuch be onely vertuous as be rich, Shall lye inter'd where fame fhall neuer finde them, For fuch doe feldome leave a name behind them. Laffe they must dye and perifh, fo must we, Nor can we gaine ought of eternity : Saue that we liue, Oh then how bleft are they That fpend their life in weighing of their daies. But of professants, which compose their fong To a ftrange defcant ! this Ile fay they wrong Flowrie Parnaffus, where fuch vfed to be. As in themfelues made one fet company. Thefe fung not what they knew not, but in Verfe, What time had taught them they vfe to rehearfe, And to reduce it to one perfect forme, Striuing by proper figures to adorne Ech worke, ech composition : but lasse now How farre's that alteration ? where we know Left that we write, adding to our eftate (Begg'd meerely) by a great mans Dedicate. Heere is no fubftance, but a fimple peece Of gaudy Rhetoricke : Which if it pleafe, Yeelds th' Author dear-contentment : thus we ftraine The Mufes Text for a peculiar gaine Vnto our felues : hence is it vice abides, (And lording-like in filken foot-cloath rides.) Hence is it Land-lords make their tenants flaues: Hence is it wafte-goods ope their fathers graues : Hence is it Mammonifts adore their golde : Hence is't the impious to perdition folde: Hence Sacriledge a priuiledge obtaines : Hence th' fneking Lawyer by his Clyent gaines : Hence th' Politician, what fo ere befall, Will to his trade and fhew a Machiuell. Hence imposts rife extortions violence, Graced by men that haue most eminence. (it) Hence Sergeants walk vnfröted (though they know No friend is worfe then Sergeant to a Poet. Hence painted faces (like ill wine in caske) Shrow'd their deform'd complexions vnder maske : Hence curious Courtiers, gorgeoufly arrayd, Weare more vpon their backe then ere was paide : Hence th' baudie Pandor, feruile to his whore, And hence the Baude that keeps the traders dore ; Hence bafe informers take their borrowed light, Liuing like Owles that vfe to flie by night : Hence wanton Prodigals that fpend their ftate, And 'gin repentance when it is too late. Hence young and old, hence each in their degree, Challenge to them a due Monopolie. O how Mineruas temple's now difgrac't, By th'skum of Poetry! fhe that was plac't

Yeelds

25

Once

Once like th' Ephefian Queene in a pure fhrine Of honour and delight, now's forc't to pine. And languish in her bewty, being deprest, By fuch men moft, whom fhe fufpecteth left. Vnpiniond Mules (fuch as nere could flie) Further then vnplum'd birds now preffe as high As Eagles; which by the Colour you may know, As eminent and cleere as Flaccus Crow : These steale selected flowers from others wit, And yet proteft their nature brookes not it, They are (for both) fo inuented by their art. Making their pen the difplayer of their heart. They brooke no Brocage, yet has workes in preffe, VVhich they are guiltleffe of : but this were leffe, VVorthy reproofe, if in their gleaned lines, Like our age Criticks they would curbe thefe times For petulancie : but fo vaine be they, As they runne still in that high-beaten way Of errour, by directing men amille, Penning whole volumes of licentioufneffe, Defcanting on my Ladies Rofie lip, Her Cinthian eie, her bending front, her trip, Her bodies motion, notion of her time, All which they weaue vp in a baudy Rime. For fince there's no obferuance, Accent neither (Sith fence and accent feldome goe together.) O what afperfions doe thefe lay on her, VVho beares the onely natiue character. Of her deere iffues merit : fhee. I meane. VVithout whofe nourifhment we had not been.

She

of Brittaine.

She without whole embrace, the folid earth, Had quite interr'd the honour of our birth : She without whom we have no biding place, No manfion, no repofe: fhe by whofe grace We are inhabitants, planted in reft, Sucking pure milke out of her tender breft. She whofe our Guardian gouerning our ftate Shoring our weakneffe, arming vs 'gainft fate, Guiding our path-leffe paffage, brething life Into our dulnesse: midiating strife Becaufe (a peacefull mother) chering vs With folace, when depreft, tricking our Mule, VVith feemly fubiects (that whil'ft fhepheards fing) Of rurall paftimes, midft their fonneting, The grauer ranke might compositions make, Not for themselues but for their countries fake: Alasse poore countrie; where is all that ftore Of diuine wits that thou haft bred before ? VVhere is that Quint-effence of poefie, That in (fore-times) was wont to breath on thee : Like a coole Zephirus? Hybles pure mount, Renowm'd in former ages and that Fount, Of facred Castalie lie defolate. For they with theirs have loft their former ftate Of Greatneffe: no proportion nor no flower Decks, with a dafie Border, that fweet Bower Where Cinthia vs'd to reuell : but as th' port Of houfe-keeping is now transport'd to Court, "Leauing their Country-houfes, which men looke "And gafe at long ere they can fee them fmoke :

So

28

So fruitfull Hesperie, which vs'd to be The Ren-de uou for facred poefie Leuing to be her felfe, fhuts vp her dore? Hence is the bankrout poet becom'd poore : Hence is't hee's forc't to write not for the eafe Of his owne minde (but as his Patrons pleafe.) Hence ift that errors must be Vértues deem'd, Becaufe, poore Poet, its by Fate ordain'd, That if he will not humour, he must sterue : " For Great-men love not heare what they deferue. How iealous be our times of their deferts, When they fuppreffe the eminence of arts? Making them fpeechleffe whereas we do fee, If perfons were difpos'd as they fhould be; Their fincere confcience (like a brazen wall) Might beare them vp what euer fhould befall. Then might our Satyre mixe his inke with gal, But with his mixture do no hurt at all. Then might our scepticke give his iudgement free, yet do fmall harme to mens integritie. Then might the Lawyer pleade without offence : Not feare his Conscience with a faire pretence Of doing good, when his corrupted will Vnder pretence of good, acts what is ill. Then might the diuels Factors liue like men. That have a god, nor for the hundred ten ; Receiving with aduantage need'd they pay, A greater fumme at that fame latter daie, VVhen due accompts are had : ô víurie That art the Cities fcourge, how much haue we

Occa-

of Brittaine.

Occafion to profcribe thee from our land, Since by thy meanes haue we felt heauens hand More heavy and revenging then before, Whofe wrath has vialls ever laid in ftore To punifh impious men : its thou (fowle fin) Which haft hal'd downe the infection we have feene Rage in this famous Ile: its thou whofe hight Hath turn'd our day of comfort to a night Of great affliction: for who more can be Afflicted in himfelfe, then inwardly Feeling the worme of Confcience gnawing him Torment conforting with that birth of finne VVherein he's nurtured : alas poore Ile ! That thou fhouldft fofter fuch as do defile Thy once renowmed borders with the hate Of a fupernall power, making thy ftate Pray to oppreffion, vaffalling thy fame (VVhich once was glorious) to thy odious name Of miferie : Great Albion now is growne Poore in her felfe, becaufe what is her owne She cannot vfe but in depraued wife, Makes her selfe fubiect to all forraine eyes As vices spectacle : ô that the bliffe VVhich we enjoy by minds Synderyfis Th' refined part of man, fhould foyled be By th' worft of ils the ftaine of vfury ? And who'le inueigh against it, few or none, For mifer-Nature hardly leaues vs one, That can fecurely fpeake against this ill So generall is the poifon of our will:

For

For (deere Pernaffus now is fo oppreft) It dare not speake for feare that interest. Should be demaunded by the Vfurer To whom it ftands engag'd : this is the fate That Poets haue, to leaue more wit then ftate To their posteritie : ô impious time ! When worft of Fortune followes wits diuine ; VVhen noble actions motiue in their fpirit, Can leave nought to their Iffue to inherit : Saue their poore fathers papers, monuments Scarce worth refpect : how weakes the Element VVhich Poets are compos'd of, when one frowne Sent from a great mans vifage can keepe downe Their beft inuention ? filly poefie, That (though free borne, art forc't to flauery, And vndeferu'd fubiection : pittie it is, That beft of merit fhould fhut vp her wifh; And dew expectance in no other booke, Saue in a fkrew'd face or a writhed looke ; Vnfit to entertaine an Art diuine VVhich is exprest in that poore Mule of thine. Come, come, great regent of that facred quire, Come in thy felfe and fo our foules infpire VVith Arts Elixir and with fpirit toe, That we may do with boldnes what we do: Erect our aged fortunes make them shine (Not like the foole in's foot-cloath) but like Time, Adorn'd with true experiments which may Conuert our odious night to glorious day. Let not Ambition mounted in her flate

30

Paffe

of Brittaine.

Paffe vncontrol'd : care not for getting hate : "For honeft minds are best approved still, " By gaining hate in curbing what is ill. *Let not these painted blocks of Iuuenal. Which for their cloaths are most admir'd of al Stand vnreproou'd : let not their dangling plume So daunt thee, as thou dare not well prefume To blazon their defects, fpeake what thou feeft And care not who be pleas'd, or who difpleas'd. Let not moth-eaten Auarice appeare In this deere Ile, without her Character : Lash me the Symonist, who though precise In fhew, can geld his Parfons Benifice. Gall me (our graine-engroffers) moulds of th' earth, That in their plentie laugh at others dearth. Roufe me the Atheift, let's fecurity Heare th'iudgement of fupernall maieftie Thundring againft him : let th'lasciuious Know their bed-broking fin, how odious Their fenfuall meetings are to his pure eyes, VVho euen the fecrets of our hearts efpies. Searching our reines, examining our hearts, Difcuffing each intention (and all parts) That haue a working faculty : Euen he That well approues of morall poefie, He that confirmes the motions of our minde. And breath's vpon them if to good inclinde. Let not fin-tempting wanton Mermaids reft Without due cenfure, who with naked breft, * Truncog : Simillimus Heros. Iuuenal.

Atrac-

32

Attractiue eye, and garifh Complement Enfnare our fond vnwary Innocent : Thefe are thofe Babell publique proftitutes, Lures to damnation, Romane Catamites, Inuentreffes of pleafures, penfiue ftill To doe whats good, but frolike to doe ill. O London how thy Vanity abounds, Glorying in that which thy renowne confounds. Traduced fashions from the Dutch to French. From French to Spanish, and not longer fince, Then vefterday, blufh at thy finne for fhame. That Albion (by thy meanes) fhould lofe her name. And habit too : fee, fee, how farre thou'rt gone. Beyond thy felfe, that therer's no fashion knowne, In forraine Courts, deform'd howfoere it be, But by transportance it doth come to thee. Laffe how immodeft art thou to expresse, Thy felfe fo much by others fashions leffe? How ftrangely Metamorphif'd to partake, For Angells forme, the most deformed shape, That Countries can bring out : ô pittie tis That Albions much admir'd Metropolis, Should make those which admir'd her now to hate Her vaine condition (introduc'd by ftate Too plentifull: Here you Hefperian wits May you have fubiect more then well befits A modeft pen: for nere was any time More prone to ill : no Region, countrey, clime, Prouince, Ifle, Regiment fo truly bleft With all earths bounties, yet hath leffe expreft,

Of

Of gratitude : here Satirifts refort, And make an ample coment on the Court, VVhere thou shalt write, fom's wanton, others vaine, Ambitious fome, others doe couet gaine By feruile meanes : fome beggars, yet who dare VVrite in these daies that any such there are. Then (my fharp tooth'd Satire) frame thy ditty In the fame forme, vnrip the Crimes of 'th Citty VVith a fterne brow : tell the purple Magiftrate, How he has raif'd himfelfe to great eftate By others ruine : fuch as Mercers are, Tell them darke fhops have got away ill ware. 'Such as be Gold-fmiths, and are dangerous, Call them the Siluer-fmith of Ephefus. Long liue Diana, but no longer then By their Diana they doe reape a gaine. Such as be Brokers, tell them their profession. Is not to be a knaue o'th first edition. But as those garments which are brought to them, Vſe to bè worne before by other men : Euen fo they broke their vices and receiue Som crimes wrapt vp i'th garmets which they haue, Tell them of Wapping, bid them thankfull be, That there is Iustice had for Piracie : For if that were not (it may well be faid) Many their fhops would be vnfurnished, But in the Country now my Mule fhall be, For brooke fhee'le not a Brokers Company. Here fhalt thou see th'picture of Auarice, (eyes, Thin-cheek'd, raw-bon'd, faint-breath, and hollow-D Nose-

34

Nofe-dropping, rhewme-deftilling, driueling mouth Hand-shaking, haire down-falling, th'mifers cough, Legs goutie, knees vnweldy, hand on cruch, Eies in his bofome, gafing on his pouch, His labour torment, reft he cannot take, VVhen all are fleeping, he is forc't to wake : His Eies are euer ope, for riches keepe His eies vnclofed : The miser cannot fleepe. He's his owne anguish, such an impious elfe, Thats ill to all, but worft vnto himfelfe. He has not bookes whereon to meditate, Onely a debt booke and an Alminake. The one's for forfeitures, where he will pore, And daie by day trauers them ore and ore : Th'other's his Enterlude that yeelds him mirth. Seeing predictions of the next yeeres dearth. Hope of a deerer Sommer then laft was Vnfeafoned harueft: O thefe hopes furpaffe All others, Heere the Mifer fets his eie, And when he does thefe ftrange prenotions fpie, He kiffes th'booke, fweares the profession's rare, And wifnes all hee reades fuch fubiects were. This Cormorant engroffeth all his graine, Makes his barnes greater by a fecret traine Brings ore his neighbours fonne to fet his hand, Vnto a fale, and fo ioynes land to land. This wicked vlcer that corrupts the ftate, Nere thinkes of death, till that it be too late. His gold's his God, yet vie it cannot he, But in expression of his miserie ;

which

of Brittaine.

Which puts the poore Mifer to a double paine, By telling it and putting't vp againe. But now (my nimble Satyre) for to thee Tends this impolifht peece of poefie : How wilt thou taxe, or where wilt thou begin With thy tart phrafe, to ftinge and nettle him ? Thou must be bitter (for in greatest grieues) And festered wounds we vse no lenitiues To mollefie, but corrafiues to gall : And of all griefes this is the great'ft of all. By it we are degenerate and liue, As fuch as can receive, but cannot give To Nature competence : Come my deare Mate I'll tell thee how to cure their defperate ftate ; Which in few words leaft that thy memory faile, Ile fpeake my minde vnto thee in a tale.

It chaunc't vpon a time (and well might be For fuch like chances fall on miferie,) A pinch-gut Mifer fell extreamely ficke, So, as at laft his Confcience gan to pricke, And tell him of's oppression, wherefoere He turn'd his eyes, he faw damnation there. Sleepe could he not, his ficknesse was too great, Nor hope for ought, his conscience did so threate And terrifie his soule : thus lay this wretch Poore in his spirit, though to the world rich; Faine would he oft desire himselfe consess. But cause he was falne out with Pariss priess About a Tith-pigge, he deserr'd the time, And would in no case suffer this Divine

36

To minister due comfort to his state All woe-begone : fo great was th' Mifers hate : For though he were afflicted, yet would he Vp-braide the Parson full irreverently, Calling him hedge prieft, belly-god (nay more) That like a Thiefe, he came not in at dore, But in at windowe to his Benefice ; And that he knew the practice and device Of him and 's Patron: who that th' law might be Dispensed with in case of Symonie, Sold him a horfe (that whatfoere should fall,) The price might pay for th' Benefice and all: This would he fay, concluding merrily, Sir Priest you come more for my pigge then me. Silent the Parfon was, for well he knew, The Mifer fpoke no more then what was true; Onely he wifht fuch neighbours as he had Prefent to pray for him, for he was mad, And that by all appearance it was like That his difeafe had made him lunaticke: Thus euery day his fickneffe did encreafe, Bereft of comfort, confcience fweeteft peace, Without all hope of health or here or there, (For th' worm of confcience follows every where.) There's no euafion left : where ere we goe She will attend vs in our weale and woe. You heard confeft he would, but as tis true, A mifer loues not him that craues his due : So to fuch men this cenfure ftands for juft. They loue their Confcience reft leffe then their ruft. What of Brittaine.

What fhould he doe ? the Parfon now is gone, And he vnto himfelfe is left alone T' expoftulate with death : his finnes did grieue him But now the most when all his friends do leave him : Torment belowe, iudgement he fees aboue, Witneffe within him, that will duly proue What he has done on earth (thus all in one Make vp a confort in his dying mone : Yet as a fhip ore-burdend with her freight Sinking before, fayls brauely, being made light; Or as the Ocean beats from fhelfe to fhelfe, (Sea-ficke god-wot) till fhe hath purg'd her felfe. So this fur-charged foule rowl's here and there, And yet to comfort is no whit the neere, Till that fame laftage of corruption be Exempted quite : then fleepes fhe quietly. Confesse he must, but to no Priest, that's vaine : But vnto one cleere of another ftraine : Shall I tell Satire ? yes, thou needs muft know it, And this he was; a thrid-bare neighbouring Poet: Who after dew confession made to him Of every act, and each peculiar finne, Extortion, Violence and Iniurie, Preffing of Orphanes, biting vfurie, Forfeitures-taken, forged bills, at laft He makes confession how a Poet past His pikes : who once was of a faire eftate, But after had no prospect but a grate : O, quoth the Poet, that was ill in you; O (quoth the Mifer) I doe know its true :

D 3

But

38

But with remorce I now lament his fall, Which 'mongft the reft afflicts me moft of all. Wherefore good Sir, poure out your prayers for me, That in diftaft of my impiety Languifhing fore, I may be cheerd in ftate, Dying in hope, that now lies defperate. The faire conditio'nd Poet, though he had heard How ill his owne profeffion got reward, By this hard-harted Mifer ; yet did he Scorne his reuenge fhould in affliction be Streight he retires himfelfe a pretty fpace, Chufing for's Orifons a priuate place, VVhich being done, to cheere the drooping man, VVith hands heau'd vp, his praiers he thus began.

Powerfull Iehouah, King of Heauen and Earth, That giu's to all things living life and birth. Thou that protects each thing which thou hast made, And so preferu's it, as it cannot fade. Before the time prefin'd : thou that wilt have Mercy on such as thou dost meane to sue. Looke on this wretch (that lies all woe begon) If so thou thinke hees worthy looking on : Great is thy mercy, so it needs must be, If thou wilt save such Miscreants as he. But what thou meanes to doe, he faine would know, Whether he must ascording make, And sit himselfe for th' Voyage he must take. For if to heaven, he needs the less properties.

Becaufe

of Brittaine.

39

Because he knowes all needfull things be there. But much he fear'd, and so feare other some, Mong ft which my felfe, that there he nere shall come. But if to hell (the likelier place o'th two) He does defire, that thou would ft this allow. He may have so much respite as prepare, The Bonds of all fuch Prodigalls be there: That what he could not cancell here fo well On earth, may there be cancelled in hell. The cause is this (as it to me appeares) Left that those spend-thrifts fall about his eares; When they shall see him, which that he may stay, He'le cancell th'Bonds, though't be long after day Or this's the cause as he was impious here, He meanes to proue an honest Deuill there. "That Time to Times-fucceffors may bring forth, "Hell made him better then he was on Earth.

Much more he praide, but I doe rather chufe, (Satyre) to make of all his praiers an vfe, That when the vfe fhall well expressed be, Thou maift apply the Benefit to thee. Sir [quoth the Poet] I my praiers haue made, Haue you, (replyed he,) as one difmayed, Yes fir, and by them fo my zeale enforc't, As I preuaild, though it was long time first, For know an apparision came to me VVith a shrill voice, which bad me fay to thee : If thou wilt first a restitution make, And render vp what thou by Fraud didst take, D 4

The Ciuill Diuell.

40

From any man, but chiefly what thou tooke From th'Poet : next, deliuer vp thy booke Of all Accounts, great'st caufe of thy defpaire, To thy Confeffour, and make him thy heyre. Thou fhalt have health for this, it bad me tell, But if thou wilt not, thou art markt for hell. For Hell, no marry I : take keyes and ftate, I will not buy wealth at fo deere a rate. If thou my pretty Satyre couldft reclayme, A mifer thus, I'de thanke thee for the fame. But all too long I have enforc't thee ftay, Vice calleth thee, and Time drawes me away.

An Epigramme called the Civill Devill.

I T chanc't one euening as I went abroad, To cheere my cares, and take away my loade, Of difagreeing paffions, which were bred By the diftemper of a troubled head, Midft of my walke, fpying an Allye doore, (Which I proteft I neuer spied before) I entred in, and being entred in, I found the entry was to th'house of finne. Yet much I wondred, how fin there could be, Where th'finnes protectreffe fhow'd most modefty. A ciuill matron, lifping with forfooth, As one that had not heart to fweare an oath, In Graue attire, French hood, all Frenchefide, For fhe had fome-thing more of French befide,

Her

Her outward rayment in a loofe-gowne made, Right after fashion, with a countnance staid, And which is ftranger (fhamefaft) her Iaboord (Like a young nouice letcher) making each word A protestation ; she that knew'th deuice, T'enfnate a greene wit, feem'd wondrous nife, Reprouing of my errour : Sir, I am (For thus fhe tooke me vp) wife to a man Of due refpect, one that has office borne, Twice in the Citty, therefore pray forbeare, You doe miftake your-felfe, there's none fuch heere As you make fute for. I as one difmaid. That durft not iustifie what I had faid, Began to flinke away; fhe feeing this, Fearing leaft fhe fhould fuch a Gudgeon miffe, Recants what fhe had faid, fwearing though fhe VVere fuch a mans wife of the Marshalfie, One that had neuer yet incurd ill name, Or knew ought more then modefty or fhame, Though fhe nere was defam'd in all her life, Or loued more then as becom'd a wife, Though her affection neuer yet was showne (Saue to her husband) vnto any one, Though fhe was graue in yeers, and therefore might Tread rightly now, that had fo long trod right, She would pawne name, fame, modeftie, and all Affection, husband, yea what ere befall Her grauer yeeres fhould once difpence with time, "She would, forfooth, remaine entirely mine, This alteration made me ftrangely doubt,

Doubt

The Ciuill Deuill.

42

And though my feet were in, my mind was out. Yet fo was I enthralld by tempting finne, Though Vertue forc't me out, Vice kept me in. Thus did my tempting Genius, fweare, proteft, That of all creatures fhe did loue me beft, And with diffembling teares difguife her ill, Fond is that man, and fonder is his will, That's thus deprau'd : how feruile are men growne, When these fame Vertues we effeeme our owne Are thus Eclipf'd by Hyene faced whores, That protestation make they will be ours, When they proue nothing leffe, las I do know And by experience, whatfoere they flow. Their painted Vizards couer naked finne, Which feeming faire, are euer foule within. A whiten wall, a rotten odious tombe, That proftitutes her felfe to all that come. To all that come, hence then's affection croft, For loue is pure, but luft for them bid moft. But to my Saint-like Deuill: fhe thus precife At first held credit deere, but now her eyes Like wandring ftars preft to induce fome fin Makes me (the filly fifh) catcht by her gin. Reafon did tell me, and fuggeft her name, Whifpring me in the eare, it was a fhame To gage my reputation to a whore : But las who knows it not, fenfe hath more power Then reafon in these acts : I gaue confent To her inducements, thought her Innocent, And a right modeft matron : yet how farre,

Did

Did fenfe from reafon in her Verdict erre? For how could fhe be modeft that fo foone, Was gain'd ere crau'd, fo quickly wood and wonne? Laffe that my fimple ftraine fhould be fo weake, As to continue for a wantons fake. So firme in my affection? fhe was graue, Its true, fhe was fo: but how many haue That forme of grauity, the more their finne, Being fo graue without, fo gay within, But fhe protefted ; true, she fwore an oath, As any other tempting wanton doth, VVhen fhee's in hope of gaine, vnhappy I, To leane fo much to harlots forgery. Well my braue Curtizan, fince I am won, To doe that act by which I am vndone. Since I am fnared, and like a Bird thats caught, Fledged in bird-lime, am of wit diftraught, And fenfes too: I will runne headlong to it, And doe it with force, fince I perforce must doe it. Downe goes the filken Carpet all the while, Showing those sheets, which louers doe beguile, Those sheets of lust perfum'd deliciously, VVith rofie odours, where variety Of objects made recourfe : fee wantons fee, How many motiues now enuiron me? Heere my lasciuious Matron wooes with teares, There a repose for lufts retrait appeares. Heere a protefting whore (fee whoredomes fhelfe) Rather then loofe me, fhe will damme her felfe. There Adons picture, clipping Venus round,

Heere

Here Ioue Europa lying on the ground. Heere Mars difarm'd in Beauties chariot drawen. VVhere faire Eryca couer'd ore with lawne, Bids him her beft of welcome, and is ledde. For want of roomes vnto her Husbands bedde. Heere Danae ftood (admiring diuine power) Which did defcend like to a goulden fhoure, Into her Virgin-lap, there ftraight I fpide The tempting Omphale, and on one fide, Her wanton fifter, on the other, faire Alcinous daughter, courted for her haire By great Apollo: but below her foote, Sat Hercles spinning, she enioynd him too't. Here I beheld the nimble Satyres dance The Druids fung, the water-Sea-nimphs praunce, Ore the delicious Mede : there was the Oueene Of Amorous meetings pictur'd as fh'ad beene Taking a greene-gowne (many fuch there are) Of Mars that Martiall Enginer of warre. Heere Vulcane lay, poore Cuckold as he was, And faw them mating on the greeny graffe, Yet durft fay nought, how many fuch there be, That fee enough, but dare not fay they fee ? Sweet heart (quoth fhe) and fmild, feeing me eye This picture more then any one was nie, Leaue me the fhadow, to the fubftance goe, VVhat thou now feeft, let louers action know, Ile be thy Venus, pretty Ducke I will, And though leffe faire, yet I haue farre more skill, In Loues affaires : for if I Adon had,

The Ciuill Deiull.

As Venus had : I could have taught the lad. To have beene farre more forward then he was. And not have dallied with fo apt a laffe. (be Come, come (my youngling) though I nere could Immodeft yet, Ile fhow my felfe to thee, A lasse of mettal : Come, in faith thou shalt, Thou'rt Mars, I Venus, he that limping halt, My Vulcan-hufband, pox on't he is gone, And I my felfe as defolate alone, VVill entertaine thee : I in manlike fhape, Being a man, a man fhould imitate. Protefted I would doe, yet had no power, For who can deale fo ably with a whore, Or with fo free-bred actions, fince I know, None can affection with election show. Sincerely or entirely, but whofe ftrife, S'transform'd from wanton action to a wife Of modeft action : this is fhe can doe. And every night has new conceits to wooe, Though fhe be won, las what is wooing then, Since wooing, winning, be fmall change in men ? VVho knowes not whores affection purchaf'd foon, And that they are not fooner woo'd then wonne? Or as the world goes, for its more common, VVomen woe men more oft then men woe women. Hence nature feemes to haue transform'd vs quite, Conuerting day vnto a drerie night, Vertue to vice, a good-names eminence, Expof'd to fhame, and publique impudence.

Once

Once women knew a blufhing fhame-faftneffe, But now a blufh is leaft that they expresse; Vnleffe for fhame of having done fome ill They feare is known, which they would fhadow ftil, Shine brighteft heauen (if thou wilt deigne to fhine, And with thy beames difpell this hideous crime, Which now (protection has) : curbe them, that call Such finnes as veniall. Venereall. Let not an Ile of an Angelicke name Expose her glory to the house of shame: Let not those many Tropheies of her worth Loofe their renowne or honour in our birth. Let not faire Albion. ftil'd from cliffes fo white. Change Vertues day ftar to a vicious night. Let not those many conquests she hath got Seeme now depreft, as if remembred not. Let not our peace (like Halcion daies) be tane From vs and ours and giuen to other men: Let not this facred Vine which planted is In Albion. fhaken be by wantonneffe. Let not our plenty and aboundant ftore Occasion be that we should finne the more: Let not our Realme vnite, diuide that loue Which we fhould beare vnto the King aboue : Let not our want of wars inualion bring vs A luft-full war encountring within vs. Let not those manie bleffings we receiue, Make vs interre our honour in our graue. Let not our feafons veerly fruitfulneffe Produce in vs a loathed barranneffe.

The Ciuill Diuell.

Let not those many strange conspiracies Which heauen preuented, clofe our thankleffe eyes, Let not our being make vs not to be, For God is God and will auenged be. He feemes fome time to fleepe and fuffer all, But calls at laft for vfe and principall. Many, I know, there be of crimes that's ill, Drawne from the fource of our depraued will, But of all crimes that euer were or be, None in this Ile claimes more impunity. A purple fin (for who will not allow it) Since purple-fathers oft-times go vnto it ? The Citties Elders (which though they reproue) They doe but chaftice what themfelues do loue. Statifts haue lou'd it too : but marke (my friend) For all their ftate they had a loathfome end, Like ftinking Herod, loth'd Hertogenes, Crook't Damocles, lowfie Pherecides ; All these experience had of this fowle euill. And could describe too-well a ciuell Diuell.

The

The Authors Morall to his Ciuell Diuell.

Ome Nouice, come, fee here the fall of youth, Begun in pleafure, but wouen vp in rueth : See what occurrents meete the heires of fhame. Where end is pouerty, and cloz'd ill-name? See what the fruits be of licentious fin That end in woe as they in heate begin? See painted Sodom-apples faire to th'eve. But being tutcht they perifh inftantly. See, fee a wanton Mere-mayd, that does fing, To bring youths crazie backe to ruining. See Vertue in pretence, but vice in deed, See Harlots action in a Matrons weede: See damned Factors who their trafficke make. Not for their foule but for the diuels fake. See my coach't Lady hurried long the ftreet, Cafting her lufts-eyes on who s'ere fhe meet : See, fee her cerus cheeke, made to delight Her apple-fquire, or wanton Marmofite. See, fee her braided haire, her paps laide out, Which witneffe how fhe'le do when fhe's put to 't. O fee fhe likes vpon th'condition well, So the may coached be the'le goe to hell. And willingly: fee, fee adulterate golde, In valew worft, yet is the deereft folde. See Albions curfe, Youths gulph, Heires mifery, Our Countries shame, foules staine, earths vanity.

" 0

The Ciuill Deuill.

O Sunne reflect thy gould on my pale Moone, And let this Dathans braunch be rooted foone, Out of this flourie ifle : O let not this (So hideous a crime) eclipfe the bliffe VVhich Britaine now poffeffeth, may my penne, Be fteeped now in wormewood, that fuch men As have beene 'erft delighted, now may be, Wain'd from that land-oppreffing miferie. And you (damn'd proftitutes) that pawn your name, Making a triuiall may-game of your fhame ; Bed-broaking lechers, Broakers of ill ware, For many fuch bafe factors now there are) Heare me fpit out my malice : May you liue, Till you have nought to take, nor none to giue, For your ore-iaded pleafure : may you ftand Banisht for euer in this Fruitfull land, (power) Which fares the worfe (and that by Heauens high For giuing harbour to an odious whoore. May you detefted liue, inteftate die, And as I doubt not make your Tragedy By death more wofull: may your vlcerous skin, As it beares here the marks of your fowle fin : Like to the Iewes as they did earst appeare, Who in their fore parts circumcifed were) Be circumcis'd: that after times may shew, There was small difference twixt the whore and Iewe. And you poore haire brain'd youths that doe begin To neftle in these lothfome finkes of fin ; You that fpend fubftance, heritance and all, Becomming fubiect to a doubtful fall :

You

The Ciuill Diuell.

50

You that are fent to practife fludious arts, But leaving them, betake to worfer parts Your vnfledg'd fancies : heare me, and you'le fay, It feemes he wifht vs well another day. Flie the strange woman, let her wanton looke, Be vnto you as fome experientft booke ; Prefcribing cures for ftrange difeafes be As if you did not note, or did not fee Her fin-alluring motiues : if fhe fmile Confter it thus : this wanton would beguile With her affected feeming, if the play With her light capring foote, or bid you ftay (So brazen fac't is fin) away from thence, Taxe, but affect not, her loth'd impudence. If the fhew modeftie (as well the may) For whoores haue change of faces euery daie Vieing new fashions : you may conster thus, It is a painted but no natiue blufh. If the proteft (beleeue not what the fayth) For there's no whore but can difpenfe with fayth : If fhe inuite you to fome dainty feaft Be not entreated, least like Circes beast, You be transform'd from that fame forme diuine Vnto the bestiall nature of a fwine, If fhe allure thee to fome wanton fport In that fhe moues you to it, care not for't Let St. foote be (fuch follies luft affoord) "For faireft play is euer aboue boord. Redart not eyes with her : if the looke red Say its her guilt, if pale diftempored

With

The ciuell Diuell.

With fome lafciulous paffion : if conceipt Be pregnant in her, fweare its but deceipt To draw thee on : if fullen, it may be thought Her weight of fin has that diffraction wrought. If the difcourfe, its but fome whorifh tale That fhe perchance has purchas't by retaile : If filent, 't may be thought fhe's plotting ill, And that's the caufe her oily tongue is ftill : If feeming modeft, vertuous or precife, Its her diffembling, making her lufts eyes Like Bafilisks (who naturally have Defire to kill, where they do feeme to faue.) If hope of meanes : fie, let no Generous minde, Stoope to fo bafe a lure, as be inclin'de, To buy a flipend at fo deare a rate, "As gage a foule, to get a little ftate. If difcontent : this is no remedie Vnto thy griefe, but ads to miferie : For who (through difcontent) goes to a Whoore, Muft needs be more dejected then before. If an enforced marriage (as who can) Tafte still the fweete of comforts, being man: This is no way to eafe thy troubled head, To make thy felfe adulterize thy Bed. If to fpend time : how ill is that fpent time, Which adds vnto that great accompt of thine Thoufands of accufations ? where thy looke Shall beare record (if wanton) in that booke, Where all our actions duely written be From youth to man, to Age from infancy:

52

If for acquaintance (as oftimes we heare) The greateft men are most acquainted there; Thou feeks amiffe, for what's acquaintance worth, By birth borne great, to baftardife their birth. If to obferue new fashions, tricks not knowne Before of thee: 'laffe those must needs be growne Ouite out of fashion, when there's none that vse the Saue Pandors, Bawds, & whoors that ftil abufe them. If to be deem'd a Turne-ball roring lad, Of all the ftraines that be there's none fo bad : - ---"Thefe glorie in deformed fhapes, and thirft action and After that guize which doth befeeme them worft : But wouldft thou know them? then attend to me. (And I in few words will defcribe them thee. Their peak't-mouchatoes bodkinwife oppofe Each other, and ftand brauing of their nofe : They're bluftering boyes, and whatfoe're befall, If they be three to one they'le haue the wall. They have a mint of oaths, yet when they fweare, Of death and murder, there's fmall danger there : Buffe-yerkins fay their fouldiers, (but's not fo,) For they were preft indeed but durft not goe. They weare a Cutler's-fhop euer about them : Yet for all that we need not greatly doubt them. For tak't from me by this you foon'ft may know the, They weare the defperat'ft blades, yet dare not draw They're Panders by profession, men that get (them. A flauish meanes out of a feruile wit : They're euer foaking of a pipe, whofe fmoake Makes them contort & wreath their wainskot look

The Ciuill Diuell.

To every fashion, they are monstrous proud, And what-foere they fpeake they fweare its good : They neuer goe to Church, vnleffe it be To man their whore, or for formalitie. They are and are not : feeming men by fight, But beafts, becomming flaues to appetite : Their walke is not where Vertue hath recourfe, (For to difcourfe of Vertue is a curfe) To Roring-boyes : their Rende-voue's Tibb Calles Her shrowd their shrine, their walk's in Garden-allies Doft fee thefe (youngling)? pray thee fee and mark, A whore enticing, and a god-leffe fharke Attending her, haue a good eye to him, Pray thee beware he's inftrument of finne : Goe not along, let my aduife enforce, Leaft thou returne (my boy) by weeping croffe. Let not, ô let not moment of delight, Deprive thy foule of her internall light, Shame not thy eye of reafon with expence Of ill fpent time, expos'd to th'vfe of fence. Thy form's Diuine, no fading, vading flower : O let not then th'embraces of a whore Captiue thy iudgement, but as thou doft take Thy Great Creators forme, fo for his fake, Referue thy Temple (if thou'le liue with him, To be for Syon, not for place of Sinne.

E 3

The

The occafion of this Epigram proceeded from the restraint of the Author, who in the instnes of his cause (like Zenophons Sparrow) fled for refuge: to the worthily esteemed, the Right Worfhipfull RICH. HVTTON, Sergeant at Lawe : to whofe protection the retired Author commends his Epigramme entitled.

HIS CATCH.

Singing my catch, if you be not my friend, For all my catch, I shall be catcht ith end.

N Ot in a durance fuite remaine I here, Yet in a fuite like durance hemm'd with feare Retir'd I am: confinement makes me thrall Vnto my felfe, which grieues me moft of all: If I but fee the fhadow of a man. Or th' tinkling of a Braziers copper pan, I feare a Sergeant, fhadow faies its he, And th'Brazier faies, fuch like his buttons be,

Where

Where fhall I flie to ? 'laffe I know not where : For Milford-lane is growne too monftrous deere. No, there I muft not goe; for know you how That place is stil'd? The Gallants Randa-uou. Well, fome-where I must flie : O now I fee't : Philofophers fay; heate is expel'd by heate. Moifture by moifture ; Colds extremity By cold, deriu'd from paffions natively Concurring in vs: if this then be trew, VVho fhould I flie to (Sir?) but vnto you That are a Sergeant, and has power to place Your God-fonne free from any Sergiants Mace? To you ile flie purfu'de by impudence, (A Courtiers garbe) crauing fafe refidence Vnder your wings: and know (kinde Sir) from me, To doe for Orphanes its a charity. Little I am poffeft of well you know, And of that little, little doe I owe To any man: yet for all this am I, Made a fit object for a Sergeants eie. I could not beg if that my caufe were bad, But to disburfe for that I neuer had. Nor anie for me, 'laffe it feemes to me, The caufe might pleade it felfe without a fee. Pray Sir (at leaft) if'th Courtier needes will craue it, Let him purfue fuch, where 'has hope to haue it : For me theres none: but this his wit God wot To fue his bond, wheres nothing to be got, Yet for the reputation which I beare To my vnblemisht credit, I must feare

Not

Not our just caufe, nor any fuch pretence, But brazen-face, and guilded confcience. "For dangers felt are worse then others feard, " Which makes me now conceald which once appear'd. 'Laffe Sir, my ftudies cannot brooke reftraint, "Since times obferuance giues me argument. Of writing what I write : fo fmal's the ftore Of Là'er I haue, that if I knew not more By obferuation, then by reading, men Might iuftly fay, I knew not what I pen. But Iuftice whofe pure eie lookes euer right. And can admit of none that cloudes her fight, Will fhield my caufe : its trues I know fhe will, Yet in meane time I am be-leagred ftill, With these iniurious burres, these tenterhookes, That even afright me with their gaftly looks. These engines of despaire, agents of euill. Factors for Mammon, Viceroyes for the diuell These that lay hold like bird lime : these be they, That muft be foundly brib'd, or we muft pay ; I have no hope then but your vertuous felfe To faue my crafie veffel from this shelfe, Or fhip-wrack rather, and fo fure am I Of your beft helpe, that I fee fafety Appearing midft of daunger: for my truft So well repof'd in one that is fo iuft, Cannot be frustrate, but must needes receiue What you may graunt, and I may juftly haue. And well I know that actions of this kinde. Keepe beft concordance with your generous minde, Whofe

Whofe natiue vertues haue been ftill expreft, In giving breath to caufes that are beft. A great prerogative, as't feemes to me, Haue you ore fuch as onely take their fee, -Witthout observance or discussion had. Of what the caufe is : whether good or bad. These like to spiders, weave ore iustice throne A web, to make their actions lie vnknowne. But all in vaine : their vices time defcries : For time has many eares and many eies. Ripe was his wit, and well he vnderftood, VVho rouf't i Westminster Hal with Irish wood. That Iuftice there profeft', fhould like appeare, Suffring no venemous creature to come neere Her sacred throne : no ^kSpider, worme, nor moth, But that like vertue fhould accrew to both. VVhich makes me mufe: fith Irifh wood can fhow. Such pure effects, why Ireland does not fee, O no it were too much to be the fame, In title, temper nature, and in name. But whither wanders my confined Muse? Lament thine owne, care not for times abufe, It yields thee matter ro expresse thy spleene, VVhich otherwife would be extinguish't cleane.

> ¹ Rufus finishing the stately building of Weftminster hall, found fault for being built too little, saying it was fitter for a chamber, then a Hall for a King of England; taking a plot for one more spacious to be added vnto it.

> * This peculiar vertue the fuperstitious Irish have ascribed to the power of Saint Patrick.

Thou mai'ft retire, ther's one will fee thee pla'ft In fafe repofe, till all thefe ftormes be paft : VVhich paft, may I my conning quite forget, If better numbers doe not defcant it.

> From me and mine to you and yours, From time to time our praiers like showers Diffused be incessantlie.

> > Your worths obferuer

R. B. μισοσῦκος.

TO MY APPROVED FRIEND T. P. in the conduct of my arreftfearing Epigram his beft of Wifhes.

F any Sergeant fhould my lines foreftale, Before they fee my Patron enter bayle. Ibid. How Night by Night in feuerall roomes I lye, And that my lines haue farre more Aer then I.

An

An Epigramme called the Honeft Lawyer.

C Prightly my mufe, fpeake like the fon of thunder And with a full mouth, ring out Albions wonder : No Suffex Dragon, no Virginian, But of a Lawer that's an Honest man. Whofe definition if you wifh to know, Is a blacke Swan, faire Moore, or milke-white Crow. He takes no fees, till he conceiue the caufe, Nor with an Oyly bribe annoints his iawes. He wants the vfe of feeling, feares Heauens curfe, Strings not his confcience with his Clients purfe. Hee'l not be tongue-tide, but for Iustice fake, He feekes to earne the mony he does take. He hates æquiuocation and delay, Nor will he make his Threed-bare Client flay For his difpatch : he will not have his fee, Till he difcuffe the caufes equity. His Iudgement will not vaile to wind nor wether, Nor is his confcience made of retching lether. His eye's on Iuftice, nor will euer he Banke-rupt his foule, t' enrich posterity.

His

The honeft Lawyer.

His tongue's no time-obferuer, made to pleafe, His fift is fhut from taking double fees. He will not forge a lye, nor wreft the fence, Of law or right, for any faire pretence. He will not backe his Clyent, or maintaine An vniust fuit, to reape a private gaine. He fpeakes and ftands too't, nor is forry for't, Though he by fpeaking truth, incenfe the Court. He hates corruption, nor has euer fould, His peace of Confcience, for a peece of gold. He loues no perfumes, nor is one of thofe, Whofe peak't mouchatoes fkirmifh with their nofe. His beard's not ftarcht, he has no fubtile fconce, Nor Ianus-like lookes he ten waies at once. His Eare is neuer fhut to poore mens mones, His Coach-wheele is not made of Clients bones, His Confcience nere did ought that needs relenting Or 'ere made Clients pay for his wives painting. His foule was neuer foild by corrupt dealing, Nor ftands he on a veluet gowne at fealing. His face was nere at Braziers, nor his skin Sy-fambris-like was hung vp to be feene. (can. His tongue fpeakes truth, makes peace where ere he This Lawer must be needs an honest man. It's true, he must: but where now shall we finde This man: I feare theres none left of his kind.

e For my pretty tooth-picker, the Criticke Lawyer, who flands on the puntylio of his honour, I am by Martialls meanes prouided of armour. 505. Epig.

Carpere causidicus fertur mea carmina: qui sit Nescio: si sciero, væ tibi, causidice.

Yes

Yes one I know, and more there be no doubt But that my dull pate cannot find them out, Who's truely honeft: Whom you may difcerne, You Clients you, that vifit this throng Terme, By no example in our Albion more, Then by my Patron in my Catch before. Aske you me why? Experience tells it me, "None of's Profession honester then he.

62

Vpon a Patron, who was at home, and yet abroad: in the City, and yet in the Countrey: feene, and not to bee feene: in any place, but where he was, and as foone to be found where he was not, as where he was.

> A good Patrons Anagram: is Patren. Anag. Parent. An euill ones Patrone. Anag. Rope an't.

A Satyre.

There is a Patron, to expresse his name, I thinke it needlesse, for you may conjecture, Who tis by dumbe showes : yet Ile reade a Lecture, Vpon's Anatomy : "He thinks no shame To be at home, yet to deny the same, By one of's Pander porters : he is proud

A Satyre.

Of a new Title giuen him, yet it's ftale, Knight-hood I wifh: for's fpeech he fpeaks a tale, With a Beere-brewers Grace, as for his bloud, He faies he can deriu't from Robin hood, And his May-Marian, and I thinke he may, For's Mother plaid May-Marian tother day.

If a rich country-Boore come to prefent him, With Pigge or Goofe, he fhall no fooner come, But the gate's open, and the Knight's at home, Where the Dog-fawning Knight will queftion him, Why he from's houfe has fo long abfent beene? Yet tother day, a Poet whom he lou'd, At leaft protefted fo: knocking at's gate, Was full two houres enforced there to waite, And ftill he ftaid to find his loue approu'd, (mou'd, Till th'Brazen head fpake, through a cafement (The Knight I meane) but feeing who it was, I'me not at home (quoth he) good Poet paffe.

An

An Epigram in Curium Lampetram : A Cashierd Courtier.

Vrius Lampetra, (as he doth confesse) For he was t'ane i'th nicke, o'th bufineffe, Ha's done, foone done, God wot, a worthy deede, Setting the Courts wreath on the Cities head : But for his wreath, before one Terms demurre, He was degraded of his Courtly fpurre. (True badge of Honour) and from that time fwore, Nere to approach the Cities confines more. What fhould he doe ? the Citie was his gaine, For poore Lampetra nere had courtly ftraine ; But apifh imitation, whole fmall force Made him admired, like an Hobby-horfe. And yet they fay, he had a wit at will: Running like the rundell of a blind horfe-mill. (fet Could fweare an oath, could fome at mouth could His words in fuftian, and could runne in debt, Could skrew his face, could moralize a fable, Yet nere read Æ lop, fit at Duke Humfreys Table, Could walke a turne in Paules, could talke of Spaine, Yet nere was there, and then come home againe. Why this is courtly, and this he could doe, Yea but Lampetra knew not how to woe. Not wooe ? why he could kiffe, and as they fing I'th ballad too, he could doe tother thing. "A Pox thats true: But fhall I tell thee why She told all out? he did fo fcuruily:

As

A Satyre.

"As at the very inftant when theyre taine, Shee faid (poore foole) put vp thy pipe againe, For fuch a Fidler is farre worfe then none, That plaies on ftill, yet has no ftroake but one. But prethee fay, what fhall Lampetra doe ? (As other Courtiers) make a foolifh fhow Of what they haue not : no, it is decreed, Being boorifh bred, he muft with boores goe, feede On huskes and hawes ; and that he may retaine Some courtly garbe, his ruins to maintaine Ith Country muft this rufticke fwaine be plaft, To purchafe pardons, when the iudgement's paft : Or he may finde a * Giant at S' Bees And with his fight get money if he pleafe.

* Vt in antiquisfimis Monumentis in Monasterio Sainct. Bees, ab inclyto eo generosisf. viro, Qui in hunc diem cuius opibus precipue Alabastreis versatur, nuperrime compertus suit; et prope Epistomium in Flectficect, publice ostensum, Sc.

An Embleme writte vnto a Gentleman, who entreated the Author to distinguish twixt Rome and roome.

You mou'd me fir, next time I chanc't to come, For to diftinguifh betwixt Rome and roome, Which I haue done: and to the full I hope, Rome being as farre from roome, as Peter Pope. For wherefoere I am, wherefoere I come, I muft haue roome, yet that I hope's not Rome. So whenfoere I fee Saint Peters chaire, I doe inferre, "Saint Peter has beene there. But that Saint Peters heyre is now at Rome. Though he be there, Ile fay it's not his roome. Peter Romes piller, Cater piller he, Whofe roome I loue more then his company.

a For we read that in the fecond years of Claudius reigne. Peter the Apoftle came to Rome, and there remained 30. years after, yet fome diffent from this opinion, &c.

En

EN TRES EXCEL-

lentifsimo Phantasto Moriano del Castello, equiti tres illustrissimo septentrionali.

Fades rare horned Dicke.

An Anagram included in the Satyre.

FAdes my rare horned Dicke? ô, out a cry, His hornes bud out, and gall him greeuoufly, What remedy? faith patience: which appeares In's wife, whofe patience, many burden beares. Then he may learne of her: it's true, you fay, And therefore plyes his hornebooke day by day.

Ana-

Anagramma.

How Riches freed'd adorne a gull?

Epigram.

Wife is that Foole, that hath his coffers full. And Riches free'd adorne the verieft Gull. Yet but vncafe the Affe, and you shall fee, An Affe is still an Affe, and fo is he.

An Epigram vpon the Anagram, Dedicated to the Mirrour of true Excellency, his much admired (though vnacquainted) friend, Don MORIANO DELL CASTELLO,

> To whom the Author wifhes many cheerfull daies, delightfull nights with his his late efpoufed Mistresse, whose imparalelld Vertues hee hath prefumed to illustrate in Thefe his impolifut (yet affectionate) Poems. M Orios Augustus thou great man of fense, That art enstil'd with best of Excellence.

To thee I write : yet doe I not know how, T' expresse thy worth, or with apparant show, Of thy demerits blaze thee as thou fhould, Yet know (braue northerne fpirit) that I would, Doe full as much as any, if my Art Were but of equall valew with my heart. For thou art he amongst all other men. That gives a fubiect to the freeft pen. And canft define true honour by degree, Drawne from the beft, yet inftanced in thee. Mount thee (refolued Heroe) that thy Fame, May be a wreath to Morianos Name. Shine bright, like Eos with his beamy face, Whofe pretious Mantle, fring'd with fome gold lace, Made all the paffengers admire his worth. Defcending from Heauens Court, to lighten earth. I know thou canft doe this, for I have feene Euen in a place, where many more haue beene. And haue obferu'd thee, galloping thy round, Making low Congees, till thou kiffe the ground With lip of thy humility, and then Putting thy foote in ftirrop once againe, Mounted thy barbed fteed, then with thy hand, Straking thy horfes creft to make him ftand. VVho proud on's burden, frolick'd in his ftay, And with a neighing ftomacke trac'd the way. Faire fall thee formall Gallant that haft force, To tame the courage of a head-ftrong horfe, Difplaying refolution in thy eye Courtship in cloths, in speech propriety.

In

In gefture admiration, in thy looke An Orbe of fashions, or a Table-booke. Of new-inuented features : in thy forme, Such exquisite perfections as adorne Natures best Mirror, O but that I doubt, By fpeaking of thy worth, I fhall be out. I could epitomize each fpeciall thing, Thy birth, thy worth, thy wooing, fonnetting. Yet for thy loue-fake (whatfoere befall) I will fpeake fomthing, though I fpeake not all. (net Mongft which my Mule records that amorous fon-VVhich who will not admire, that looks vpon it, VVrit to that faire Alicia now behight, The chaft-vow'd wife vnto an honor'd Knight : Where with loues paffions, thou fo well did fhow it, That none could thinke thee leffer then a Poet. Apt in thy words, in thy dimensions rare, Thy Figures proper, and thy motions faire. Art could not fhow, or euer yet bring forth, So farre fetcht straines inuented fo farre North. Now of her Beauty wouldst thou Comment make, And vow to take strange labours for her fake : Then to induce her loue (by meanes moft fit) Thou wouldft commend the promptnes of her wit, Protefting by the aery powers aboue, (As who ere lou'd would not proteft they loue ?) Noe fpeech ere Pallas fpake merits more praife, Then what thy Miftreffe Dere Alicia faies. Then wouldft thou defcant of her rubie lippe, (Though thou had neuer lucke to taft of it.)

70

Then

Then of her pure complexion which did praife It felfe, not as complexions now adaies. Then of her louely quallities which might be Styled the Eccoes of heauens harmonie. Then of her vertues fo diuine, fo rare, As they furpaft the reft aboue compare. All this thou didft to fhew her eminence, More grac't by thee being ftil'd his excellence. And faire thy loue had ended as begun, If that a Web had not thy loues web fpun. Great Northerne Atlas, what can I fay more, Then of thy merits hath been faid tofore. At leaft obseru'd ? for many men doe see, And know it well I write but truth of thee. O that times records fhould be fo portraide, In leaues of braffe, that what was done or faid, In auncient ages, fhould fo well difplay, Their full euents, as done but t'other day. Whileft thy renowme great mirrour of the North, Showne in our time, wants one to fet it foorth, "VVhereas its no leffe glory to a Crowne,

To have Authors then have Actors of renowne. Yet fhall not vertue fo obfcured bee, Nor thofe accomplifht parts appeare in thee. Lie rak't in Afhes : No great Morios heire, Thou fhalt not live as though there nothing were, VVorthy pofterity ; its I will write, Though far vnfitting for fo great a light My beft of thee, that art the beft of man, "He does not ill that does the beft he can.

F 4

Accept

72

Accept it needes thou muft, how er't be done, Being thy Fathers God-fonne, thou his fonne. But of all vertues that attend on thee. There's none that equals thy humilitie. Yet fo as thou art generous with all, A ftile that does adorne thee moft of all. Vnto thy humble fpirit annex't there is, Another foueraigne vertue, Patience; Or the enduring of an iniurie : Which of all others is obferu'd in thee. Thou wilt not fnuffe if one correct thee : no, Nor hardly aske him why he wrong'd thee fo. Thou wilt not answere to thine owne disgrace, Nor taxe the man that turdefies thy face, Thou wilt not grieue for euery light offence, Feare is thy guide, thy shield is Patience, Thou like a chriftian walkes (God wot) in feare, And being boxt will turne the other eare. Thou art Gods man, and whatfoe're men fay, He is the beft man at the later day. Thou art no bluftring boy that walkes the ftreete, And bindes a quarrell with who f'ere he meete. Thou art no Haxtar that by nature's giuen, To rage on Earth, but nere to raigne in Heauen. In briefe, thou art the man that God will chufe, VVearing a blade for fashion more then v/e. Nor doe I flatter thee for ne're was I Seruile to anie man: but if my eie Impartiall in her knowledge feeme to fhow, VVhat by obferuance other men doe know,

And

And haue admir'd, pardon I neede not craue, Since I expresse but what thy merits have Deferu'd : enough. Thy vertues are with beft, And little need they to be more expreft, Then as they are ? Goe on (my honourd friend) And as thou haft begun, fo fairely end. Be Fame thy Herauld to blaze forth thy worth, Making thee Morios, none fuch vpon earth. Be as thou art, and more thou canft not be, Since beft of being is included in thee. Be thou as hee, to whom all may refort, Muses I meane, and coming thank thee for't. Be thou as Cafar in the Capitall, So thou of Morios Caftell Centinell. Be as thou art reported, great in wit, And fo difcreet, as thou mai'ft mannage it. Be as thou art, founder of iollitie, Grauen in the gold-cup of our Langanbie. Be as thou would'ft be, and I wifh no more,

So time fhall fecond what I write before. But 'laffe poore Mu/e haft thou no more to fpeake Of fuch a fubiect, (pray thee deare awake) And memorife his name in euery page, From this time forth vnto a following age. No ? what is my wit drawne drie ? or I am tane VVith fome amazement at a great mans name ? VVhy thou haft writ of men as great before,

And haft expreft their actions ore and ore. Turn'th ore their belt of glory, and i'th end,

So won their hearts, as thou becamft their friend.

And

And art thou now growne filent? cannot he That merits beft, receive like praife of thee ? No, no : he cannot ; fo obfcur'de he liues, That though I write but truth, yet who belieues A true relation, when we feeme to fhow A man to men whom they doe hardly know? O then (redoubted fir) let me now end This home-bred Sonnet (as a louing friend That would perfwade) if you perfwad' would be To fhew your felfe fomething more openlie Vnto the world : O fee how men repine, That you fo long conceal'd, fhould gull the time, Hauing fuch parts, as much adorne your birth, Yet has no willing mind to fet them forth. VVhat is a Iewell worth if ever hid? Or whats a cafed Inftrument in ftead ? The luftre of the former is not feene. Nor can we know by 'th latter what't does meane. For Gemmes and inftruments are knowne by tutch, And fuch as fhow them men, we know them fuch. VVith like good will doe I prefent thee thefe, As Mopfus (that poor fhepard) fent a cheefe Vnto his Phillis : and it came to me Once in my minde, to fend the like to thee: But for I fear'd (and I have caufe to feare) That you had better cheefe then any here : In fteed of bride-cakes, cheefecakes I was tide In loue, to fend this prefent to your Bride.

All haile to Himen and this marriage day: Strow rufhes, and quickly come away.

Bring

Bring in your flowers, and giue of each of them To fuch as lov'd, and are forfaken men : For well I know fo louing is the Bride, So curteous and fo liberall befide Of her difcreete affection, I dare fay None muft depart vnfatisfied away. Strew rufhes maides, and euer as you ftrew, Thinke one day maides, like will be done for you : Strew you, Ile fing, or if you like not choife : Sing you, Ile ftrew : you haue the better voice.

Crowned be thou Queene of loue, By those glorious powers aboue : Loue and Bewtie ioyn'd together May they col and kiffe each other, And in midft of their delight, Shew thee pleafure in the night. For where acts of loue refort, Longeft nights feeme too too fhort : May thou fleeping dreame of that, Which thou waking doft partake, That both fleepe and watching may Make the darkeft night feeme day: As a fort befieged reft, Yeelding moft, when feeming left : Or in pleafures may thy fmile Burnish like the Camomile. Which in verdure is encreft Moft, when it is moft depreft.

Vertues

Vertues as they doe attend thee, So may foueraigne thoughts defend thee. Acting in thy loue with him, Wedlocks actions are no finne : Who in Hymens bands is joyned, And in facred loue combined, To remaine euer thine. He thy Picture thou his fhrine, Thou the mettall he the mint, Thou the waxe he the print, He the Lant-horne, thou the lampe, Thou the bulloine, he the ftampe. Thou the figure he the feature ; He thy former, thou his creature. He the image, legge and limme, Thou the mould to caft him in. He the plummet thou the center, Thou to fhelter he to enter ; Thou the Parke or fhady vale, "He the dogge that freth's the pale. Hammer he to strike alone, Anuile thou to beate vpon : More I could, but more I will not, Since to fpeake more much it skils not; Onely I will here extend Th' period of my fpeech as friend : And expresse what I protest Comes from th' center of my breft. That my protestations may Beare record another day.

Iö Hymen crowne the night Of these Nuptials with delight.

No more, no more : much honour aie betide, The lofty Bride-groome, and the louely Bride : That their fucceeding dayes and yeeres may fay, Each day appeares like to a mariage day.

But now retire, darke fhades haue lodg'd the fun, Put vp thy pipes for now thy layes are done. Finis Epithalami.

To the hopefull young Gentleman, and his experienced friend, M^r. CHEATER.

ANAGRAMM.

TEACHER.

Teacher you are, for you have taught me more, Then I was taught in all my life before.

A GRATVLATORY Epigram.

(write

TO thee (young youth) thefe youngling lines I Stor'd with my beft of wifhes : may delight Crowne

78

Crowne that long-wifht for Nuptial bed of thine, (Which fhould haue been) if Fate had granted mine With many happy nights : Bleft be my fate, Since what one friend has is communicate Vnto an other, that my loue fhould end, And ending, giue beginning to my friend. But why fay I its ended ? fith by thee, A three-loues fong beares defcant merily. And thus it is : I lou'd her, where thou art, Shee thee, thou mee ; three louers in one heart : Shee thine, thou mine (if mine thou ftil'd may be) Makes her in being thine, efpows'd to me.

An Embleme which the Author compofed in honour of his Mistris, to whom he rests ever devoted.

Allufiuely fhadowing her name in the title of the Embleme, which hee enftiles :

His Frankes Anatomie.

FRanke thy name doth promife much, If thy nature were but fuch: But alaffe what difference growe 'Twixt those two, I onely know?

I alasse

I alas that to thy bewtie Am deuoted in all dewtie ; I that once inuented layes, Singing them in Shepheards praife, I that once from loue was free Till I fell in love with thee : I that neuer yet began Trade, to hold my mistris fan; I that neuer yet could knowe, Whether loue was high or lowe : I that neuer loued was, Nor could court a looking-glaffe : I that neuer knew loues lawe, Nor lov'd longer then I fawe ; I that knew not what's now common, To throw fheep-eyes at a woman: I that neuer yet could proue, Or make thew of heartie love : I that neuer broke my fleepe, Nor did know what charms did keepe Louers eyes : now can tell What would pleafe a louer well. Shall I tell thee ? yes I will, And being tolde : or faue, or kill. It would pleafe him, if he might Euer liue in's Miftris fight : It would pleafe him t' haue the hap, But to fleep in 's Miftris lap: Or to have his Miftris faire. With her hand to ftroke his haire.

Or to play at foot-S'. with him, Or at barly-breake to breathe him : Or to walke a turne or two. Or to kiffe, or coll, or woe ; Or in fome retired Groue, But to parly with his loue. Or when none that's iealous fpies, To looke babbies in his eyes : Or when action ginnes to fayle, To fupply it with a tale. Venus vnto Vulcane wedde, Yet came Mars to Vulcanes bedde: He and fhe being both in one, Whileft poore Vulcan lies alone; Or if this will not affoord Ioy enough : observe each bird How fhe fingles out her make And to him does onely take. See their billing each with other, (Loue and dallying younc't together) Mutuall loue inheres in either. Being birds both of one feather; Or if this yeeld no content. To refort vnto the plant. Which being grafted skilfully, Brings forth fruit aboundantly : Deeper that the plant's we fee, Sooner will it fruitfull be, Which (my franke) in modefty, Thus I will apply to thee.

Deeper

Deeper that thy loue is fet, More impression may it get : Riper fruits then fuch as growe, And are planted fcarce fo lowe : If you aske me what I feeme, By impression for to meane, I will tell thee : fuch as thefe. Impreffions onely women pleafe. "Coine for ftampe fake we allowe : So for ftampe fake do we you, Weake's that Euidence you know That has neither feale to fhowe, Stampe, impression: fuch (I ken) Are you maydes, not ftampt by men Weake, God wot, for why you take Your perfection from your make : Then if thou defire to be Perfect, haue recourf to me : Or fome other that may giue, What old Adam gaue to Eue, 'Laffe its nothing : pray thee take it, Many wifh it that forfake it. But when fhamefull dance is done. They could wifh they had begun Many yeeres before they learnt it, (O how gladly would they earne it ?) But too long, I feeme to ftay, Ere thy beauty I difplay : Spare me fweeteft for my Mule, Seldome makes fo faire a chufe.

Chufe

Chuse it Loue what ere it be, Reade thy owne Anatomie.

Pureft of Ophyr-gold, let me prepare First for the choice description of thy havre, Which like the fineft thrids of purple feeme Clere to out-ftrip those of the Paphian Queene : Whofe tender treffes were fo neatly wrought, As Cholcos fleece feem'd to be thither brought, And fure it was, what ere fond Poets fay, And this was th' fleece which Ia fon tooke away. Delicious Amber is the breath which flowes From those perfumed conduits of thy nose, Thy fmile, a fnare, which tempts the way-ward boy Adon the faire, and bids him leaue to joy In Forrest pleasures, there's a fruitlesse marke, Hauing more ftore of game within thy parke. Thy lippes (two gates) where loue makes entrie in, And yet fo modeft as nere taxt of finne : Thy cheek, that rofie circlet of pure loue, Refembling neereft that Castalian groue; Where fuch variety of flowers appeare That nought feems good, which is not beter'd there. Thy blush (pure blush) Embleme of Chastitie Blushing, yet guiltlesse of ought done by thee Portends a maidens honeft-fpotleffe heart, Hauing thy blufh by nature not by Art. Thy chin (that dimpled mount) which hath last place Yet gives no leffer bewty to thy face :

Then

Then th' greateft ornament: for it doth fhow Like to a pleafant Vale feated belowe Some fteepy Mount : thy chriftall eyes the fount, Thy chin the Vale, thy louely face the Mount. O is not then this feature, boue compare, Where breath is perfume, and pure gold is havre Where fmiles are fnares, lippes gates of Iuorie, Cheekes rofes, blufhes types of chaftitie : Where chin a vale, the browe the mount, the face That Soueraigne of the heart, that keeps loues place : VVhere fhall I looke then, or how fhall I moue Thefe eyes of mine and teach them not to loue? For if my eyes fhould but thy haire beholde, I must be forc't to loue for it is golde : If thy delicious breath I chaunce to fip, Being the rofie verdure of thy lip; I deeme my felfe in that fweet perfume bleft Much more, in that, worfe breaths be in request : If thou do fmile, I loue, and wifh the while, That I might only liue to fee thee fmile. If thou do fpeake (pure Orator) I'me dumb, For why? thy admiration curbs my tongue. If thou but blufh (as maydes are wont to doe) My paffions are perplex'd, I wot not how, (pale, 'Twixt feare and loue : feare makes me wondrous Fearing thy blufh came from fome wanton tale. Too too immodest spoken by my selfe. Which to affoyle Ile reprehend my felfe; If I but tutch, to tutch 's a veniall fin, The pretty circle of thy dimpled chin :

G 2

I vowe

I vowe and in my vowe giues Bewtie thanks, That chin was Venus, though it now be Franks. Yet haue I not fpoke all that I doe fee; Or at least iudge in thy Anatomie : For true Anatomists being men of Art, Know the exact defcription of each part, Member and arterie : fo fhould my fight Be in my Franke if I defcribe her right, Which that I might reduce to fome full end, Though there's no end in loue, I will defcend To the diffinct relation of the reft. And in my Franks difcouery thinke me bleft. Thy waste, (without waste) like a curious frame, Aptly proportion'd ftill referues the fame : Or like fome well compofed Inftrument Exact in forme, in accent excellent ; So is thy wafte, and happy may he be, That's borne to make it ftrike true harmony. Thy belly (if coniectures true may be) For we must guesse at that we cannot fee, Is like an orient Cordon pearled faire, With diuerfe feats of Nature here and there. Where glides a chriftall ftreameling to abate, The heate of Nature oft infatiate. Pardon me Deere : Nature ordained first That Fount of yours, to quench the place of thirst. Thy thigh (imagination now must doe) For I must fpeake, though well I know not how, Like the laborious and the loaden Bee. That haftens to her hive melodioufly.

Nor

Nor is her freight more luscious (Deere) then thine, For thine is full of pleafure, hers of Thyme : Thy knee like to an orbe that turnes about, Giuing free paffage to thy nimble foote, Apt for each motion, active in loues fphere, Moouing her ioints to trip it every where. Thy legge (like Delias) neither bigge nor fmall, But fo well fram'd and featured in all. That Nature might feeme enuious to impart, So great a good, and hide fo good a part. Thy foote the curiouft module of the reft, For Art and Nature there be both expreft : Art in the motion, Nature in the frame, Where action works, and motion moues the fame. Nor can I credite what our Poets fay, Affirming Venus chanc't vpon a day To pricke her foote, fo as from th' blood fhe fhed, The damafke-rofe grew euer after red ; For if from blood fuch ftrange effects fhould be, Stanger (ere this) had been deriu'd from thee : But Poets though they write, Painters portray, It's in our choice to credit what they fay. Yet credit me (for I would have thee know it) I neuer yet durft challenge name of Poet: Onely thine owne I am and ftill will be, For whom I writ this poore Anatomie.

G 3

Vpon

Vpon his Mistris Nuptiall,

ENSTILED:

His Frankes Farewell.

J Hy whither Franke? to th' church? for what to O no : to fay, what thou canft nere vnfay : Alasse poore Girle : I fee thy quondam friend, Hath caufe to fay his hopes are at an end : How vainely then be our affections plafte, On women-kinde, that are fo feeming chafte, And privately fo forward-well-be gone, (If ere I marry) I'le finde fuch an one, As (in her modefty) will thinke't a difgrace "Others to loue when I am out of place. But I do thank thee Franke, th' haft taught me more, Then I could learne in twice feauen yeere before ; For I did thinke your fimple fexe did hate By double dealing to equiuocate : Where by experience now I finde it common, That fast and loofe is vfuall with women.

Yet on these rites this line my love shall tell, Fare well or ill, I wish my Franke farewell. (pray?

An Epigramme called the WOOER.

Come yee braue wooers of Penelope, Doe not repine that you fhould croffed be : For pregnant wits, and ripeft braines can fhow, As much or more then euer you did know. And that my ftorie better may appeare, Attend to my difcourfe, and you fhall heare.

It chanc't vpon a time (and then was'th time) When the thigh-fraughted Bee gathered her thyme, Stored her platted Cell, her fragrant bower, (er Crop't from each branch, each bloffom & each flow-When'th pretty Lam-kin fcarce a fortnight old, Skipped and froliked 'fore the neighbouring fold, When'the cheerfull Robin, Larke, and Lenaret, Tun'de vp their voices, and together met, When'th fearefull Hare to cheere her quaint delight, Did make her felfe her owne Hermaphrodite, When'th louely Turtle did her eies awake, And with fwift flight follow'd her faithfull make, When euery Beaft prepar'd her wonted den, For her owne young, and fhade to couer them, When Flora with her mantle tucked vp. Gathred the dewie flow'rs, and them did put In her embrodred skirts which were rancke fet. With Prime-rofe, Cow-flip, and the violet, The dill, the dafie, fweet-breath'd Eglantine, The Crowfoote, panfie, and the Columbine,

The Wooer.

The pinke, the plantaine, milfoile, euery one, With Marigold that opens with the Sunne; Euen then it was, (ill may I fay it was) VVhen young Admetus woed a countrey laffe, A countrie laffe whom he did woe indeede, To be his Bride, but yet he could not fpeede. VVhich forc't him grieue : heare but his caufe of woe, And you'le not wonder why he fhould doe fo ?

Vertuous the maide was, and fo grac't by fate, As fhe was wife, and did degenerate From her weake-witted father : modefty Lodg'd on her cheeke, and fhowd virginity In a faire Rofie colour, which was fpread By equall mixture both of white and red. So as no white it feem'd, but Idas fnow, No red, but fuch where Roses vfe to grow. And though of Hero many one doe write, Styling her foueraigne Goddeffe of delight, So faire as fhe was taken for no other, Of all that faw her, then Adonis mother. So pure her skin, fo motiue to the eie, As it did feeme compof'd of Iuorie. So high and broad her front, fo fmoth, fo euen, As it did feeme the Frontifpice of Heauen. So purely mixt her cheekes, as it might feeme, She was by nature made for natures Oueene. So pretty dinted was her dimpled chin, As't feem'd a gate to let affection in. So fweete her breath, (as I have hard them tell) That like to Caffia fhe did euer fmell.

So

The Wooer.

So louely were those mounts of pure delight, That Gods themfelues wer cheered with their fight : So as great Ioue (for fo our Poets fay) Fain'd himfelfe ficke for her vpon a day. Wife Æ sculapius he was fent forthwith, VVho felt Ioues pulfe, yet found no figne of death, Or any great diftemper : (yet to pleafe Ioue For he perceiu'd his malady was loue) Said ; Sir, I'aue found your grief: what i'ft (quoth he ?) A meere confumption, yet be rul'd by me, And follow my directions (though with paine) And then no doubt you shall be well againe. Fiue mornes must you to'Abidoes towne repaire, And fuck pure milke from th' fair'ft virgin there. Ioue hearing what he wifht, obey'd his heft; And war foone well by fucking Heroes breft. Yet what was Hero, though the fair'ft that was In all her time vnto Admetus laffe ? Though Heroes beuty did allure all men, The time is chang'd, now's now, and then was then. Each milk-maide in fore time was thought a Oueen, So rare was perfect bewty to be feene. But now, where is no Venus to be had? Such ftore I wot there be, that every lad Can haue his trickfie laffe, which wantonlie, Scarce crept from fhell, he dandles on his knee. But to my ftorie of fuch royall parts VVas fhe compofed, that the very hearts Of her attendants, as it did apeare, VVere fpouf'd to this pure virgin euery vvhere,

The Wooer.

VVith what refolued filence would her wit, Oppose her tongue, and seeme to bridle it? With what difcretion would fhe fpeake her minde, And nere tranfgreffe those limits fhe affign'd. But with that decencie of grace and fpeech, As She might feeme the elder fort to teach. "VVhat a bleft fexe were woman if this fong VVere onely learnt them, for to hold their tongue, And fpeake no more (O t'were a leffon good) Then that were fit, and what they vnderftood ? But when will that be taught them !- O (I feare) Neuer; for womens tongues be euery where. So as at first, if they had no tongue, It may be thought they would not have been dumb. Such is th'ternall motion, that its fayd, When women speechlesse lie they're neerly dead. This virgin which Admetus fought to haue, Befide her vertues, then which who could craue. A better portion, had an ample dowre, VVhich did enrich those gifts that were before Expressed and dilated, and to tell The very trueth, fhe lou'd Admetus well. And could have brook't all others t'have denide. So that fhe might have been Admetus bride. But he a fhamefaft lad, though oft he fought Her loue, yet durft not vtter what he thought. Nor to her parents could impart his minde, How he affected was, and how inclinde. Yet ftill was he respected, and in grace, Nor any fought to put him out of place.

Nor

Nor to withdraw th'affection of the maid. From that foundation where it once was laid For three months fpace, hung it in this fufpence, Neither conceald nor fhowne : till's Excellence, For fo was th'Title of a noble Squire, Whofe liuing bordered in th'adioyning fhire, By an intendment (as he thought vpon't) Put poore Admetus nofe quite out of ioynt, And thus it was : for I meane to repeat By what deceit, what cunning flight and cheat, He bobd this fimple Swaineling; on a day, When young Admetus had addreft his way To Troinouant, where he occasion had, "His Excellence in th'absence of the ladde, Acquaints another with Bellinaes loue, (For fo her name was :) he more prompt to moue Affection, then Admetus ere could be, VVins me Bellina's fort couragioufly, By new affaults, incursions, and displaid His youngling Colours : when the breach was made. O how methinks I fee th'young Souldier fweat, Till he hath done, and perfected his feat. How he affailes, affaults, afcends, inclines, Inuades, inuirons, ruines, vndermines, VVhil'ft fhe like to a Fort oppreft doth lye, Depriu'd all meanes of helpe, yet will not crye. He like a ftout victorious Hanniball. Bidding her yeeld, or he will raze the wall. She though made fubiect to his conquering hand, Like Carthage Queene still at defiance stands.

He

He (with the Spirit of a Mirmidon.) Makes her the Carpet which he lies vpon. She (Deianira-like) will chufe death first, Ere fhe craue mercy, bids him doe his worft. He enters th'breach, and doth his fignall rere, And leaues fome token that he has beene there : She glories in her conqueft, and throwne downe, Saies, I am low, yet am not ouercome. He doth renew his battery, and ftands too't, And the Vyrago-like, yeelds not a foote. He takes more firmer grounding, yet is fhe Still as the was, lower the cannot be. He plants his Engines deeper, labours more, Yet fhe protefts, its worfe then twas before. He enters parlye, and fpeakes ore the wall, But fhe (as fenceleffe) anfwers not at all. He founds rerteat, and to his campe doth creepe, Which makes her wake out of her pleafant fleepe. Then in a fweete entwining doe they clippe, And cull and kiffe, and from the rofie lippe Of Hymens chaft embraces doe they taft, The fweets aboue, when lower ioyes be paft. Heere is the fpell of fweet-charmd Morphus Diffolu'd to nothing, by charmes amorous. For though men (after Labour) rest doe seeke. Loues eyes be open still, and cannot sleepe. Iudge what Admetus thought when he did heare, Of this report, foone whifpered in his eare, How he did looke? how ftrange perplext he was, Thus to bee cheated of his louely laffe ?

Pipe

Pipe could he not, his cheeks were growne fo thinne, His pipe-bagge torne, no wind it could keepe in, His cloue-ear'd curre lay hanging downe his head, And for foure dayes, would taft no kind of bread. His Flockes did pine (all went contrary way) Heere lay Admetus, thère his Sheep-crooke lay, All wea-begane, thus liu'd the Shepheard long, Till on a day infpired with a fong, (For fo it feem'd) to others more then me, Which thus he fung to maids inconftancy.

Foolifh I, why fhould I grieue,
To fuftaine what others feele ?
VVhat fuppofe, fraile women leaue,
Thofe they lou'd, fhould I conceale
Comforts reft,
From my breft.
For a fickle, brittle woman,
Noe, Noe, Noe,
Let her goe,
Such as thefe be true to no man.

Long retired haft thou beene, Sighing on thefe barren rocks, Nor by fheepe nor fhepheard feene, Now returne vnto thy flockes, Shame away, Doe not ftay,

VVith

With thefe mouing-louing woman, They remoue From their loue : Such as thefe doe oft vndoe men.

Tender-tinder of Affection, If I harbour thee againe, I will doe it by direction, Of fome graue experienc't fwaine. Nere will I, Loue by th' eye, But where iudgement firft hath tride, If I liue, Ere to loue, It is fhe, fhall be my bride.

When this retired Swaine had end'd his fong, He feem'd as one that had forgot his wrong, His Teres were dried vp, his willow wreath, Throwne quite away, and he began to breath, More cheerefull and more blith then ere he was, Forgetting th' Name and Nature of his laffe, So as no Swaine on all the plaine could be, For any May-game readier then he : Now would he tune his pipe vnto his Eare, And play fo fweet, as ioyed the flocks to heare, Yea I haue heard, (Nor thinke I Fame did lye) So skilfull was this lad in Minftrelfie, That when he plaid (one ftroke) which oft he would, No Laffe that heard him could her water hold.

And

And now becaufe I doe remember't well, Ile tell a tale which I haue heard him tell, On winter-nights full oft vnto my Sire, While I fat rofting of a Crab by th' fire.

A Man there was wh' had lin'd a merry life, Till in the end, he tooke him to a wife, One that no image was (for the could speake) And now and then her husbands costrell break. So fierce the was and furious, as in some She was an arrant Deuill of her tongue. This drove the poore man to a discontent. And oft and many times did he repent That ere he chang'd his former quiet state, But las repentance, then did come too late. No cure he finds to heale this maladie, But makes a vertue of necessity. The common cure for care to every man, A potte of nappy Ale : where he began To fortifie his braine 'gainst all should come, 'Mongst which the clamor of his wives loud tongue. This habit graffed in him grew fo ftrong. " That when hee was from Ale, an houre feem'd long, So well he lik'd th'profession : on a Time. Having staid long at pot, (for rule nor line Limits no drunkard) even from Morne to Night, He hasted home apace, by the moone-light : Where as he went, what phantafies were bred. I doe not know, in his distempered head.

But a ftrange Ghoft appear'd (and forc'd him flay) With which perplext, he thus began to fay.' Good Spirit, if thou be, I need no charme, For well I know, thou wilt not doe me harme, And if the Deuill ; fure, me thou fhouldft not hurt, I wed'd thy fifter, and am plagued for't. The fpirit well-approuing what he faid, Diffolu'd to ayre, and quickly vanifhed.

For Guido faith, fome fpirits walke on earth, That cheered are, and much delight with mirth, Such doe admire conceits and pregnant braynes; Others there are, which Melancholy chaines, And keepes in low Subjection, thefe are they Affect the balefull night, frequent that way That is obscure, filent and intricate, Darke charnell-houfes, where they keep their chat, Of Tortures, Tragicke ends and Funeralls, Which they folemnize for their Feftiualls. Thus would Admetus passe the winter-night, Wherein he gaue fuch neighbours great delight, As came to heare him : and fuch ftore he had, Of quaint conceits, as there was not a ladde, That of difcourfe had more variety. Or could expresse his mind more gracefully. But lacke for forrow, how hee's fallen away, That was fo trim a youth but tother day, A meere Anatomy, but skin and bone, One that it pitties me to looke vpon. What fhould the caufe be, fure I cannot fay, But his pale face, fome fickneffe doth bewray ? " For

96

"For as our thoughts are legible in our eye, "So doth our face our bodies griefe defcry. Yet I perchance, by th' Sonnet which hee made, May find the caufe for which he is difmaide How ere it fall, it fhall be fung by me, Now when I want Admetus company.

Admetus Sonnet.

N Eighbour Swaines and Swainelins heare me, "Its Admetus bids you heare Leaue your Pastures, and come neere mee, "Come away you need not feare, By my soule, as I affect you, I have nought that can infect you. O then come, Heare a tongue, That in discord keepes apart, With a Woe-surcharged heart.

Nere was Swaine on plaine more loued, Or could doe more feats then I, Yet one griefe hath now remoued, All my whilome iollity. All my Laies be quite forgotten, Sheepe-hooke broken, pipe-bagge rotten, O then come, Heare a tongue, That with flattering fpeech doth call, To take long farewell of all. H

I am

I am not as once I was, When Eliza first did suite me, Nor when that same red-hair'd lasse. Faire Bellina did inuite me, To a Garden there to play, Cull, kisse, clip, and toy all day, O then come, Heare a tongue, That in wooing termes was flowing, But through Wo has spoil'd his woing.

All I can or will defire ye When my breath of life is fpent, That in loue you would interre me, (For it will my foule content,) Neare vnto my Fathers hearfe, And beftow fome comely verfe On my Tombe, Then my tongue Shall throb out this laft adeu, Nere were truer fwaines then you.

A verfe Admetus? I will be the fwaine, Though most whit, to wndertake that paine, Which in faire letters shall engrauen be, Ouer thy hearfe t'expresses the memory, And thus it is: Heere is a Shepheard layd, Who lou'd, was lou'd, yet liu'd and died a Maid. Yet gainst his will: pray then good spirits tell, Whether he muss on lead Apes in Hell.

How

98

How Fancie is a Phrenfie.

An Epigram.

A Nd thou* Euenus whofe renowm's difperft, About thofe fertile coafts which border thee, Whofe well-tun'd Current runs fo pretily, That Fame her felfe, nor fhall it be reuerft, Ha's thus enacted : that thy liquid breft Should make my confort vp, for there appeares Euen in thine eyes, continuing ftreames of teares.

Still may thy Sliding-foord, and fpacious courfe, Wafh thofe adioyning vales encircle thee, Which by thy meanes yeeld crops fo fruitfully, That thy pure fand may be of Ganges force, Golds pure Elixir: for thou haft remorfe, And pitties my hard hap to loue a fwaine, That hates my loue, and makes my fute in vaine.

Oft by thy Sliding Channell haue I ftood, Bathing my felfe in teares, teares were the drinke, That quench't my thirft, & whē thou feem'd to fink, Into fome hollow cauerne, ftreight my blood, "(That little bloud I had) made thy courfe good.

* In Euenum Flumen lubrico pregredicus curfu,

And

And finke into the Cefternes of mine eyes, Filling thy ftreams with teares, thy banks with cries.

Streight fell I downe vpon thy floury fhore, As if the fhore had beene my miftris breft, Where I a while conceau'd that fweetned reft, As it expell'd the care I felt before, Seeming to make my comforts fo much more, Becaufe fo long delay'd ; but laffe the while, My thoughts chekt me, I chekt my thoghts of guile.

For well I found, this was a goulden dreame, Yet but a Dreame, that feem'd to reprefent, Vnto mine eyes, that facred Continent, Which fhadowes my content : but this has beene, Euer moft true, Dreames are not as they feeme. And if they were, I'me fure they mift in this, Taking thy Banke for where my miftres is.

Oft did I cull, and clip, and kiffe, and doe, God wot, full madly, for repofing there, I call'd the graffe, the treffes of her haire : And bound it vp, yet well I knew not how, Making a bracelet on't, which I would fhow To euery Sheepheard, fo diftract'd was I, And euery rurall Syluane that paft by.

All this thou faw, and thou did pitty me, "For thy diftreaming teares explan'd no leffe, Surcharged brefts muft needs their greefes expressed Which Which once expreft; fuppreffed feeme to be: "Teares unto griefe, yeeld foueraignft remedy. For Teares doe filence greefe, but where appeares Extent of griefe, their griefs doe filence teares.

And fuch were mine : fometimes I could not weep, But like one fence-leffe, laughed at my diftreffe, Mixing a ftraine of Mirth with heauineffe, Or as one caften in a deadly fleepe, That neither fence nor faculty can keepe, Euen fuch was I : but ftreight I chang'd my fong, Making my ioyes fhort, but my forrowes long.

Her fancie was the phrenfie that furprifd My idle brain with thefe diftracted paffions, Ten thoufand fhapes I had, ten thoufand fafhions, Defpifing, louing, loue where I defpifd'e, Prifing her moft, where I was loweft prif'de. Thus my affections to diftractions turn'd, Made me mourne more then louer euer morn'd.

And Reafon too: for fome I had, my Friends, (At leaft they feem'd fo) which contemnd my griefe Nor fought to yeeld my filly heart releefe, With one poore comfort, but as diuers ends, Occafion ftrange effects; fo Loue depends (If I may call inconftant Friend/hip Loue,) On Fortune heere below, not truth aboue.

Let mee vnrippe my forrowes, that my breft H 3 May

102

May void fuch Scarabees, that vfe to fit Vpon each vlcer: whofe contagious witte, Is worfe then Hellebore, for they infeft The pureft Manfion, louing euer left Where they flow moft Affection, for their ftraine, Is not for loue but profit, and their gaine.

Record them (fweet Euenus) for they hate, Thy facred ftreams : wafh not their foyled fin With thy pure liquor : for the Æthiops skin, Will be blacke ftill : the doome of enuious fate, (Like Mammons heires) fits skouling ore their ftate : Their Summer-Swallows flourifh, they make one, But if thy flate be blafted, they are gone.

And thou (Bleft Hymen) that confirmes the loue, Of Mortall foules, with thy diuineft rites, Knows whom I mean by, for they quench thy lights By their abufe : but there's a power aboue, Will dafh their gainefull tradings, and remoue, Their Bartring from the earth, to th'depth of hell, That teach in Marriage how to buy and fell.

Yet deere Euenus, I have more to fpeake, For I would have thee carry me commends, To fuch as be my true approved friends, (For fome I have will neither bow nor breake) Mid'ft my afflictions : but by all meanes feeke To re-infufe life in me: pray the tell When by their house thou goest, that I am well.

And

And if they aske thee how I brook this place Where I'me retired to: fay, as louers vfe, Pent from their loues, they cannot will, nor chufe, But liue an Hermits life, and in difgrace Of beauty and her name, hath made his face Like times annatomie (poore Sceleton) An object fit for Ruth to looke vpon.

Tell them the bookes I reade, be fuch as treate, Of Amadis de Gaul, and Pelmerin, Furious Orlando, and Gerilion, Where I obferue each fashion and each feate, Of amorous humors, which in my conceipt, Seeme to to rare, That they that were fo strong, Should be fo mad, and I be tame fo long,

But prefently I recollect my fenfe, And findes a reafon: queftionles I'me mad But who cares for't, or markes it ? if I had Land (like an elder brother) Eminence Of fome Court-Comet, would have prefidence, Ouer my braine-pan: and would beg my wit, Though neither he nor I could mannage it.

So though I loofe my wits I cannot loofe My lands, they reft fecure ; where? can you tell? VVhere? yes, where not? wil't pleafe thee buy, I'le fel: VVhat? wit? I haue none; counfell? neither: houfe? The arch of Heauen's my couer; pray excufe My Error, I am pore; I'haue naught to fell

But

103

But teares and those I cannot part with well.

But (pray thee) fpare thy fpeech to fuch as be, And euer were profeffed foes to loue, And Bayne to marriage, for by them I proue The depth of difcontent : they loue not me, Nor doe I care for't : once I hope to fee, Enuie without a fting, which ftill extends Her hatefull power vnto depraued ends.

Yet if thou chance to flide by Enuies place, (Which by this true difcription thou fhalt know) Her ftructures ruin'd are, and there doth grow, A groue of fatall Elmes, wherein a maze, Or labyrinth is fram'd: heere Enuies race, Had their beginning, For there's yet to fee, The very throne where Enuy vf'd to bee.

Tell that (proud minion) that ambitious dame, Whofe meagre look and broad dis/heaueld lock, Whofe dangling nofe, fhap't like an apricock, Makes her defert-leffe proud, that I doe blame Her vniuft dealing, though I fcorne to name, Th'uniuftneffe of it: yet this vowe i'le make, I'le nere truft long-nos'd Female for her fake.

> > Could

Could fhe (hard hearted fhe) for priuate gaine, (Such lucring Mammonifls the heauens difpleafe,) Sell both the love and liking of her Niece, And where love fhewd her moft, there to reftraine, Affection within bounds ? fweet ftreames complaine, To Iuno on't, I know fhee'l pitty me And grant my fuite—That fhe may barrain be.

VVe haue too manie of that odious brood, VVe neede no more : it is a fruitleffe fruit, That fhames the Parents :—Juno heare my fuit, For it will doe both heauen and earth much good, And be a caueat vnto woman-hood ; "Rather in Marriage not to deale at all, Then to fet Marriage facred rites at fale.

Farewell (Euenus) I have writ my minde, VVhich I would have thy ftreamelings to convey To Envies houfe, by that frequented way, Which as a Port or Haven is affign'd To every paffenger: Sweet breathing winde Breath on thy failes, that when thou doeft complain, Remembring me, thy teare-fwolne eies may raine, And fructefie the earth: That time may fhowe, This did Evenus for her Poet doe.

Certaine Select Epigrams, made good by obferuance, experience, and inftance: with an introduction to Time, including fundry conceipted pass, no leffe pleasant then present.

It's a mad world my Masters.

O Age what art thou made of? fure thou art, Compof'd of other mettall then thou wert, Once was thy glory by thy vertues showen, But now alas thy vertues are vnknowen. (day For who fhould fhow worth but great men? yet each Shews by experience, None more ill then they, VVhere Honour on a foote-cloth's wont to paffe, Like Appians Land-Lord on his trapped Affe. 'Laffe I haue feen what I haue grieu'd to fee, Honour with vertue nere keepe companie. But if they doe (as fome obferuance make) It's not for Confcience, but for fashion fake.

O then how vaine is time, to fhowre down good, On fuch as are but great, only by blood ; Not true demerits which makes me contemne, The idle paffions of phantafticke men, VVhich think't fufficient to be great in ftate, VVithout leaft vertue fit to imitate : This makes me hence conclude : vice puts on honour : "For vertue, there is none will looke vpon her.

I in my time have seene an vpstart Lord. Raifed to fudden honour like a Gourd. Whom in as small time I may chance to see, As Ionah's gourd, fo withered he may be, And what's the caufe ? becaufe its not demerit Or true defcent, by which he doth inherit, Such new ftolne honors : for then might his name Freely fuch eftimation feeme to claime : But an infinuating humour drawen, "From that fame force of vice, that lothfome fpawne Of all diftempered paffions, which can be Mark't with no better name then flatterie. And is this way to purchase honour trewly? Can fuch a man be favd to merit dewly? VVhen hows'ere we admire him for his feate. "It was not worth, but basenesse made him great, O Time, how ftrangely art thou varied, From what thou once appear'd; how art thou led By every fashion-monger that doth stand More on the egge-fying of his band

His peak't munchattoes, his Venetian hofe, His Buskin-pace, how Gorgon-like he goes, His crifpled haire, his fixing of his eye, His cerufs-cheeke, and fuch effemnacie : "Then on tru-man-like Vertues : for its common, Women are liker men, men liker women ; Sith I no other difference can make. 'Twixt man and woman faue the outward fhape Their mind's all one : nor doth their fhape appeare Much different : fince women th'breeches weare : Which fashion now to th'Countrey makes refort, In imitation of their weare at Court ; Where it is fayd to fhun the meanes of finnen, Came that vse vp to weare their breekes of linnen ; And can we fee this and not pittie it When men that have more complement then wit, Shine in the eye of popular refpect, And others of more worth droope in neglect ? We cannot : yet must we admire them still, (That worthleffe are) though't be againft our will, What remedy? Ile tell thee, though thou dare not, But congy when thou meets them : laugh & fpare not So't be in private, burft thy fides with laughter, And whileft th'rt laughing, Ile come lashing after : Mean time (with filence) I would have thee hear me. That have compos'd these Epigrams to cheere thee.

Take them how ere they be : if fowre in tafte, Reforme thy errors which are former paft : If fweet, let th'relifh of my poems moue That loue in thee, to thanke me for my loue :

108

To the Precifian.

FOr the Precifian that dares hardly looke, (Becaufe th'art pure forfooth) on any booke Saue Homilies, and fuch as tend to th' good Of thee, and of thy zealous brother-hood : Know my Time-noting lines ayme not at thee, For thou art too too curious for mee. I will not taxe that man that's wont to flay "His Cat for killing mife on th'Sabboth day : No ; know my refolution it is thus, I'de rather be thy foe then be thy pus : And more fhould I gaine by 't : for I fee, The daily fruits of thy fraternity. Yea, I perceiue why thou my booke flould fhun, "Becaufe there's many faultes th'art guiltie on : Therefore with-drawe by me thou art not call'd, Yet do not winch (good iade) when thou art gall'd, I to the better fort my lines difplay, I pray thee then keep thou thy felfe away.

109

The Church-Knight.

Church-man was there on a time I reade, Of great eftate his father being dead, Which got, his Syrpe-cloth he difcarded quite, Refoluing fully now to be a Knight: Vp to the Court he goes with fpeede he can, Where he encountred a North-britaine man, With whom difcourfing in his Euening walke, He fpoke of Knights 'mongft other idle talke, How th'title it was worthie, and that he, Could well endure entitled fo to be : For I do reade (quoth he) of fuch as these Within the Ecclefiafticke hiftories: What fame and honour they obtain'd by warre, Which fir (belieue me made me come thus farre, That I (if meanes or mony could obtaine it) Might in respect to my profession gaine it. The Brittanne his profession did require : A Curate once, quoth he, of Brecknocke-fhire, Helde, I may fay to you, a learned man ; But fince my fathers death turn'd gentleman. I ioy me in th'occafion th'Brittan fayd, (Doubt not fir Prieft) you shall a Knight be made ; And you deferue't : for though Knights common are "Holy church-knights, fuch as you be, feeme rare, To Long-lane goes the Curate to prouide, An ancient fuite, and other things befide ;

As

As skarfe and rofes all of different colour, ler, Which bought, at White-friers ftaires he takes a Scul-Prepar'd with refolution all the fooner, To gaine this priuiledge and Knightly honour; VVhich hauing got by long petitioning fuite, And pai'd vnto the Brittain his firft fruit, (grieue him To's Neighbors ftreight he hies, where they much "For, fwearing he's a knight, they'le not belieue him Nor would they (fuch incredulous men were thefe) Till he had fhowen difcharge for all his fees.

An Epigramme alluding to the fecond Satyre of Ariosto, where he taxeth the Clergies pride and Ambition.

The Church-mens doctrine is humility, (they, Yet but obferue them, who more proude then VVhofe Damaske caffockes fhew their vanitie. How fhould we then beleeue them what they fay, "Since what they taxe vs in, themfelues bewray : Its too too true : fo that oft-times the Temple, (Though th' houfe of God, giues lay-men worft ex-(ample.

Crucem

Crucem & coniugem vno petimus fato, Hanging and marrying goe by deftinie.

It is an axiome in Philosophie, " Hanging and marrying goe by destinie; Both reference haue vnto the doome of fate. Both doe our birth and nature calculate : Nor can we fay these two be different far. Sith both haue influence from one ominous ftar, Which bodes our happineffe or our mischance According to the starres predominance : This made Arminus Carthage-Ruler fay "That with a wife he could not well away : For being askt why he with others fhare not, Good fortune in good wives (quoth he) I dare not, For if I chance to light on one that's wife, "She will be wilfull, felfe-lov'd, or precife, "If wealthy, wanton, vowing to her friend, "I fhall be Cocold ere a fortnight end : "If poore then peeuifh, of condition fhrewde: "If bewtifull fhe will be monftrous proude; "And if deformed, lothfome is fhe then, "And th'leaft of these would kill a thousand men.

But now fuppofe, I could no longer tarrie, But that I might doe either worfe or marrie, And that I fought a wife to fit my turne, (For better tis to marrie then to burne) (riage) Though many (they may thank their own good car-Are all afire the first day of their marriage :

Why

Why then as my polition was at first, This marriage-day is either beft or worft I ere was maister of: for if my wife Be loyall as fhe ought, then is my life Made double bleft in her, where I may fay, " Each day lookes cheerefull like a mariage-day, But if felfe-will'd vntamed, head-ftrong, froward, Immodeft, indifcreete, peeuifh, vntoward: Why then through th'fury of her in-bred malice, In climing to her bed, I clime to th' gallowes. Where euery word that doth proceed from her Strangles me like an Executioner ; Her humour is my neck-verfe, which to fort I cannot, if I should be hanged for't, Her tongue's my torture, and her frisking taile, Flies vp and downe like to a wind mills faile, Her hands like Fullers wheels, one vp, one downe, Which ftill lie malling on my coftrell crowne : VVhich ere I would endure to take her banging, I would goe round to worke and take a hanging : Since therefore Fate hath doomed this to thee, Hanging or wining patient thou must be.

I

An

II3

1. 10× 1.

An Epigramme called the Cambrian Alchymist.

The Planet-ftroken Albumazar, Shaues the Mufes like a razor; Fayry-like we therefore fhun them, Caufe there is no haire vpon them, Mufes loofe their ornament, Cambria has their excrement.

Excrement ? it's true indeede, Haire growes from th'exceffe of feede, Which by inftance fmall doth varie From th'peere-leffe Seminarie; Which to make her worth allow'd, Shrowdes her proiect in a clowde.

In a Clowde? its rather fhowne, like the man that's in the Moone, Where our Iles Ardelio, Defcants of Tom Trinkillo;

Form'd

Form'd like one that's all in mift, Like a fecond Alchymift.

Strange the Project was I with Of this Metamorphofis ; Nought was (if I vnderftood) Good, but that it was deem'd good By the great : ô worthy feate, To be worthleffe deemed great.

Vpon divine Roscius.

Two famous Rofcio's chanc't I to efpie, Acting a Metamorphofis, while I Sleepe vnder th'couert of a fhady wood, VVhere great Archyas for the vmpire ftood, VVho did their feuerall actions thus define, "Art-full the one, the other moft diuine.

I 2

Vpon

Epigrams.

Vpon Rofcius Hackney, in a Dialogue betwixt Expedition, & Endimion.

- Exped. WHy-ho, Endimion; how th'Dormoufe Awake for fhame, open thy wink a-peeps!
- Endim. What flur you make, I come with fpeed I can (and too much fpeed) for I have tyr'd my man;
- Exped. Who, Dulman?
- Endim. Yes.
- Exped. I thought the Iade would fhame vs, And play vs one horfe-tricke for Ignoramus.

Vpon TARBON the Countrey Gentleman.

TArbon they fay is mellancholly growne, Becaufe his wife takes phificke in the towne : VVhy, that's no caufe ; who would not hazard faire To leaue both land and name vnto his heire ? Yea, but he doubts, (fo iealous is the man) That th'phyficke workes not but Phyfitian. VVhich if he finde, he fweares he meanes to call, The child not Tarbon but young Vrinall.

(Reeps,

O monftrous, by this thou'ft truly fhowe, Thy wife a punke, thou needs not call her fo : VVhich with thy fowre eyes Talbon if thou finde, Ile neuer truft face, confcience, nor kinde.

An Epigram called the Court-Attourney.

WW Ho's yon, young Stephano? why fure you ieft, You gallants ride with 4 coach-horfe at leaft; Befides there is euen in his very eye, A kinde of Court-like formall maieftie : Its true; yet it is he : for you muft know, Young Stephano is turn'd a Courtier now VVhich makes him complete, and whers'ere he goe, He has his ducke, or its not worth a ftrawe : But I do doubt, nor be my doubts in vaine, The Courtier muft Atturney turne againe. And then he muft be ftript of euery ragge, And fall againe vnto his buckram-bagge : If this befall, I fhall be forry for't, Sith Iohn aftyles gets but fmall grace at Court.

I 3

An

An Epigramme called the Winde-fall.

C Ir Senfuall (a wanton Prieft) there was Who made appointment with a Countrie laffe, That 'gainft the time from market fhe'ft returne, He would keepe tutch and doe her a good turne. The place where thefe two louely mates fhould meet Was a vaft forreft vnfrequent'd with feete of any paffenger, faue fuch as were Keepers of th'wood, 'mongft which a Forrefter, Vpon occasion chaunc't to come that way, And heard eue-dropper-like what they did fay, Their place of meeting, with the maides confent Which he refolv'd as quickly to preuent. And being vnder fhade fecurely fconft, Which place he had elected for the nonft, He staies to see th'returne of this same Lasse, (which as fhe wifh't) did quickly come to paffe: For Maids that know not what tis to confent To a loft Maiden-head, nor what is meant by giuing of a greene gowne, fooner will Affent to ill, becaufe they know no ill,

Then

Then fuch as have of active pleafures ftore, For well were they experienft in't before. Yea fuch will neuer deale vnleffe they fmell, Some hope of gaine, or like the trader well. At last the maide having her market made, (Perhaps far fooner then her Parents bade) With clothes tuckt vp returnes with fpeedy pace, Downe by the Forrest to'th appointed place. Where'th Prieft Sir fenfuall lay all this while, That he the Maid might of her gem beguile. If you had feene what meeting there was then, Betwixt thefe two, you would have you'd no men Of any ranke or order were fo good. As Church-professors vnto woman-hood. So humble was the prelate, as to pleafe. The fhamefast maid, he oft fell on his knees. VVhile mumbling pater nofters on her lips, Down fell his breeches from his naked hips. And all this while poore foule fhe ftood ftock ftill, Not thinking (on my confcience) good or ill. At laft the iolly Prieft (when all was fhowne, That he could fhow) wil'd th'maid to lay her down, Vpon a fhadie banke, which with all forts, Of flowres was checkerd fit for Venus fports. She (though fhe were refolu'd no ill could be By lying downe, yet in her modefty) VVould not vnto his motion fo affent, Yet let him blow her downe fhe was content. The fhort-breath'd Prieft (for he was wondrous fat) And ftuff'd withall, makes me no bones of that,

I 4

But

Epigrammes.

But Æolus-like puf's vp his cheeks well growne, And he no fooner blows then fhe was downe. The Forrefter who all this time had ftood, Vnder a fhadie couert of the wood, Steps in, when'th Prieft his fhriuing fhould begin, Saying all wind-falls they are due to him. Manie fuch Priefts auncient records doe fhow, And prefent times may fhow as many now.

Another Epigram called, A Cuckold with a witnesse.

VVilie wench there was (as I have read) AVVho ví'd to capricorne her husbands head, VVhich he fuspecting, lay in private wait, To catch the knaue, and keep his wife more ftrait. But all in vaine : they day by day did mate it. Yet could his foure eies neuer take them at it. This fubtile wench perceiuing how they fhould At last preuented be, doe all they could : For now Italian-like her husband grew, Horne-mad I wifh, and kept her in a Mew. Inuent'd a trick, which to accomplifh better, Vnto her friend fhe clofely fent a letter. And thus it was; Friend you shall know by me, My husband keepes me far more narrowlie, Then he was wont, fo as to tell you true, You cannot come to me; nor I to you.

Yet

120

Epigrammes.

Yet fpite of his eies and as many more, VVele vfe those pleafures which we vfd before : Onely be wife, and fecond what I wifh : Which to expresse (my friend) know this it is. My husband as he hates the horne to weare. Of all the Badges forth, fo feares he'th Beare, More then all other Beafts which doe frequent The heathy Forrests spacious continent. If thou wilt right me then, and pepper him, Couer thy feruant in a falfe Beares skin. And come to morrow, as thou vf'd before, Tying thy feruant to my chamber dore. After this quaint direction he attirde His man in beare-skin as fhe had defir'de Entring the chamber he received is With many a fmile, back-fall, and fweetned kiffe : For they'r fecure, of all that was before, Hauing a Beare that kept the Buffe from dore. The wittall foole no fooner inckling had, Then vp the ftaiers he ran as he were mad. But feeing none but th' Beare to entertaine him, Of Hornes he neuer after did complaine him.

I 2 I

In

122

In Romanum Mnestorem.

I T chanc't two Romane Conuerts on a day, For pater nofter at the Cards to play; She mop'd, he pop'd: his popping could not get her, "For fhe thought popping elfewher had been fitter. Thus he went home no wifer then he came, Sith popping was the Puppies chiefeft game.

In Poetam Hippodramum. O R Post-riding Poet.

T tooke a Poet once I'th head to poaft, For what I know not, but I'me fure it coft His purfe far more (as I haue heard forms fay) Then ere his Mufe was able to repay.

In Numularium antiphylon.

CAfh-coin'd ? its true; but he intends to be The ftamper of that Coine is due to me. Pray thee (my friend) forbeare to fet it on, (My ftampe I meane) till I haue throughly done : And I proteft to thee, when I haue ended, I'le yeeld to thee, if fhe fay thou canft mend it.

In

In Romanum Sacerdotem.

A Romane Prieft came to abfolue a Virgin by the way, As he in his Proceffion went : where hee refolu'd to ftay A night. For what? not to abfolue the tender Virgins finne, But as a Ghoftly Fathers wont, to let more errors in : The doore was fhut, the candle out, for I would haue you mark, A carnall Father beft abfolues a Virgin in the darke : Which abfolution fo increafd, in zeale and purity, As within fixe and forty weekes it grew a Tympany, A girle forfooth, baptized Ioan, nor is it any fhame, For th' wench in time may prove Pope Ioan the fecond of that name.

In Phylætum.

M. P. J. C. S. 2 1, 12 -

Phylætus writing loue-lines on a day, A Ratte came in and ftole his lines away. Phyletus flept on ftill, and minded not While th'hungry Ratte eat vp the lines he wrote; If I were to be Iudge, as much may be, The Rat fhould be in loue, Phyletus free. That feeing th'faucy Rat to loue enthrall'd, Loue-bayne heereafter might be Rats-baine call'd.

An

An Epigram called the Courtier.

N OW heaven preferue mine eyefight what is here? A man made vp in Wainfcot? now I fweare, I tooke him for fome Coloffe ; fure I erre, This is not he : yes : this's the Courtier, Braue Pun-tevallo, for those armes he beares, (An Affe-head rampant) and that chaine he weares. By bleft Saint Martin, doe defcry it's he. Well, ile observe his carriage narrowly. VVhat makes him go fo ftiffe, has he the gout ? No, but a fire in's hams that went not out These feuen yeares to my knowledge : then it has Begun (it feems bout time) when th'glaffe-work was. Its true, it did fo, I have heard fome fay, He has a pleafant wit, he has one way A pretty thriuing wit, can make a legge, And harken out what office he may begge. Can looke as big and burly on fuch men, (Poore Gnats) that come for to petition him. As Giants in a Pagent, can proteft, For meere formality, laugh at a ieft, (Without conceiuing ont) has witte enough, To put good clofe on, beare his face in's ruffe.

Like

The Courtier.

Like a braue fprightly Spaniard, will not let, With fome new minted oaths to pay his debt, And can difpenfe with them, nor does he more, In this, then what his Elders did before. VVith truth (in complement) he feldome meetes. For naked truth with Eue lies without sheetes, And he endures not that, nor can incline, To fuch a motion, but in progreffe time. He cannot blufh (no more can women now) Till that their pretie painter tell them how. He ha's a kind of vaine in fonnetting, Purchaft by brocage or by pilfering, With which he wooes his miftreffe, he will fet, His face to any fashion, and will bett, VVagers on Ladies honours : having forgotten VVhat he fhould fpeake, hee's fingering his button, Or fome fuch trifling action, till he ftore himfelfe with wit, which he had loft before : Nor did that Morall erre, who wifely would, Compare a Courtiers witte to th'Marigold. It opens with the Sunne, but beeing fet The Mari-gold fhuts vp, fo doth his witte. The Marigold's most cheer'd by mid-day funne, So's he, whence i'ft, he lies in bed till noone. Occasion is his Cupid, lust his lure, Pleafure his Pander, dalliance his whoore, He h'as but one receipt of making loue, And being put out, he cannot fpeake, nor moue, But like a liue-leffe image, feemes to be, Till by good hap his fpeech recouered be.

He

The Courtier.

He fmells of Complement, in prefence faire, And vies oft to weare bracelets of haire, Swearing they came from fuch, but tis not fo, For t'was fome tyre-woman he tooke them fro. The Ornaments which he admires are thefe. To faune, to obferue times, to court, to pleafe, To make ftrange faces, fleeke his prefum'd skin, Starch his Mouchatoes, and forget his finne. To dance, to dice, to congie, to falute, To ftamp, to ftalke, to finger well a lute. To tremble at a Cannon when it fhootes. To like, diflike, and fill his head with doubts. To be in passion, wind his carelesse armes, To plie his Mistresse with delightfull charmes. To be for all, yet ignorant in all, at a state state state To be difguifd, and ftrange fantafticall : Briefly to be, what all his kind haue beene, Seeme what they be not, be what least they seeme. Such is my Puntauallo, and in time No queftion but hee'l prooue true Pantomime, To imitate all formes, fhapes, habits, tyres Suting the Court, and forting his defires, And then what th'Satyre faid, fhall well appeare : The Deuill is the perfects Courtier. Hauing my complete Courtier thus defin'd, I have no more that I can call to minde, "Saue what is common, and is knowne to all,

"That Courtiers as the tide doe rife and fall,

So I will end with what I have writ before,

" Till the'next tide come, and then I wil write more.

Vpon

Vpon his much honoured friend Mafter William A fcam, and his felected Temple.

VVhofe Anagram is produced by the Poet.

Hoc Anagramma tenes Gulielmi)—Sum via Luci Alma, per æthereos qua iuuat ire locos. Quæ via? virtutis via lactea, quæ tibi nota eft : Nec minor Exemplis Gloria parta tuis.

Epigram.

In Templo, Venerem Spectet Qui amat Venerem.

Aske him what Temple most delighteth him, And hee'l replye, that Temple thou art in.

Nec Venus est quæ nomen habet veneris, sed Amica Casta deæ Arcadiæ, Delia nomen habet, &c.

Looke

The Courtier.

Aske him what Praiers should in that Temple be, And he'le replie, what prayers best liketh thee. Aske him what Temple yeelds him most content, And he'le reply thy Temple, ther's his Saynt. Aske him what Temple's purer then aboue. He'le fay thy Temple: there's the Queene of Loue; Then let me aske your iudgement is't not fit,

That Temple honour him, that honours it?

Posies vpon bracelets.

As loue giues life to euery part, So this giues life vnto my hart : This chaftly lies, and liues with me, O that I might doe fo with thee ?

Another.

How might I triumph in my bliffe; If loue were where my Bracelet is. For then fhould loue do no fuch harm To wring my heart, but wreath my arme.

An

An Eglogue betweene Billie and Iockie called the Mushrome.

Iockie.

X [Hon Billie whon, what faire has thou bin at? Thouse be so trim, I mickle torken at : For wele I wate, last time I met with thee, Thou hardly had a lapp to fivedle thee. Pray thee (good Bille,) tell me fwith and foone, Iockie may doe what Billy late has done. Billie. What Iockie (lither lurden) leffe for wea, Thou'st be so tattert, but theres many sea, That ill can wappe it : but be vif'd by mee, And thou or lang fall glish in brauery. Swatt on thy tayle man, heeres a blythy place, And ile enfure thee how I gat this grace.

* Ecloge apud Lucianum extat quæ hocticulo plane inscribitur, Mirica nimrium, quam Fungum effe existimo, intempestive orientem arentemque, Sc. Eo nomine Romanos Sabini appellauere, Gallos Romani, Tuscos Itali, insimo nempe genere, & ignota gente orta, fubitoque prouectos, Sc. K

Iockie

Iockie. Mickle may Bille thrine, as hees begun, My lugges are lithing, Bille now iogge on. Billy. Then heare me Iocky. Bout mid-belten twas Or Ife bethought awrang, when I must passe, Ore th' Breamy bourne, and (wele'I traw) I had, Smaw gere (at tat tide) but a lether-bagge, A Motley iacket, an a flop of blew, It was my Fadders, I mun tell thee true. A lang youd I, (and langer then thoule fay) And wele, I knew not whether, ne what way, Fute-fare I was, for Bille shoon had neane, But an aud pare with him, and they were gane. Nor hofe-legs (wele I wate) but skoggers and, That hardly hap't poore Billes legs fra caud. Hate was my weafin, empty was my maw, And nane I met with, I could ken or knaw, So vncath was the gete (as but for [hame) I had com'd backe toth place fra whein I came, For filer had I skant, nor leffe nor mare, Then three Bawbees, Ile tell thee all my ftare. But lith me Iocky (after many a mile) At last I hapt to light vpon an Ile, Bu Come and full a gere, and full a store, For Bille neuer met with like before, Sae Greathy was the place where I was driven That I me ficker thought I was in Heauen.

But

But wele Ife fure they that this Iland kept, Were by our Whilome Fathers Angels clept. And wele they might be fo, for wele I wate, They were fine men, and men of mickle state. Had lufty huffes (that were tricke and trim,) Cud wele don on their geere, with every pin. Heere flood I musing lang full heavily, Till lockie wha dost thinke speard vp to me. Iockie. Wha Bille mot that be? Bille. Ane wha thou kens. Cand ane, we raught on meanely, but now sene, He has the pricke and preze Ile fay to thee. Iockie. Was it not Lobbie? Bille. Iocky it was he. But now the mickle Lurden is fo great, Theyr bleft by God, that may with Lobbie (peake. By Gods bread Iockie, he fo gaish was, I thought no boot to speake, but let him passe, And had done fo, but Lobby was fo kinde. To come to me, and leave his men behind. Great chat we had, and many that were nye, Musd he would chat with sike an ene as I. But blith was Lobbie, and so meeke he was, That he vnhorst sate by me on the grasse, Lang did we tauke of this thing and of that, A lugge, a Peggy, and a nut-brown Kate,

A

A Crowd the Piper, and the Fiddler Twang, And many fike things, as wee layen alang. Ablang ft the leave, this Councell gave he mee, That made me wele to leve, so may it thee. Billie (quoth Lobby) if thoule profper heere, Thou mun be bald, and learne to bandon feare, Thou mun not blush, nor colour change for ought, Though th' plea thou haft in hand be nere fo nought. Thou mun not take petition (lithen me) Nor entertaine him, till thou take thy fee, And (wele I warne thee) better way thou thrine, If thy hand open be to aw that give. Get mee some prollers, they are best of all, To make thee weet, when some good office falls, Or a barre-hoisted Lawyer that can fee, With his foure eyne where and concealments be, But of aw things I mun fore-warne thee hence, To have small dealing with a Conscience. That will vndoe thee (Billy) looke to one, (none. Poore men haue Confcience, but rich men haue 'Mong ft other things liften to what I fay, For I in briefe will speake now what I may. In Teucria here (this Citie where there be) Many a man will have an eye of thee, Gaine me Acquaintance : it's the spring of life, And know thou maift a Tradefman by his Wife. Be The Mushrome.

Be ficker on her Billye, the it is Can ope her husbands Casket with a kisse. Dive me into a Mercers Booke, and fay, Thoul't pay on fike a time, but doe not pay. Chauke me on Vintners, and for aw thy skore, Let great words pay for aw, still run on more. Be stately Billy (and I doe thee rede) Thou mun now throw away thy countrey weed. For skoggers, hozen of the Naples twine, For thy blew flop, fike a breeke as mine : For thy and motley iacket, thou mun weare, A cloth a filuer, fike as I have heere. Then mun thou looke big (what way ere thou paffe) As if that Billy were not th' man he was. Then learne me Billy fome and Pedegree, Noe matter though't belong not vnto thee, And fay thy Grand-fire was a Duke at least, And first inventor of Saint Gallowayes feast. Maintaine me leeing in a Livery, For that's the first meanes that mun honour thee : Let her be Page-like, at thy elbow still, For when thou canft not doe it, leeing will, Let Suters dance Attendance, lithen me, And quicke dispatch, be it thine enemye. Take fees for expedition, for of aw, Sutes haftly ended wreake our ouerthrow.

 K_{3}

Get

The Mushrome.

Get me an Heralt (wele I wat) oth best, That may for Bille find some pretty Crest, A Rat, a Pismire, or a Butterflie, A Cornish Chucke, a Parrat, or a Pie, A nimble Squirrell, or a picke-a-tree A Wefell, Vrchin, or a Bumble-Bee. Or if of plants, my Bille will have ane, He may full swithly mange these chuse him ane. The Brier, the haw-thorne : or the Prinet bush, The Ofire, Cypreffe, or where th'merry Thrush, Sings out her Fa, la, la, but nane there be, "That like the Mushrome Bille fitteth thee, Her grouth is fudden, Bille fo is thine, Then take the Mushrome, its a Creft of mine. Mare need I not fay, keepe but wele my reede, And fiker Ife, thou cannot chufe but speede. With that he twin'd fra me, and left me there, Where I with mickle Carke, and mickle Care, Buftling now vp now downe, at last me yode, To ply my leffon wele I understood, And in a pretty while I learnd to bee, That cunning Clerke that he awarded me. Deftly could I tricke vp me fell, and trim, Me featly fine, in every legge and limme, Wele cud I marke my name in Marchants books, Fo wele I wate, wha ere he be, that lookes,

Ife

The Mushrome.

I se there in black and white, and wele I may, For he is faid to aw that menes to pay. Not a petion would I listen ore, Till Billie had fam chinke in's fift before. Not a rich mickle lossell could there be, That had a plea but had his path by me. And fine I fau as Lobbie teld beliue, That he that had a confcience could not thriue. I draue the Haggard frame, fine whilke time, Iockie thou fees how Billie gins to fhine. Iockie, And lang may Billie shine, but sayne to me Fare aw our Coustrils haufe as wele as thee, Billie. Iockie they doe, nor neede thou t'arken out, For we will feede, wha ever famish for't : O its a place so full of Iouisance, Play but thy round the Ilanders will daunce. Ladies & Lordings, Swainelings with their Will trimly trip it ore the leuie plaines. (fwaines, And wele I wat that lockie ance could play, For I have heard him,----Iockie. And fo Billie may. Billie. Then tune thy chanter vp and gae with me, Come blithly on,-Iockie. Iockie does follow thee.

 K_4

А

136

A Panegirick Embleame, Intituled, Saint George for England.

The Argument of the Embleame.

From whence the English anciently derived this Saints canonization, his orders, inauguration—of Sigifmund, Emperour of Almaine: and his prefent to Henry the fift. The institution of this order where, the folemnizing where: the feuerall games, exercifes, Races, and Martiall trialls auspiciously begunne with that Saint.—And the like of Honour and aduancement.—A comparison had betweene Perfeus fonne to Iupiter and Danae; who preserved Andromoda from the sea monster, and Saint George, who slew the Dragon. The discription of Perfeus, and of Saint George: concluding with a victorious Pæan to Saint George.

The Embleame.

H Aile to thy fhrine thou Saint of Albion, Who had thy auncient confectation

From

137

From thy religious mannagements, as farre Difperft, as Turke or Christian planted are, Thou art the Saint which we in war doe vfe, Hoping by thee to be aufpicious. Yet void of superstition we impart, Sole laud to him, whose noble Saint thou art. Nor loofe we th' name of th' Almaine Sigifmund, By whom thy precious Reliques first were found. And heere prefented as a royall gift To Englands Mirrour, Henry the fift. Since when thy order is folemnized, At Windfor, where a part of thee is fed To be inter'd : thrice happy monument, To couer part of one fo eminent. So Saintly vertuous, as no honour can, " Give thee thy due, as onely due to man. O may thy inftitution honour'd be, By true deferts, and due folemnity. Nor whom thy order doth inaugurate, May they by vice ftand fubiect vnto hate. But fo euen weigh in all their actions here, "As Georges Knights may after Saints appeare : Which they fhall be, by flowing feruent zeale Vnto the Church, loue to the common-weale.

138 A Panegirick Embleme.

In all our games and paftimes feuerall, Euer on George as on our Saint we call: For by that name the auncients vnderftood, Their Fortune could not chufe but to be good, As Turnaments, Iufts, Barriers, and the reft, In which his name was euermore expreft. In Races too thefe prefent times affoord Inftances ftore, Saint George he gives the word. So as it was (as common ftories tell) To fay Saint George, as fay God fpeede you well.

In Martiall trials when our armies met, His name would fpirit in our men beget, "Heightning their courage, perills paffing through. "Standing defolu'd before a Cannons mouth. "Out-bearing danger, and with violent breath "Stand at defiance gainft the threats of death. Marching through horrour they would boldly paffe, (As for pale feare, they knew not what it was.) Which may be inftanc'd in that holy war, Where thofe that loft their liues canoniz'd are In leaues of perpetuity : I meane, In the regayning of Ierufalem, Where thofe renouned Champions enterprift, For the due honour of their Sauiour Chrift.

Either

139

Hee

Either to win that Cittie (maugre th'vaunts Of all those hellish god-lesse miscreants,) Or if they could not th' Cittie fo furprize, Refolv'd they were their liues to facrifice ; Even then I fay when those that Marshall'd them, Could not with-hold from flight their recreant men ; "Saint George appear'd in a fubmilfine show, "Wishing them not to wrong their Countrie fo : And though a ghoft (and therefore leffe belieu'd ; Yet was his mouing prefence fo receiv'd As none to fight it out refolued more, Then such as readiest were to flie before. Vp went their fcaling-ladders to difplant Th'abhorred of-spring of the miscreant, And euer as fome danger they efpide, God and S' George for England still they cride. And how fucceffiue that renowned warre Was to those Christians, which enrolled are In an eternall register, may well appeare "By Godfrey Bulloyne who was stiled there "King of Ierufalem, yet as its showne, "By auntient stories, would receive no crowne, " Thinking't vnfit that it (hould be rehear ft, "That where his masters head with thornes was pierst.

He that his feruant was fhould be fo bold, As have his head girt with a crowne of gold. What fame in forraine coafts this Hero got, The lake " Silene fhewes, if we fhould not ; Where in the reskew of a louely Mayde, A fearefull Dragon he difcomfited, So as we have portraide to every viewe, On fignes of Innes how George the Dragon flew; Which ftory to expresse were too too long, Being a fubiect for each fidlers fong : "Yet caufe there is (I cannot will nor chufe) Comparison 'twixt him and Perseus, VVho fonne to Ioue and fhowre ftain'd Danae," In reskew of the faire Andromade." Encountred that fea-monster; Ile explane Each attribute of their peculiar fame : "And then conferring them one with the other, " Collect whofe best their actions laide together.

And first for Perfeus; great I must confesse, He was in name, his birth inferres no lesse Being Ioues fonne, yet can he no way fhun The name of Bastard, though he were his fonne:

> ^m Sylene the pond or lake where the Dragon was.

Deflow-

Deflowr'd his mother was-and in a fhowre Of gold, to fhew how gold has foueraigne power, T' vnlocke the fort of fancy, and how foone " Women are wonne, when golden bayts are showne. Long Ioue had woo'd and yet he could not win What he defir'd, till gold receiv'd him in, Which feemes by eafie confequence to proue, " Gifts be the gives that biddes the hands of love. Thus fprung the noble Perfeus, who in time "To propagate the honour of that line From whence he came, and that it might be fed, That he from Ioue was rightly fathered Tooke on him ftrange aduentures ; as to right "Iniur'd Ladies by a fingle fight, "Encounter Giants, rescew men distrest, In each whereof his glory was repreft : "For valiant & more worthy they doe flew them, " That wrongs redreffe, then fuch as vfe to doe them. But th'first and best attempt he did on Earth, " Was, to wipe off th'blemish of his birth, And th'ftaine of his corrupted mothers honour, Which blufhes blaz'd who euer look't vpon her. " On them alone imagin'd it may be VVent he to th'reskew of Andromade;

VVho

Who now was markt for death, and brought to th' Where many maids had bin deuour'd before, (fhore By a fea-monfter: here the Virgin ftood, To free her Countrey with her guiltleffe blood, Whom Perfeus (as he coafted by that way) No fooner vew'd then he began to fay.

Faire Virgin (then he wept) impart to vs What rude vnhallowed hand hath vs'd thee thus And by the honour of my heauenly Sire What ere he be he fhall receive his hire. Giant or Monster in the earth or Sea. Reueng'd he fhall fweete Virgin tell it me. Kind Sir (quoth fhe) and then fhe ftaide her breath As one addreft to meditate of death, Treate not with me of life, nor aske who 'tis Giant or Monster that's the cause of this, Onely know this (thou gentle Knight) that I "Am doom'd to death, and I'me resolu'd to die. To die (faire Maide quoth he)? if't be thy fate, Ile fympathize with thee in equall ftate And die with thee: onely giue griefe a tongue, To tell me who's the Author of thy wrong : Know then (fayd he) I am that hapleffe fhe, The wretched, pittied, poore Andromade,

Who

143

Who here am left of friends, bereft of all To be a prey vnto a rauenous whale : Many haue fuffered ere it came to me, Now is my lot and welcome it fhall be, To expiate with my vnftained blood The Monfters wrath and doe my countrey good ; As fhe fpake this vp from the Ocean Came that deuouring vafte Leuiathan, Sweeping along the fhore, which being fpide; Good fir retire the noble Damfell cride, Yonder he comes for loue of honour flie, It's I am doom'd, then let me onely die. But Perfeus (one better tempered, Then to behold a Virgine flaughtered, Without affayd reuenge) did ftreight begin With man-like valour to encounter him. Doubtfull the skirmifh was on either fide. (While th'Maide a fad fpectator did abide) Wooing with teares which from her cheeks did flow That Ioue would give this Monfter th'ouerthrow : At laft her prayers and teares preuail'd fo well, As vnder Perfeus feete the Monfter fell ; Whence came it (as the ftory doth proceede) The Virgin and her Countrey both were freede:

VVhich

VVhich to requite (in guerdon of her life) -Se gaue her felfe to Perfeus as wife, * "Whom he received - ô he did ill in this, ... "Sith by the Auncient it recorded is. Before that Perfeus to her reskew came, She was espouled to another man " By name Vaxedor, (ô it was a finne To marrie her that was not dew to him :) And better had't been to fustaine her fate, " Then by fuch breach of faith to violate Her former Spoufals - which vniuft offence " Gods may winke at but never will dispence : Yea to a barraine Rocke though the were tyde, Yet better 'twas then to be made a Bride " To an vfurped Bed, for that did laie, " That staine on her, time cannot wipe away. Thus have you heard what noble Perfeus was VVith greateft dangers that his worth did paffe, The imminence whereof merits due praife, "And fuch a Poet as deferues the Baies : Laurell and Myrtle-though his Nuptiall knot " Lost him more fame then ere his valour got : "For so deprau'd's the Nature of our will, " What's good we laine, what's ill we harpe on still. Now

145

Now to thy English Saint, my Muse repaire, And lim him fo, that when thou fhalt compare Thefe two: He Perfeus may out-ftrip as farre, As funne the Moone, or th' Moone a twinkling ftar. GEORGE now enftil'd the Saint of Albion. By linage was a Capadocian : Whofe "valour was expreft in all his time, That vertue might in euery action fhine, VVhich to induce beliefe by mouing fence, I will produce his beft defcription thence, Both for th're femblance which hath ever bin. Twixt the renowned Perfeus and him : As alfo to make good, that not one ftaine "Eclipft that glory which his acts did gaine All which by inftance feconded fhall be "Perfeus was great yet George more great then he. Tutching that Dragon on Sylenes fhore, I haue in part related it before :

Yet but as fhadowes doe refemblance make, Vnto the fubftance and materiall fhape, Digreffiuely I onely feem'd to glance, At th'act it felfe, not at the circumftance :

ⁿ The Etimologie of GEORGE from Gera and Gion, War-like, or valiant.

Know then this noble Champion hearing one, Along his trauaile making piteous mone, In meere remorce drew neerer to the noice. "Till he perceiu'd it was a Ladies voice. VVho in a Virgin-milky-white araide, Show'd by her habit that fhe was a Maide; Careleffe her haire hung downe, and in her looke, Her woes were writ as in a Table-booke : Warm-trickling teres came ftreaming from her eies, Sighs from her heart, and from her accent cries. Tyed was fhe fast vnto a pitched stake, Bounding on Sylen's Dragon-haunted lake, All which exprest without a Character The wofull ftate which did enuiron her : Saint George obferv'd her teares, and from his eyes Her teares by his finde their renew'd fupplies, Both vie as for a wager, which to winne, "The more fhe wept, the more fhe forced him : At last with modest haujour in reliefe. Of her diftreffe, he thus allaide her griefe. "Sorrowfull Lady, if griefes lefned are, VVhen those that pittie griefes receive their share, Impart your forrowes to me, and in lew, "If right I cannot, I will pittie you.

Alasse

147

Alasse (fweet youth quoth she) pittie's too late, VVhen my difeafe is growen fo defperate, Yet doe I thanke thee for thy loue to me, That neuer yet deferu'd fo much of thee : "Pray thee begone, fuch friendship Ile not trie, To see thy death one is enowe to die, And I am fhee,-croffe not the will of Fate, "Better's to loofe one then a double state : Be gone I fay do not the time fore-flowe, "Perish I must of force, so needs not thou. Imminent horror would admit no more ; For now the Dragon from Sylenes fhore Came fpitting lothfome venome all about, VVhich blafted trees and dried vp their roote. S' George the Dragon had no fooner vew'd, Then fresh supplies of spirit was renew'd In his vnmatched breft : him he affailes. And though ore-matcht his fpirit neuer failes Till he fubdew'd him : and as fome auerre, He tyed him fast and made him follow her Vnto her fathers pallace, where we reade In publike triumph he cut off his head. Here may we fee that act of Perfeus Equall'd by George and made more glorious

L 2

In

In that he aym'd no further nor was fe'd "To put his feete into anothers bed, "His conquest it was temporate and iust, Not ftayn'd with blemish of defaming lust For no attempt vs'd he to vndertake, But for true honour and for Vertues sake.

A Victorious Pæan to our Albions St, alluding to all noble fpirits, natiue affumers of his Honor & Order.

I^ö Pean then must wee Giue St George the victorie : Whose desert Grac't each part ; Where so ere he vs'd to be, None more grac't, or lou'd then he.

Perfeus though his renowne, Did to all the world come; Yet one staine, Dimm'd his fame: But the world's spatious roome, Shrines St George in honours tombe.

A

A Satyre called the Coni-

Ow in the name of fate what Saint is fhe, That keepes a fhop of publicke Brothelrie? Harbours the fharking Lawyer for his pence, And Martir-like confumes his euidence ? Nufles my damned Atheift, makes him curfe Nature and fortune, that his thin-lin'd purfe Should be depriv'd of crowns: do you ask what St? This Saint was fent from th' fiery Regiment. A Sodome-apple, a lasciuious staine To vertues habite, or a whore in graine, A fucke-blood, Hyene, feigning Crocodile VVorse then the monfter bred on th' banks of Nyle, A purple Strumpet, Gangrene to the ftate, Earths-curfe, hels-bliffe, foules-foile, & Angels hate, Smoothed Damnation, fmothered infamie, Horror to Age, and youths calamity, Pritty-fac'd diuell of a ginger pace, Grace-leffe in all faue that her name is Grace, Soules-running vlcer that infects the heart, VVith painting, purfling and a face of Art.

Star

Star-blafting honour, vertues foe, expreft By hating where fhe feemes to fancy beft. Vow-breaking periure, that her felfe adornes, With thousand fashions, and as many formes. Creature of her owne making, hollow trunke, A Christian Paganif'd with name of Punke. A Cell, a hell, where fhe'le no others haue, The common Palliard-Pandor, Baud, or flaue, A cage of vncleane birds, which is poffeft, Of none faue fuch as will defile their neft. VVhere fries of Hell-hounds neuer come abroade, But in that earthly Tophet make aboade. VVhere bankrupt Factors to maintaine a ftate, Forlorne (heauen knows) and wholy defperate, Turne valiant Boults, Pimps, Haxtars, roaring boyes, Till flefht in bloud, counting but murders toyes, Are forc't in th' end a dolefull Pfalme to fing, Going to Heauen by Derick in a ftring. It's you damn'd proftitutes that foyle this land, VVith all pollutions, haling downe the hand Of vengeance and fubuerfion on the State, Making her flowrie borders defolate. It's you that ruine ancient families, Occafion bloodfhed, pillage, periuries. Its you that make the wicked prodigall, Strips him of fortune, heritance, and all, Its you that makes new Troy with factions bleede, As much or more then euer old Troy did. Its you (fin-branded wantons) brings decay, To publique states. Its you that hate the day,

But

But honour night: where every female finner Refembles th' Moone, that has a man within her. Lafciuious Burrowes, where there nothing are, But toufed, fullied, and ore iaded ware. No mufick but despaire, no other note, Saue fome French-language from a prophane throat : Noe other Accent then the voyce of hell, Where Stygian Circe mumbles ore her fpell. Shakes her pox-eaten joynts, and fends for fpies, To gaine her traders two fin-tempting eies. Where fhe in praife and honour of her trade Saies, that the Stewes were in th' beginning made, For the aduancement of a publick good, And well it may, if rightly vnderftood : For if in pleafures there fuch bitters be, As still repentauce lackies vanitie? If luft that's cal'd by th' fenfuall Epicure, The beft of mouing pleasures, and the lure, That for the inftance makes our organs rife, Thinking that place wee'r in is Paradice. If fhe (I say) bring forth no fruit at all, Saue news from'th Spittle, or the Hospitall. Drie rewmes, catarchs, difeafes of defpaire, Puritane-fniueling, falling of the haire. Akes in the ioynts, and ring-worme in the face, Cramps in the nerues, fire in the priuy place. Racking the sinews, burning of the gall, Searing the vaines, and bowels moft of all : Drying the head, which natur's wont to feede, Sucking the blood, whence all diftempers breede.

If

If beft of pleafures haue no other end, Mong'ft earth's delights, the haue we caufe t'extend, Our pure affections to an higher ayme, Then to corrupt the honour of our name. For prefent appetite : I thanke the whoor, Thou haft inftructted me to haue a power Ouer my fence by reafon rectified, And haft well neere my fenfes mortefied. I know thy habit, and (and I once haue fworne, But now recant it, that no earthy forme Was of like composition, but conceiuing, That th' period of thy pleafure was in having, And that thy luft was but defire of gaine, I curb'd my selfe that I fhould be fo vaine. To fpend my ftate, my ftock, my name, my nature, On such a brittle, fickle, faithleffe creature. Fond was my judgement when my reafon ftraid, To foile the honourd title of a maide, With brothell greeting, or a painted trunke, A rotten Tombe, a Bafaliske, a Punke. For tell me whore ? what bewty's in thee fhowne, Or mouing part that thou canft fay's thine owne ? The blufh that's on thy cheeke I know is made By 'th Painters hand, and not by nature laid : And that fame rofie-red, and lillie white, Which feemes to include a volume of delight, Is no more thine, then as it may be faid ; Faire is the waineskote when it's varnished. Yea I have heard fome of thy conforts fay, Thy night-face is not that thou wear ft by day.

But

But of a different forme, which vnderstood, Rightly implies too faces in one hood. Now my (prodigious faery) that canft take, Vpon occasion a contrary shape. Thou that canft varie habits and delight, To weare by day what thou putft of at night. Thou that with tempting motiues of despaire, Braiding the net-like treffes of thy haire, Smoothing thy brazed front, oyling thy skin, Taking a truce with Satan, and with finne. How canft thou thinke that I will loofe the light, Of my deare foule, to pleafe mine appetite? How canft thou thinke that for a moments fweete. Wherein the height of pleafures, forrows meete. I will engage that effence of delight For time eternall, measure infinite? How canft thou thinke I am fo void of fenfe, Or blinde, as not to know thy impudence? True, I was blind, when thy fin-Syren voice, Made me defpife my felfe, and make a choice Of foules-feducing Error : I was blinde, When I did hope contented ioyes to finde In fo profane a couer : Blinde was I When I expected ought but vanitie. In fuch an odious harbour : blinde I was To looke for vertue in fo vile a cafe. But now the glorious effence of my foule Tels me, For all thy vertue thou art foule. Spotted with Ermins, and that vanitie, Of which thar't proud, is like a leprofie.

VVhich

The Coniborrow.

VVich runnes to euery vaine, whofe very breath, Poifons the tutcher with infectious death. For whats complexion if I fhould fpeake true, (That which thou wears I meane) but what the Iew Of lothfome compositions's vfd to make, As th' fat of Serpents, and the flough of fnakes, VVith curfed fpittle or fleagme commixed is, And canft thou thinke this face deferues a kiffe ? No. odious Lecher that beflubbered face. That entertaines no figne nor ftampe of grace, That fin-reflecting eye, whose piercings are, VVounds to the soule, and to the mind a care, That artificiall blufh, that painted cheeke, VVhich neuer feekes, what woman-hood fhold seek, That whorifh looke drain'd from a wanton mind, Shall make me hate, where I was once inclin'd, Shall make me hate? O that I did not hate. Before this time : but forrow's nere too late. If feruent, and may I excluded be, If my refolues proceed not inwardly. Farewell, but well I doubt thou canft not fare, So long as thou doft lodge in this difpaire : Preuent me then the caufe, and thou fhalt fee, The effect thereof will foone preuented be: Till then adew: for till that time I (weare it,

Thy Connie-burrow is not for my Ferret.

Vpon

Vpon a Poets Palfrey, lying in Lauander, for the difcharge of his Prouender.

An Epigram.

I F I had liu'd but in King Richards dayes, Who in his heat of paffion, midit the force Of his Affailants troubled many waies Crying A horfe, a Kingdome for a horfe. O then my horfe which now at Liuery ftayes, "Had beene fet free, where now hee's forc't to ftand "And like to fall into the Oftlers hand.

If I had liu'd in Agamemnons time, Who was the leader of the Mirmidons, Mounting aloft as wantons in their prime, Of frolike youth, planting the Græcians In their due order, then this horfe of mine, "Had not bin thus confin'd, for there he might, "Haue fhowne himselfe, and done his mafter right.

If

If I had liu'd when Pallas horfe was made, Aptly contriu'd for th'ruine of poore Troye O then there had beene doings for my Iade, For he had beene fole author of annoy, Vnto the Troians : well as I haue faid, "He might be Pallas horfe in legge and limme, "Being fo neere proportion'd vnto him.

If I had liu'd in Pasiphaes raigne,

That lusty Laffe, in pleafure euer full, And perfect dalliance : O I bleft had beene, "She fure would loue a horfe, that lou'd a Bull, And better might it with her honour feeme. "A Bul's too fierce, a horfe more modeft aye, "Th'one routs and rores, the others anfwer's ney.

If I had liu'd in Alexanders age,

Crowning my youth 'mongft his triumphant heires, O then that prince, who in his heat of rage, Bad th'Macedons get ftallions for their Mares, More liuely and more likely would not gage, "His loue for nought, to fuch as mongft the reft, "Would bring a Stallion that could doe with beft.

If I had liu'd amongft th'Amazonites,

Thofe Warlike champions, monuments of Fame, Trophies of Honour, friends to choice delights, Who much defired to propagate, their name, "And therefore wifht that they fo many nights,

Might

"Might haue free vfe with men, in due remorce, For want of men would take them to my horfe.

If I had liu'd in Phaeton his daies, When with vngiddy courfe he rul'd the Sun, O then my Palfrey had beene of great prife, For hee's not head-ftrong, nor would haue out-run, His fellow-Horfes, but with gentler pace, As foft and eafie as the nimble wind, He would with hakney pace lagg'd on behind.

If I had liu'd when th'warre of Agincourt, Burnifh't with fhields as bright as Diamond, To which our nobleft Heroes made refort, O then my Stallion would haue kept his ground, And beene at razing of the ftatelieft fort, In all that Prouince : and though fmall he may, Yet am I fure he would not runne away.

If I had liu'd but in Don Quixotes time, His Rozinant had beene of little worth, For mine was bred within a coulder clime, And can endure the motion of the earth, With greater patience : nor will he repine At any prouender, fo mild is he, How many men want his humility ?

If I had liu'd when that proud fayry Queene, Boafted to run with fwift wingd Zephirus, Tripping fo nimbly ore the leuie greene,

Of Oetas flourie forreft, where each bufh, Taxt her prefumption : then my Horfe had beene, A Horfe of price, O then he had beene tride, And to no manger in fubiection tide.

If I had liu'd when Fame-fpred Tamberlaine Difplaid his purple fignalls in the Eaft, Hallow ye pamphred Iades, had beene in vaine, For mine's not pamphred, nor was ere at feaft, But once, which once 's nere like to be againe, How methinks would hee haue fcour'd the wheeles, Hauing braue Tamberlaine whipping at's heeles.

If I had liu'd but in our Banks his time, I doe not doubt, fo wittie is my Iade, So full of Imitation, but in fine, He would haue prou'd a mirrour in his trade, And told Duke Humphreis Knights the houre to dine Yea by a fecret inftinct would had power, To know an honeft woman from a whoore.

Well theres no remedy, fince I am poore, And cannot feede my horfe as I defire, I muft be forc't to fet a Bill oth dore, And with my Bill pay for my horfes hire, VVhich once difcharg'd, Ile neuer run o'th skore ; But for my Bill, (inuention play thy part,) And for my horfe-fake, tell men what thou art.

Heere stands a beast that eats and ha's no teeth,

Wiske

160

Wiske out and winches, and yet has no tayle, Looks like Deaths-head, and yet he is not death, Neighs like an Affe, and crawleth like a fnayle, All bones aboue, no belly vnderneath, "Legg'd like a Cammell, with a Sea-horfe foote, "So bigg's his head he cannot be got out.

Now generous fpirits that inhabit heere, And loue to fee the wonders of this Ifle, Compar'd with other nations, draw but neere And you fhall fee what was expreft ere-while, Your pay's but pence, and that's not halfe fo deere, "If you remember, as was that fame toy, "Of Banks his horfe, or Fenners Englands ioy.

What would you fee, that may not heere be feene, A Monfter? VVhy, its heere: or would you fee, That which has erft beene fhowne to other men, "A horfes tayle ftand where his head fhould be, Laffe you muft know I am for none of them, That loue fuch nouelties: my two yeeres fayle, Has brought a winching thing that has no tayle.

Obferue the wonder, it's not obuious, Nor each day common : fee now while its heere, For its a monfter fo prodigious, That if I can, I'll hau't fome other where, And fhow my trauell to the generous. "For know my monfter doth this ftable hate, "Hauing a head fo great, a roome fo ftraite.

VVhy

Why crowd ye here no fafter? 'laffe I see, Becaufe I cannot garnifh out my poft VVith faire infcriptions grauen curiouflie. "Like to your Mountebanke or Englifh Foift. The trifling vulgar will not come to me. Nor vifit my ftrange one beaft : let them paffe. My Monfter's not fet vp for euery Affe.

It' for thefe braue renowned Caualieres, "That craue to fee, and talke of what they fee; Nay talke of more then either eies or eares VVere witneffe of. Thefe welcome are to me, And to my Monfler, for to them't appeares, "And to no others, that they might beget, "More gaine by th' fight, then ere I gain'd by it.

VVhat none? no Mandeuill? is London growne To furfet of new accideats? why hoe,— Saint Bartlemews, where all the Pagents fhowne, And all thofe acts from Adam vnto Noe Vs'd to be reprefent? canft fend me none, Of any fort? or thou'ld not any fpare, But keepe them for the Pagents of thy Faire.

How many vfd to fwarme from Booth to booth. "Like to Sclauonians, when with famine pinde, Going like Heards, as other cattell doth, Itching for news, yet neuer more inclinde To heare the worft : where now is all that froth, Of crab-fac't Raskals ? O I know their ftraine, "The Faire being done, they fleepe till faire againe.

If mother Red-cap, chance to haue an Oxe Rofted all whole, O how you'le flye to it, Like Widgeons, or like wild-geefe in full flocks, That for his pennie each may haue his bitte : Or if that limping Pedant at the flocks, Set out a Pageant, whoo'l not thither runne, As twere to whip the cat at Abington.

Ill-nurtur'd Bowbies, know what I haue heere Is fuch a Monfter, as to know what tis, Would breed amazement in the ftrangeft eare, But vulgar eyes are ayming ftill amiffe, To whom whats onely rare, is onely deere. For you my wonder fleepes, nor fhall't awake, Till riper wits come for my monfter's fake.

Farewell vnciuill Stinkards, skum oth City, The Suberbs pandors, boults to garden Alleys, May you through grates fing out your doleful ditty, For now my Dragon-Monfter fpits his malice, That as you pitty none, fo none may pitty, Your forlorne ftate : O may't be as I pray, So faddeft night may cloud your cleereft day.

And for the Oftler, fince I reape no gaine, Out of my Monfter, take him for thy paine. Yet for remembrance write vpon this fhelfe, Here flood a Horfe that eat away himfelfe.

Hymens

Hymens Satyre.

Don Baffiano married now of late : Has got his witleffe pate a faire eftate, Ift poffible, Fortune fhould be fo blind, As of a world of men not one to find, Worthy her training in her thriuing fchool But an admired Wittall or a Foole ? It's true : why then Fortune's a partiall whoore, To make the foolifh rich, the wifeft poore. VVhence we obferue (experience teacheth it) The younger brother hath the elder wit, Yea by example inftanc'd euery where, The Cockney-Cittie's rich, the Suburbs bare, O then I fee the Goulden age begins, When fooles are mates for wifeft Citizens.

M 2

A

164

A Marriage fong called by the Author In and Out: and now dedicated to the lately converted honestman, W. G. and his long love-crossfed Eliza.

The Marriage fong, called In and Out.

H Ah, haue I catcht you : prethee fweet-hart fhow, If fo thou canft, who is in Turne-ball now ? Doft fmile my pretious one ? nay I muft know, There is no remedy, then tell me how ; What my ingenuous cheat, doft laugh to fee, All former iarres turne to an harmony, So generally applauded ? trew thou may, The Night is paft, and now appeares the day, Full of true Iouifance ; long was thy fuit, Ere twas effected, being in and out, Vowing and breaking, making many an oath, Which now I hope's confirmed by you both. O how I clip thee for it ? fince thy name, Is there renued, which first defam'd the fame, For (heare me Bride-groom) thou by this fhalt faue Thy felfe a Title : I will raze out knaue,

Difhoneft

The Marriage.

Difhoneft louer : vow infringing fwaine, And fay thou ceaft to loue, that thou againe Might loue more feruent, being taught to wooe, And wooing doe what Silke-wormes vfe to doe; VVho doe furceffe from labour now and then, That after reft the better they might fpin.

Spin then (my pretty Cobweb) let me fee, How well thy Bride likes thy activitie. That when fhe fees thy cunning, fhe may fay; "VVhy now I'me pleas'd for all my long delay; "Play that ftroake ftill, theres none that here can let "For non there is can better pleafe thy Bettie. (thee, "O there (my deere) I hope thou'le nere give ore, "VVhy might not this been done as well before? "Nay faint not man, was Bettie fo foone won, "That her fhort pleafure fhould be fo foone done. "Nay then come vp, are marriage ioyes fo fhort, "That Maydenheads are loft with fuch fmall fport?" "This if fhe fay (as this fhe well may fay)

Like a good Gamfter hold her ftill out play. Firft night at leaft wife, and it will be hard, But fhe will loue the better afterward. VVhence is the Prouerb (as it hath been faid) Maydens loue them that haue their maydenhead :

Come then my lad of mettall make refort, Vnto the throne of loue thy Betties fort. There plant thy Cannon fiedge her round about. Be fure (my Boy) fhe cannot long hold out. Erect thy ftanderd, let her tender breft, Be thy pauillion: where thou takes thy reft.

M 3

Let

166 A Marriage Sonnet.

Let her fweet-rofie Breth fuch ioves beftow. That in that vale of Paradife below, Thou may collect thy ioyes to be farre more, Then any mortall euer had before. Yet heare me friend, if thou fecure wilt be, Obferue thefe rules which I prefcribe to thee. Be not horne iealous, it will make thee madde, VVomen will haue it if it may be had. Nor can a lealous eye preuent their fport, For if they lou't farre will they venter for't. Suppose her straying beauty should be led, To the embraces of anothers bedde. VVilt thou Acteon-like thy houre-glaffe fpend, In moning that thou neuer canft amend? No, my kind friend, if thoul't be rul'd by me, I'de haue thee winke at that which thou doft fee, fhading thy wives defects with patient mind, Seeing, yet feeming to the world blind. For tell me friend, what harme is there in it? If then being cloyd, another haue a bitte ? VVhich thou may fpare, and fhe as freely giue, Beleeue me friend, thou haft no caufe to greeue. For though another in thy faddle ride, VVhen he is gone, there's place for thee befide, Which thou may vfe at pleafure, and it'h end. Referue a pretty morfell for thy friend. Let not thy reafon then be counter-bufft, Nor thinke thy pillow with horne-fhauings ftuft, If't be thy deftiny to be a monfter, Thou must be one, if not, how ere men conster.

Thou

Epigrams.

Thou may remaine fecure, exempt from fhame, Though megre Enuie aggrauate the fame. For this has been my firme position still, The husbands hornes be in the womans will.

Vpon the Marriage.

This Marriage went the neareft way about. Playing now vp, now downe, now in, now out, But being done I wifh loue may begin, Now to be neuer out, but euer in.

An Epigramme, Like to like.

V Pon a time (as I informed am) A Sub-vrbs Baud and Countrey Gentleman, Comming at the dore where I doe lie, A gallant rufling wench chanc't to paffe by; Which th' Baud obferuing,—Sir I pray you fee, "How like you gallant and my daughter be. Indeed they much refemble, both in face, Painting, complexion, and in huffing pace, Yea I fhould fay nere any two were liker, If this be as thy daughter is ? a ftriker.

M 4 Vpon

167

Vpon the commodious though compendious labor of M^r. Arthur Standish, In the invention of planting of Wood. A wood-mans Emblealme.

C Ome Syluanes, come each in his fresh array, And fing his name that makes you looke fo gay, Euery Braunch, Euery fpray, Budds as in the Month of Maye. Heere the mirtle Venus tree, There the mirtle Venus tree, There the Cheffenut, wallnut be, Heere the Medlar set aboue, Intimates what woemen loue. Lofty pine, Fruitfull vine, Make a spring In winter time.

The

168

The Woodman.

The naked field has put a garment on, With leavy fhades for birds to peck vpon. Now Nemæa doth appeare, Flower embordered euery where. Here the popular, Alder there, Witch-tree, holy-thorne and Brere Here the fhady Elme, and firre, Dew it, tere-distilling mirrh. Euery cliffe, eucrie clime, Makes a spring in Winter time.

Wood-haunting Satires now their minions feeke, And hauing found them play at Barley-breke. Where delight makes the night, Short (though long) by louers fight. Wher Marisco Fairies Queene, With her Ladies trace the greene; Dauncing measures, finging layes, In the worthy planters praise; Standish fame each voice implies, Bliffe to Standish Ecco cries.

Heerc

The Woodman.

170

Here stands the Wilding on the steepie rocke, The Quince, the Date, the dangling Apricock, Rough skind'd Pech, lip-died cherrie, Melon citron, Mulberie. Sallow, Willow, Mellow, Birt, Sweete-breathd Sicamour and Mirt, Heere the Plum, the Damsen there The Pussil, and the Katherins peare Flowers and stourish blowne so greene, As the spring doth euer seeme.

The brittle Afhe and fhade-obfcuring Yewe, The aged Oke clafpt with the Misfletoe, Hawthornes grow, one a row, And their fweeteft fmels beflow. Royall Palme, Laurell wreath, With young Ofiers vnderneath, Loue-refembling Box tree there, Flowrifhing through all the yeere. Seyons young, tender plants, Where the quire of woodbirds chants.

Flora

The Wood-man.

Flora now takes her throne and for fhe knowes, Of Standifh care, fhe decks his aged browes : With crowne of renowne, Monument in time to come. That what he hath done of late, After times may imitate, So when al our Groues grow greene, Albion may a Forrest feeme, Where if fhe the Forreft were, Standifh would be Forrefter.

Then fhould no gorfe grounds, furrie whin, or Brire, Deprive the painefull plough man of his hire. Every field, then fhould yield, Great reliefe to fhare & fhield. To the Plow fhare for his paine, To the fhield for difcipline, Sith the first he fows and reapes, And the last defends and keepes. Standifh gives, to both a part, To the Gauntlet, and the Cart.

Trees

The Wood-man.

172

Trees (Standish faies) in fummer vpward growe, In winter downe-ward to the roote belowe : This I know not, but I know That with him it is not fo. For in winter of his time, Now when fap gins to decline, Store of fcience bloffome out From the top vnto the root : Root of age, toppe of youth. Winter bearing, fummers growth.

To

To the truely worthy, the Alderman of Kendall and his brethren.

C Ir in regard of due refpect to you, O(If I could write ought that might yeeld a due, To th' Corporation of which I may call, (And dewly to) your felfe the principall: I fhould defire, if power were to defire, To take an Eagles wing and foare farre higher, Then hitherto my weake Mule could attaine, But 'lasse I fee my labour is in vaine; For th' more I labour to expresse your worth, The leffe I able am to fet it forth : Yet let not my endeuours fo be taken. As if with power my will had me forfaken; For know (though my ability be poore) My good-will vie's with any Emperour. Yea I must write and though I cannot speake, What I defire yet I will euer feeke, T' expresse that loue which hath been borne by me, (And fhall be ftill) to your Society. Then caufe I know your place and haue an ayme, To fhewe your merits in a fhadow'd name :

I muft

I must be bold (affection makes me bold, To tell you of fome errors vncontrol'd, VVhich to your best difcretion Ile referre, Hauing full power to punish fuch as erre. First therefore I intend to speake of is; Becaufe, through it, there's many do amille, Is Idlenesse, which I have partly knowne, To be a vice inherent to your towne: Where errant pedlers, mercinarie flaues, Tinkers, and Tookers and fuch idle knaues Are too too conuerfant: let vour commaund Suppresse this finne and refuse of the land. They much difparage both your towne and you : Send them to th' whipping-flocke, for that's their dew. You know the Lord (whofe will fhould be obeid) Hath in his facred word expresly favd, That those which wil not labour they should sterue, (For rightly fo their merits do deferue. Yea if we fhould in morall ftories fee. What punishments inflicted vse to be On fuch as could not give accompt what they Did make profession of from day to day; Yea such as could not (vpon their demaund Expresse how they did live vpon their hand ; I make no question (but by Pagans care,) You that both Magistrates and Christians are, VVould fee your Towne (by th' punifiments expreft) By felfe-fame cenfures to be foone redreft. And this fame error do I not efpie, Onely in them, but in the younger frie,

Who

VVho in their youth do lauish out their time. Without correction or due discipline : Respectlesse of themselves (as't may be fayd) They feeme forgetfull wherto they were made : O looke to this let them not run at large, For ouer thefe you have a fpeciall charge; And if they fall beleeu't from me it's true, Their blood will be requir'd of some of you. We reade in Rome how they did still retaine. Some exercise that they their youth might traine, In warlike discipline or liberall arts, Or education in some forraine parts ; So as in time as after it was showne, These actions gain'd their Citty great renowne. But whence can I imagine that this fin, Wherein too many haue been nufled in, Had her originall but from that staine Of reputation, and the worlds baine, (Which I in briefe am forced to expreffe,) To wit, that swinish vse of drunkennesse? A vice in great requeft (for all receiue it) And being once train'd in't there's few can leaue it ; How happie fhould I in my wifhes be, If I this vice out of requeft could fee. VVithin that natiue place where I was borne, It lies in you, deere Townes-men to reforme, VVhich to performe, if that I might prefume, Or fo much vnder fauour to affume, As to expresse what my observance taught me, Or bring to you what my experience brought me, I could

I would make bold fome outward grounds to lay, Which might in fome fort lye an open way. For rectifying fuch abufe as grow, By this foule vice, and I will tell you how. . There is no meane that sooner moues to good, If that the same be rightly understood, Then is example, for it's that doth moue, Such firme impreffion as we onely loue, What greater wittes approue, and what they say. Stands for an axiome mongft the younger ave, Which by the Prouerbe euery man difcernes, Since as the old Cocke crowes, the young Cock learns ; So weake is youth, as there is nought in them, Which they derive not from the Eldermen, Quickly peruerted (fo depraud's our will) If they fee ought in the Elder fort that's ill, And hardly (when they'r cuftomed in finne,) Can they be wain'd from that they'r nufled in, But if they once perceiue the Elder fort, Hates vice in youth, and will reprodue her for't If they fee Vertue honourd by the Graue And reverend Magistrate, care they will have, To rectifie their errors, and reduce, Their ftreying courfes to a ciuill vfe. If this by due obferuance doe appeare, Methinks you that are Elders, you fhould feare, To act ought ill, left your example fhould, Approue in others, what fhould be contrould. And ill may th' Father chaftife in his fonne, That vice, which he himfelfe is guilty on.

Your

Your patternes are most obuious to the eye, Of each vnfeafon'd youngling paffeth by, VVhich if he see defective but in part He prefently applies it to his heart : For Education which we may auerre With that diuinely-learn'd Philosopher To be a fecond Nature) now and then Doth alter quite the qualities of men, (were, And make them fo transform'd from what they (As if there did fome other men appeare : Yea fo far from their Nature they're eftraung'd, As if they had been in the cradle chang'd: And of this fecond nature I am fure. Example is the onely gouernour Which Plutarch termes th' Idea of our life. Tymon an emelation or a strife We have to imitate, that what we fee, May in our felues as well accomplisht bee. O then you Prefidents (whofe yeeres do giue To most of you a faire prerogatiue) Reforme your felues (if you fee ought) and then - You better may reform't in other men. As you are first by order and by time, So first inioine your felues a Discipline ; VVhich being obferv'd by you and dewly kept, You may wake fuch as have fecurely flept In their excelle of vanities : 'mongft which Let me (with all refpect to you) befeech That you would feek exactly to redreffe, (That brutish vice of beaftly drunkennesse.

And

And first to propagate a publique good. Banish't I pray you from your brother-hood. For diuerfe haue obferued it and will ; (For man obferues not good fo oft as ill, What's done by th' Elders of a Corporation. Giues vnto other men a toleration : If any fuch there be (as well may be) For that vice raignes in each Society : First caution them, bid them for shame refraine To lay on Grauity fo fowle a ftaine : Tell them much happens twixt the cup and lip, And those fame teres of their good fellowship, If they in time reforme not what's amiffe, Shall drowne their reeling foules in hels abiffe: Where they may yaule and yarme til that they burft, Before they get one drop to quench their thirft, Since th'punishment shall be proportion'd there, To that delight which we do liue in here. O then, for Gods loue, bid them now prepare, To be more ftrict then hitherto they were. Or bid them haue recourfe vnto their glaffe, And there furueigh how fwiftly time doth paffe, How many aged Emblemes time doth fhowe, In those fame wrinkles of their furrow'd browe : How many motiues of declining age, What arguments of a fhort pilgrimage, How many mellengers of inftant death, As dropfie, gout, and fhortnes of the breath, Catarrs defcending howerly from the head, Diftafte of meates, wherein they furfeted :

And

And thousand such proceeding from ill diet, Nights fitting vp, rere bankets, mid-dayes ryet. But if these doting Gray-beards I have nam'd, VVill not by your intreaties be reclaim'd, Then I would wifh (becaufe thefe vices lurke) That you would fall another way to worke, And by dew caftigation force them take Another courfe for youths example fake : For those that will not now, at last repent After fome twice or thrice admonifhment, Derferue a punifhment, nay which is worfe, The Churches Anathema or that curfe. Which shall lie heavy on them in that day, When what they owe they must be forc't to pay: But fome of you fuch Reverend-men appeare, As you deferue that title which you beare, Townes Guardians, protectors of our peace. And fole renewers of our hopes encrease. So discreete and so temporate withall, As if Rome did her men Patritians cal. I without assentation might be bolde To name you fo, nor could I be control'd. VVherefore I need not feare but you that are Of fuch fincerity will have a care, To roote out these (which as they seeme to me) Be maine Corrupters of your libertie, I wish it and I hope to see it too, That when I shall come to re-visit it you I may much glory, and fo much the more, To fee them good that were deprau'd before :

Nor

Nor doe I onely fhadow fuch fhould giue, Example vnto others how to liue ; But ev'n fuch vice-fupporters as begin, Brauado-like to gallant it in fin : These are incorrigible faying their state Transcends the power of any Magistrate : For why they're Gentlemen, whence they alleadge They may be drunkards by a priuiledge : But I would have you tell them this from me, There is no fuch thing in gentilitie, Those that will worthily derserve that name, Muft by their vertues character the fame : For vice and generous birth (if understood) Differ as much in them, as ill from good. Belides, if they do fnuffe when they're reproou'd, Or feeme as if, forfooth their blood were mooy'd : Tell them that weake and flender is that towne. VVhen fnuffes haue power to menace iuftice down : Shew me true Refolution, they may know That God hath placed Magistrates below, Who have power to controle and chaftice fin, (bin :) (And bleft's that town where fuch commaund hath For tell me, if when great men do offend Iuftice were fpeech-leffe, to what efpeciall end Should lawes enacted be? Since they do take Nothing but Flies, like th' webs which spiders make Where (mall ones they both ta'ne and punish'd be, While great ones breake away more eafily : But rightly is it which that Cynicke fayde. Who fecing inflice on a time ore-fread,

And over bearded by a great-mans will, Why thus it is, quoth he, with Iustice still : Since th'golden Age did leve her, for at first She was true-bred and scorn'd to be enforst To ought but right, yea fuch was Time as then, " Things lawfull were most royall among st men : But now the that thould be a tharpe edg'd axe. To cut downe all fin's made a nose of waxe ; Wherein it's Iustice (if I not mistake it) What ere it be, iust as the Great-men make it. But Saturne is not banisht from your towne, For well I know there's perfect inflice flowne, There Themis may be fayd to have her feate, VVhere poore-ones may be heard as well as great, There's no corruption but even weight to all, Equally temper'd, firme, impartiall, Sincere, Iudicious, and fo well approu'd, As they that iuftice loue or ere haue lov'd, Are bound to hold that Corporation deere, Since in her colours fhe's prefented there. Nor do I only fpeake of fuch as be, Iuftices nam'd within your libertie, But of those men wherewith your Bench is grac't And by Commission ore the County plac't. There may we see one take in hand the cause. Ferreting out the secrecy of th'lawes Anatomizing every circumstance, Where if he ought omit, it's a meere chance, So ferious is he, and withall fo speedy As fure his Pater nofter's not more ready :

Yea

Yea I have wondred how he could containe So many law-querkes in fo fmall a braine, For as we see full oft in summer time, When Sun begins more South-ward to incline, A showre of haile-slones rating in the aire : Euen (o (for better can I not compare) His lawe-exhaling meteors) would he Send out his Showre of law-termes vfually: So as I thought and manie in those places, That it did thunder lawe, and raine downe cafes. Yea I have knowne some strucke in such a blunder As they imagin'd that his words were thunder : Which to avoide (poore [nakes) fo [car'd were they, As they would leave the Bench and Ineake away. There may we see another so well knowne To penall statutes, as there is not one. (So well experienft in them he does make him) Which can by any kinde of meanes escape him. Befides for execution which we call, The foueraigne end and period of all; Yea which may truly be efteem'd the head, From whence the life of Iustice doth proceed He merits dew respect : witnesse (I say) Those whipping-stocks erected in th'high way With stockes and pilleries, which he hath set To have the vagrant Begger foundly bet : Nor doth he want for any one of these, A statute in warme store if that he please ; Which on occasion he can well produce, Both for himselfe and for his Countries vse.

An

of Kendall.

Another may we see, though spare of speech, And temporate in discourse, yet he may teach By his effectuall words the rasher sort, Who speake so much as they are taxed for't. Yea fo difcreetly fober, as I with, Many were of that temper as he is. For then I know their motions would be good, Nor would they speake before they understood. Another folid, and though blunt in words, Yet marke him and his countrey curle affords One more iudicious, pithy in discourse, Sound in his reasons, or of more remorce, To such as are distressed, for he'l take, The pore mans cause, though he be nere so weake, And much haue I admir'd him in Surueigh Of his deferts showne more from day to day, That he should so disualue worldly praise, When every man feekes his esteeme to raile. And worthyly, for neuer nature brought Foorth to the world a man fo meanely wrought. Of such rare workemanship as you shall finde, Inth' exquisite perfection of his minde. Yea, if too partiall though't I (hould not be, (In that he hath been still a friend to me) I could expresse such arguments of love, As were of force th'obdurat ft hearts to moue. To admiration of those vertues rest. Within the generous table of his breft, But I have ever hated, so has hee, " To paint mens worths in words of flatteric.

183

Yea I doe know it derogates from worth, To have her selfe in colours shadow'd forth, Sith vertue rather craues for to be knowen Vnto her selfe, then vnto others showen. Onely thus much ile fay; ordain'd he was, Euen in his Cradle others to surpasse. Since for his education it may seeme. Being in mountaines bred, that it was meane. But now of such an equall forme combin'de As he is strong in body and in minde. Sincerely honest, and so well approu'd, As where he is not known, hee's heard & lou'd. So as on Mountaines born, his thoughts a fpire, To Sions mount, & Ioues triumphant guire. Another there's, who how foere he feeme, In th' eie of some distemper'd judgements mene. In understanding, I doe know his wit, Out-strips the most of those that censure it. Befides theres in him parts of more defert For Nature is supplide in him by Art. And wheras som to's wit impute the wrong, I rather doe impute it to his tongue. Since well I know by due experience, (At such times as he deign'd me conference) For reading, profound reason, ripe conceipts, Discourse of stories, arguing of estates, Such generall iudgement he in all did show, As I was wrapt with admiration, how Mē could esteem so menely (hairebraind-elues) Of fuch an one was wifer then them felues.

184

of Kendall.

Its true indeed, hee's not intemperate. (As this age fashions) nor opinionate, But humble in his indgement, which may be, Some cause that he is censur'd, as we see. Alas of griefe, none should be deemed wife, But fuch as can like timists temporize. Expose their reputation to the shame Of an offensive or iniurious name. Whereas if we true wisdome understood, We'd think non could be wife but fuch wer good. And though we question thus, asking what mã? Vnlesse he be a polititian, Yet pollicie will be of small auaile, When that arch polititian Machauell, Shall flame and frie in his tormented soule, Because to th'world wise, to heaven a foole. Yea I doe wish (if ere I have a sonne) He may be so wise, as have wit to shun A selfe conceipt of being soly wise, In his owne bleared and dim fighted eies, For then I know there will in him apeare, A Christian zealous and religious feare. Which like an Angell will attend him still, Mouing to good, and waine him from whats ill. And far more comfort should I have of him, Then if through vaine conceipt he should begin To pride him in his follies, for by them, We fee how many roote out house and name, Yea of all vertues which subsisting be, None makes more perfect then humilitie.

185

Since

186

Since by it man deemes of himselfe, and's worth, As of the vilest worme the earth brings forth. Which difesteeming I may boldly name, More noble then to glorie in our shame : For it doth leade vs in a glorious path, With fafest conduct from the day of wrath. When ftandig 'fore that high Tribunall there We're found far better then wee did appeare. And fuch is hee-yet haue I heard it vowde, "Hee has not witt enough for to bee proude. VVheras wee know, and by experience fee, That fooles bee still the proudeft men that be. Nor is he onely humble, for I heare, Of other proper vertues which appeare In his well tempred disposition, when I hear of no complaints mong ft poorer men. Who are his tenaunts for he has report, Of thewing mercy, and is bleffed for't. And is not this a poynt of wifedome, fay? For to prouide thus for another day That for terrestriall things, hee may obtayne A farre more glorious and transcendent gayne. Sure (I doe thinke) there is no foole to him. That does enrich his progeny by finne, Makes shipwrack of a confcience, bars himselfe, Of after hopes to rake a little pelfe. Ruines his foule, and ads vnto the ftore, Of his accounts, by racking of the pore. VVhereas ofth' other fide hees truely wife. (Though not to man, yet in thalmighties eies.

who

Of Kendale.

Who pitty and compassion doth professe, To th'forlorne widdow and the fatherleffe. Does right to all men, nor will make his tongue, An aduocate for him who's in the wrong; Accepts of no aduantage, which may feeme To staine his conscience, or to mak't vncleane : Hates an oppreffors name, and all his time, Was neuer wont to take too great a fine. Beares himfelfe blameleffe before God and man. Hee's truely wife, or much deceau'd I am. Indeed he is, and fuch an one is plaft, In that fame Mirror which I spake of last. VVho without affentation may be faid, To haue a patterne vnto others laid. In actions of this kind, yea I may fweare, Rather for these respects I hold him deare, Then for his ftate, which may be well expreft, To equall, if not to furmount the beft. But I'ue too farre digreft, in breefe it's he, VVho hates the leven of the Pharifee, And (which is rare) 'mongft richer men to find, He counts no wealth like th'riches of the mind. How happy you (Graue Elders) to have thefe, Affiftants in your peace, meanes for your eafe, So as their ferious care, ioyn'd to their powers, May feeme in fome degree to leffen yours, For powers vnited, make the army ftronger, "And minds combin'd preferue that vnion longer. O may there be, one mind and one confent, (Cohering in one proper continent)

One

One firme opinion, generall decree, Amongft you all concurring mutually: (fords, And may your Throne, which fuch good men af-Nere fall at oddes by multiplying words, Since the fpirit of contention ftirres our blood, And makes vs oft neglect a publique good. Thus with my beft of wifnes, I will end, Refting your euer true deuoted friend.

R. B.

To all true-bred Northerne Sparks, of the generous fociety of the Cottoneers, who hold their High-roade by the Pinder of Wakefield, the Shoo-maker of Brandford, and the white Coate of Kendall : Light gaines, Heavie Purfes, good Tradings, with cleere Conficience.

To you my friends that trade in blacke and white, In blacke and white doe I intend to write. Where Ile infert fuch things are to be fhowne, Which may in time adde glory and renowne, To your commodious tradings, which fhall be Gracefull to you, and fuch content to me, As I fhould wifh, at leaft my lines fhall tell, To after-times, that I did wifh you well, And in my obferuations feeme to fhow, That due refpect I to my country owe. Firft therefore ere I further goe, Ile proue, Wherein no leffe, Ile manifeft my loue, Then in the greateft : that of all haue beene, Shall be, or are, you feeme the worthieft men,

And

And this's my reafon ; which may grounded be, On the firme arches of Philofophy ; We say, and so we by experience find, In man there is a bodie and a mind, The body is the couer, and in it The minds internall soueraignnesse doth sit, As a great Princesse, much admired at. Sphered and reared in her chaire of state, While th' body like a hand-maid prest t' obey, Stands to performe, what ere her mistresse say. Yea (ome compare this bodies outward grace, Vnto a dainty fine contriued case, Yet for all th' cost which is about her spent. She founds but har/h, without her instrument, Which is the foule: others refembled have, The bodies feature to a sumptuous grave, Which garnisht is without full tricke and trim, Yet has nought elfe, but sculls and bones within. Others compare the beauty of the mind, To pith in trees, the body to the rind. But of all others have bene, be, or were, In my opinion none doth come so neere, In true Ressmblanes (nor indeed there can) Then twixt the mind and lining of a man, For its the inward substance which to mee, Seemes for to line the body inwardly, With ornaments of vertue, and from hence, As he excells, we draw his excellence. Then, my deere countrimen, to giue your due, From whence comes mans perfection, but from you · That

190

That doe maintaine with credit your eftate, And fells the beft of man at eafie rate. To wit, the minds refemblance, which is gotten, By those fame linings which you fell of Cotten. For fee those thin breech Irish lackies runne, How fmall i'th waft, how fparing in the bombe, VVhat lacke a Lents they are: yet view them when They have beene lin'd by you, theyr proper men, Yea I may fay, man is fo ftrange an Elfe, VVithout your helpe, hee lookes not like himfelfe. Indeed if we were in fome parts of thofe, Sun-parched countries, where they vfe no clothes, But through the piercing violence of heat, VVhich in fome places is intemporate, Th' inhabitants go naked, and appeare In grifly fort, as if they frenticke were, Then you that make vs man-like, fhould not need, Nor your profession stand in any steed, For why? the clymate which we then fhould have, No Bombast, Cotten, or the like would craue: (them, Since fcorching beames would fmoulder fo about As th' dwellers might be hot enuffe without them. But heer's an Island that fo temprate is. As if it had plantation to your wifh. Neither fo hote, but that we may abide, Both to be clad and bombasted beside. Neither fo cold, but we may well allow it, To weare fuch yarne, a blind man may looke through it. Its true indeed, well may it be confeft, If all our parts were like fome womens breft.

Bared

Bared and painted with pure Azure veines, Though of themfelues they have as many ftaines, And riueld wrinkles, with fome parts as badde, Then th' crooked Greeke Therfytes euer had, It might be thought your gaines would be fo fmall, As Ime perfwad'd they would be none at all : But thanks be given to heavens fupernall powers, Which fways this Maffe of earth, that trade of yours, Hath her dependance fixt in other places, Then to be tide to womens brefts or faces. Let Painters and Complexion fellers looke, To their crackt ware, you have another booke To view into, then they have to looke in, For yours's an honeft trade, but their's is fin. Next I expresse your worth in, shall be these, First, your supportance of poore families, Which are fo weake in ftate, as I much doubt me, They would be forc't to begge or ftarue without ye. The fecond is, (wherein you'ue well deferued, The care you have to see your Country served, Not as fuch men who live by forraine Nations, Impowerishing this Land by transportations, For their depraued Natures be well fhowne, By louing ftrangers better then their owne; Or as it feemes, to fucke their Mothers bloud. Their Natiue Countrie for a priuate good. The third and last, which heere exprest shall be, Shall reference haue to your Antiquity, All which I will dilate of, and though I Cannot defcribe ech thing fo mouingly,

As

192

To the Cotteners.

As I could wifh, yet take it in good part, Proceeding from the centre of a heart, That did this taske and labour vndertake, For your profession and your countries fake, Whofe avre I breath'd, O I were worthy death, Not to love them, who fuck't with me one breath. How many Families fupported be, Within the compasse of one Barronry, By your profession I may boldly show, (For what I fpeake, I by obferuance know.) Yea by eye-witneffe, where fo many are, Prouided for by your peculiar care, As many would the beggars be (I wot) If your religious care releeu'd them not. For there young brats, as we may well fuppofe, Who hardly haue the wit to don their clothes, Are fet to worke, and well can finish it, Being fuch labours as doe them befit : Winding of fpooles, or fuch like eafie paine, By which the leaft may pretty well maintaine Themfelues, in that fame fimple manner clad, As well agrees with place where they were bred. Each plies his worke, one cards, another (pins, One to the studdles goes, the next begins To rauell for new wefte, thus none delay, But make their webbe-vp, 'gainst each Market-day, For to preferue their credit : but pray fee, Which of all thefe for all their industry, Their early rifing, or late fitting vp, Could get one bit to eat, or drop fuppe.

To the Cotteneers.

194

If having wrought their webbes, their forc't to ftand, And not have you to take them off their hand. But now by th'way, that I my loue may fhew, Vnto the poorer fort as well as you, Let me exhort vou, in respect I am. Vnto you all both friend and Countriman. And one that wifheth, if hee could expresse, What's wifhes be vnto your Trade fucceffe, As to himfelfe, thefe pooremen (vnder fauour) Who earne their meanes fo truly by their labour, Should not (observe me) bee enforc't to wait, "For what you owe, and what's their due, fo late, Time vnto them is pretious, yea one houre, If idlye (pent, is charges to the poore : Whofe labour's their Reuenue : doe but goe, To Salomon, and he will tell you fo. Who willeth none, expresly to fore-flow, To pay to any man what they doe owe, But, if they haue it, not to let them stand, Crauing their due, but pay it out a hand. Say not vnto thy friend (faith Salomon) I have not for thee now; but come anon : For why (hould ft thou that haft wherewith to pay. Put of till morrow, what thou maist to day. Beleeue me friends I could not choofe but fpeake, And caution you of this, for even the weake And impotent, whofe foules are full as deere, As be the Monarchs, whilper in mine eare, And bid.mee tell you yet to haue a care, Not to expresse their names what men they are,

For

For then they doubt that you to fpite them more. Would make them stay, farre longer then before. That you would fee their iniuries redreft, Of which they thinke, you were not yet poffeft. But in transferring of the charge to fuch, As be your Factors, which have had fmall tutch, Of others griefes : your felues haue had the blame, Though't feems your Factors wel deferud the fame. Nor would I have you thinke Ime feed for this, For they do plead in Forma pauperis That bee my Clyents, yea Ime tied too, In countries loue to doe that which I doe : For even their teares, mones, and diftreffed ftate, Haue made me for them fo compassionate, That my foule yern'd within me, but to heare, Their mones defpifd, that were efteem'd fo deere, To their Creator, fee their Image then; And make recourfe to him that gaue it them, Whofe manfion is aboue the higheft fphere. And bottles vp the fmalleft trickling teare, Shed by the pooreft foule, (which in a word) Shall in that glorious fynod beare record : Where for the leaft non-payment which we owe, Shall paffe this doome-Away ye curfed, goe. But I do know by my Experience, The most of you have such a Confcience, As in that day, what ever fhall befall, Your fincere foules will as a brazen wall. Shield you from fuch a cenfure : for to me. Some doe I know bore fuch integrity.

To the Cotteneers.

As I dare well auow't, tis rare to find, In fuch a crazie time, fo pure a mind. But now I must defcend (as feemes to me) From the releefe of many Familie. By you fupported, to your fpeciall care, To fee your country ferued with good Ware : Which of all others (if well vnderftood) Seemes to have ayme most at a publique good. VVell it appeares, euen by your proper worth, That you were borne for her that brought you forth. Not for your felues, which inftanced may be, In that you ayme at no Monopoly, No private staples, but defire to fell, (VVhich of all other feem's approu'd as well,) Your Ware in publique places, which may ftand No more for your auaile, then good of th' land. Nor are you careleffe what it is you bring, Vnto your Country, for your cuftoming, Dependance has vpon that due efteeme, They have of you, that are the fame you feem, Plaine home-bred chapmen (yet of fuch due note) Their word is good, how plaine fo ere's their coat. Yea doe I wish, I may have such as they, Ingag'd to me, for they'l do what they fay, When filken coats, and some of them I know, Will fay farre more then ere they meane to doe. Therefore it much concernes you to produce, That which you know is for a common vfe. Not for the eye fo much as for the proofe, For this doth tend most to your owne behoofe :

VVhere

196

VVhere Reputation doth fuch cuftome gaine, As being got is feldome loft againe. Yet fure methinks my Friends, you put to th' venture, VVhen your commodities are ftretcht on th' tenter, So that as I have heard, when come to weting They Ihrinke a yard at least, more then is fitting. Yet doe I heare you make excufe of this. That for your felues you know not what it is : And for your Factors what they take, they pay, If Shere-men ftretch them fo, the more knaues they. It's true they are fo, yet for all you vfe Thefe words, beleeu't, they'l ferue for no excufe, For if you will be Common-weales men, know, VVhether your Shere-men vfe this feate or no, Before you buy, (which found) reprooue them then, Or elfe auoid fuch tenter-hooking men. There is a Gallant in this towne I know. (Who damnd himselfe, but most of them doe soe) If that he had not, to make cloake and fuit, Some thirty yards of rug or thereabout, Yet hardly came to fifteene afterward, It had beene measur'd by the Taylors yard. Now was not this too monftrous and to badde. That it should leefe full halfe of that it had ? I know not what to thinke (but to be breefe) Either the Taylor was an arrant theefe, And made no bones of Theft, which is a crime, Moft Taylors will difpence with at this time : Or fure, if my weake wit can iudge of it, The rugge was tentred more then did befit :

But

To the Cotteneers.

198

But you will fay, the Gallant fure did lie, Faith if you be of that minde fo am I, For its fcarce poffible fo much to put, In Cloake and fute, vnleffe heed cloath his gut ? (And that's of th' largeft fize) and fo't may be, For I'ue heard one skild in Anatomie, (Auerr thus much that euery gut in man For at that time his lecture then began.) VVas by due obferuation knowne to be Seauen times his length: fo that it feemes to me If this be true, which Naturalifts doe teach, The Taylor plaid the man to make it reach, So far, for fure the yards could not be fmall, That were to make cloake, fute, cloath guts, and all. But I doe finde you guiltleffe, for I know, As to your Countrey, you your lives doe owe. If private harmes might propagate her good, (For Countries loue extends vnto our blood) So there's no Commerce which you entertaine, Avmes not in fome part at a publique gaine : And that's the caufe, Gods bleffings doe renew, Making all things to cotton well with you. "Now to the third Branch, is my mufe addreft, To make your Trades Antiquity exprest, If I had skill but rightly to define, Th' originall foundation and the time, The caufe of your encreafe, and in what fpace, The people you Commerst with, and the place Of your first planting, then it might appeare, Vpon what termes your priviledges were:

But

To the Cotteneers.

But fo onful'd be times antiquities, As it is hard directly to fhow thefe, In what efpeciall fort they were begun, (Yet I may doe what other men haue done) And by conjectures make your Trade difplayd Speaking in Verfe, what fome in profe haue faide Some are opiniond that your trade began From old Carmentis, who in colours (pan Such exquifit rare works, as th' webs the wrought Were farre and nere by forrain nations (ought. And as it may in ancient writ appeare. The Phrigian works were faid to com from her. But now the better to vnfolde the fame. Know that there were two women of that name. The one (for Stories manifest no lesse) Euanders mother was, a Propheteffe, Who wrot and spake in verse with such a grace. As the renoumd the Countrey where the was. The other was a Spinster, which did come, Along with Aquila (when he from Rome Marching amaine, lancht forth for Britanie) Which Coast Carmentis did no sooner see. Then the admir'd, for well the faw by vie. Th' inhabitants would proue industrious. So as in these daies rude, they grew in time, Specially Nooth-ward) by her discipline, To become civill, and where prompt to doe, Any fet Taske this Matron put them to. Touching the place where the plantation had, Divers Historians have so differed.

04

199

As hardly iumpe they by a hundred mile, And therefore difficult to reconcile Their different opinions : for they strine, Among ft them felues, & aske wher thes'd ariue? Since it appeares when Aquila came ashore, Saue 3 or 4 choice dames, there were no more. Of woman kinde with him : for he was loath, To hip fuch old hags, were not for his tooth, And therefore such as bewty did adorne, (turne Wer hipt with him : for they would ferue his To reconcile these doubts, which seems a woder, Know that his fleet deuided was a funder. And drive to fundry creeks, fom East, fom west, Som North, fom South ; for fo they wer distrest. By aduerse winds (as forced from together) They were disperst, they knew not where, nor whither. In which auspicious tempest, happy stray, For happy was that tempest may you say, This modest matron with an heavy heart, Reft of her friends ariued ith North part, With fom young maids which Aquila did minde To bring along to keepe his men in winde. The Port when the ariud (as't feemes to me,

For I doe ground on probability, Drawne from the clime & Ports description) Was the rich hauen of ancient VVorkington, Whose stately prospect merits honours fame, In nought more noble than a Curwens name. And long may it reserve that name whose worth, Hath many knights from that descent brought forth,

For

of Kendall.

For if to blaze true fame (I ere have skill), In Bouskill ioynd with Curwen Mow't I will. Carmentis thus ariud did trauaile on To find finde some place fit for plantation : For then that Coast as we in stories reade, Lay wholy waft, and was unpeopled. Where in her progresse by the way she came, She gaue to fundry places different name. " Mong A which her owne name, whence it is they fay, Cartmell or Carment-hill holds to this day Her Appelation : and now neere an end Of her set iourney, as she did descend Downe from the neighbouring Mountaines, the might A woody vale, feat'd delicionfly, (Spie. Through which a pleasant River seemd to glide, VV hich did this vale in equall parts deuide, This haning (pide, (on Stauelaies Cliffes they (ay) She laid her staffe, whence comes the name Staffe-lay. Corruptly Staulay, where the staid a space, But feeing it a most notorious place, And that the trades men were fo ginen toth' Pot, That they would drinke far more then ere they got. She turnd from thence, yet left fome Maids behinde. That might acquaint them in this wool worke kinde. V Vhile (he did plant, as ancient Records be, Neer er to Kendall in th' Barronrie. Thus haue I drawne your linage as it was, For other Accidents I let them paffe, Onely fuch things as most observant were, (As the erection of your Sturbidge faire.

202 '

I thought to fhadow briefely, which began, On this occasion by a Kendall man, Who comming vp or downe I know not well, Brought his commodities that way to fell : Where being benighted, tooke no other shield, To lodge him and his ware then th' open field : A Mastiffe had he, or a mungrill Cur, and the Which he still cride and cald on, Stur-bitch stur. Least miching knaues now fore the spring of day. Should come perchance, and filch his ware away. From hence they fay tooke Sturbidge first her name, VVhich if fhe did, fhe neede not think't a fhame, For noble Princes, as may inftanc'd be, designed and From Braches had their names as well as fhe : Such Romulus and Remus were, whofe name Tane from a fhe-Wolfes dug, raifd Romes first fame, Yea Cyrus which 's as ill, (if not far worfe,) Had but a Bitch (cal'd Spacon) for his nurfe. For in defcents, it is our leaft of care, To aske what men once were, but what they are. Sith great estates, yea Lordships raifd we see, (And fo shall still) fromth' ranke of beggarie. Yea Peafants (fuch hath been their happy fate) VVithout defert have come to great eftate, For true it is was faid fo long agon, A paltry Sire may have a Princely Sonne. "But haft my Muse in colours to display, _____ Some auncient customes in their high roade way, By which thy louing Countrey men doe paffe, Conferring that now is, with which once was,

To the Cotteneers.

At least fuch places labour to make knowne, As former times haue honour'd with renowne. So by thy true relation 't may appeare They are no others now, then as they were, Euer efteem'd by auntient times records, Which fhall be fhadow'd briefly in few words. The first whereof that I intend to show, Is merry Wakefield and her Pindar too; Which Fame hath blaz'd with all that did belong, Vnto that Towne in many gladfome fong : The Pindars valour and how firme he ftood, In th' Townes defence 'gainft th' Rebel Robin-hood, How ftoutly he behav'd himfelfe, and would, In fpite of Robin bring his horfe to th' fold, His many May games which were to be feene, Yeerely prefented vpon Wakefield greene, Where louely Jugge and luftie Tib would go, To fee Tom-lively turne vpon the toe; Hob, Lob, and Crowde the fidler would be there, And many more I will not fpeake of here : Good god how glad hath been this hart of mine To fee that Towne, which hath in former time, So florifh'd and fo gloried in her name, Famous by th' Pindar who first rais'd the fame ? Yea I have paced ore that greene and ore, And th' more I faw't, I tooke delight the more, "For where we take contentment in a place, "A whole daies walke, feemes as a cinquepace : Yet as there is no folace vpon earth, Which is attended evermore with mirth :

But

But when we are transported most with gladnesse, Then fuddenly our ioyes reduc'd to fadneffe, So far'd with me to fee the Pindar gone, And of those iolly laddes that were, not one Left to furuiue : I griev'd more then Ile fay. (But now for Brad-ford I must hast away). Brad-ford if I should rightly fet it forth, Stile it I might Banberry of the North, And well this title with the Towne agrees, Famous for twanging, Ale, Zeale, Cakes and Cheefe : But why (hould I fet zeale behinde their ale? Because zeale is for some, but ale for all; Zealous indeed some are (for I do heare, Of many zealous sempring fifter there) Who love their brother, from their heart iffaith. For it is charity, as fcripture faith, But I am charm'd, God pardon what's amiffe, For what will th' wicked fay that heare of this, How by fome euill brethren 't hath been fed, Th' Brother was found in 's zealous fifters bed? Vnto thy taske my Mule, and now make knowne, The jolly fhoo-maker of Brad-ford towne, His gentle-craft fo rais'd in former time By princely Iourney-men his difcipline, " VVhere he was wont with paffengers to quaffe, "But fuffer none to carry vp their ftaffe Vpon their fhoulders, whilft they paft through town For if they did he foon would beat them downe. (So valiant was the Souter) and from hence, Twixt Robin-hood and him grew th' difference; Which

To the Cotteneers.

VVhich caufe it is by moft ftage-poets writ, For breuity, I thought good to omit, " Descending thither where most bound I am, " To Kendall-white-coates, where your trade began. Kendall (to which I all fucceffe do wifh) May termed be that parts Metropolis, For feate as pleafant, as the most that are, Instanc't in th' ruin'd Castle of Lord Par. (For feate imparaled); where we may fee, "Great men to fall as fubiect are as we: Yea there (as in a mirror) may be fhowen, The Subjects fall refts in the Soueraigne's frowne. Many efpeciall bleffings hath the Lord, Pour'd on this Towne, for what doth't not afford (If neceffary for mans proper vfe) Sufficient, if not fuperfluous? Yea I dare fay (for well it doth appeare) That other places are more bound to her, Then fhe to any, there's no Towne at all, (Being for compasse fo exceeding fmall, For commerce halfe fo great, nor is there any That doth, confort in trafficke, with fo many. But to her private bleffings, for pure aire, Sweet holefome water, fhe may make compare With any clime, for aire nor piercing is, Nor in her temprate brething, too remiffe : For water, Kent, whence Kendall takes her name, VVhofe fpring (from Kent-mere) as they fay, is tane : Swift is't in pace, light-poiz'd, to looke in cleere, And quicke in boiling (which efteemed were)

Such

Such qualities, as rightly vnderftood Without 'en thefe, no water could be good. For Wood (how well fhe was in fore-time growne) May foone appeare by th' ftore that is cut downe, Which may occafion griefe, when we fhall fee What want shall be to our posteritie : Yet who feekes to preuent this furely none, Th' old prouerbe's in requeft, each man for one, While each for one, one plots anothers fall, "And few or none respect the good of all. But of all bleffings that were reckoned yet, In my opinion there is none fo great, As that efpeciall one which they receive, By th' grave and reverend Pastor which they have ; Whofe life and doctrine are fo joint together, (As both fincere, there's no defect in either,) For in him both Urim and Thummim be. O that we had more Pastors such as he: For then in Sion (hould Gods flocke encreafe, " Having fuch Shepheards would not flea but fleece ; Thus what wants Kendal that the can defire, Tyre's her Pastor, and her selfe is Tyre, He to mistrust her people, the to bring, Wealth to her Towne by forraine trafficking? Now muft I have the White-coates vnder-hand Who were in fore-time a defence to th' land: Yea fuch they were, as when they did appeare, They made their foes perfume their hofe for feare, Experienft Archers, and fo practis'd it, As they would feldome fhoot but they would hit.

To the Cotteneers.

So that though th'darters of rude Scythia, The golden-Archers of rich Perfia, The Siluer-shields of Greece have borne the name, Blaz'd by the partiall trumpe of lying fame. Yet in behalfe of Kendall (I durft fweare it) For true renovvne thefe Countries came not nere it. As for this name of White-coate vs'd to fore It came from th' milk-white furniture they wore (lovvs And in good-footh they were but home-fpun fel-"Yet would thefe white-coats make their foes dy yel-VVhich might by latter times be inftanced, (lows. Euen in those border-feruices they did : But this t'expresse (fince it is knowne) were vaine, Therefore, my friends, Ile turne to you againe, And of fome fpeciall matters caution you, Which being done Ile bid you all adew : Since God hath bleft you with fuch benefits, As the reliefe of nature well befits. Hauing of euery thing fufficient ftore, There's reafon (Country-men) you render more To your Creator, who fo kinde has been, To you and yours aboue all other men : (Though all (I fay) fhould thankfull be) then fuch VVho nere received of him halfe fo much, For well you know its in the Scripture faid, Accompt for euerie Talent must be made, And how much more our Talents are, shall we After this life exact Accomptants be: Be good difpencers then of what you have, And doe not fhut your Eares to fuch as craue

Your charities Reliefe (for in a word) VVhat you give th' poore, you lend vnto the Lord, And be you fure, your loue is not in vaine, For with encreafe hele pay it you againe : Put not your labourer off with long delay, But fatisfie him if you can this day, For pittie 'tis, poore foule, that he fhould fit VVaiting your time when he hath earned it. And this belieue me many crimes produces, " Teeming of tenters and fuch like abuses VVhich they are forc't to, caufe they are delaide VVorking for more, then ere they can be paide : Be not too rigorous vnto your debtor, (If he be poore) forbearance is far better, For 'laffe what gaine accrewes to you thereby, If that his carkaffe doe in prifon lie: Yea, if you kept his bodie till 't fhould rot, Th' name of hard-hearted men were all you got. And fure, if my opinion faile not me, T' imprison debtors ther's no policie, Vnleffe they able be and obftinate, And like our Bank-rupts break t' encrease their state, For th' poore they better may discharge their debt VVhen they 're at libertie and freedome get, For labour may they when they are inlarg'd, But when they die in prison all's discharg'd. O then (my friends) if you have fuch as thefe : Remember to forgiue your trefpasses, At leaft be not extreame to th' poor'ft of all, "Giue him but time and he will pay you all.

208

So

So Time shall crowne you with an happy end, And confummate the wifhes of a friend. (fure So each (through peace of confciece) rapt with plea-Shall ioifully begin to dance his meafure. "One footing actively VVilfons delight, "Descanting on this note, I have done what's right, "Another ioying to be nam'd 'mong ft them, "Were made Men-fishers of poore fisher-men. "The third as blith as any tongue can tell, "Because he's found a faithfull Samuel. "The fourth is chanting of his Notes as gladly, "Keeping the tune for th'honour of Arthura Bradly. The 5. fo pranke, he fcarce can stand on ground, Asking who'le fing with him Mal Dixons round? But where have been my fences all this while. That he (on whom prosperity doth smile) And many parts of eminent respect. Should be forgotten by my strange neglect? Take heede my Muse least thou ingratefull be, For well thou knowes he better thinkes of thee: On then (I (ay) expresse what thou dost wish. And tell the woreld truely what he is: He's one has (har'd in Nature (peciall part. And though beholding little vnto art, Yet beare his words more emphasis or force, Then most of th' Schollers that I heare discourse. His word keeps tutch (and of all men I know) He has th'best inside for so meane a shewe, Outwardly bearing, temperate, yet will be A bonus focius in good company.

Hee

To the Cotteneers.

He vnderstands himselfe (as I have fayd) And therefore aymes whereto he first was made, In briefe 'mongst all men that deserve applauding, None (having leffe of Art) merits more lauding: So that though true desert crowne all the rest, Yet if ought want in them its here exprest; But th'Euening shade drawes on, and damps the light "Think friends on what I fayd, and so good night.

To the Worfhipfull Recorder of Kendall.

For Townes-abufes (worfhipfull Recorder) I leaue them to your difcreet felfe to order: My Iourney's at an end; hic baculum fixi, My Tale concluded, nought now refts but Dixi. Nor would I haue you fpeak that, (though you may) "Which I haue heard a countrie Maior did fay, Vnto a Scholler, who concluded had His latine fpeech with Dixi I haue fayd: To whom th'vnletter'd Maior to aproue the fame Replying thus, tooke Dixi for his name. "If that thy name be Dixi fure I am, Dixi's a learned vnderftanding man.

To

Merica Merica Merica

To the Landf-lord wherefoeuer.

Andf-lord to thee, addreft to fpeake I am, And full as much to thee as any man : For many Errors and fowle crimes I knowe That thou art more then others fubiect toe. Which ile in part, vnrip, and fo make cleere, As in that day, when all men fhall appeare Before their heauenly Landf-lord, where is had A dew accompt : This now which I have fayd May be a witneffe, and beare record ftill, That thou didft know before thy Maifters will. Which not perform'd thou know'ft what thou haft "With manie stripes thou shalt be chastifed, (read But firft, ere I proceed, fo great's the cries Of widdowes, and fo many tere-fwolne eyes Of Orphanes fuccourleffe that reach to heauen, As I'me well-nigh into amazement driuen, And cannot perfect what I do entend, Vntill I fee their forrowes at an end. At leaft allayd (for I am forc't to keepe, A confort with thefe filly foules that weep :) So moouing is their paffion (as in briefe) So ftrong's compaffion, I do feele their griefe.

Where-

VVherefore I must (fo great is griefes extent) Perfwade these blubbert wretches be content. And beare with patience, till the Lord fhall fend, In his good time vnto their forrowes end : VVhich to expresse the better I will moue them In mildeft tearmes; and thus will fpeak vnto them. Cease, cease (poore iniur'd soule) your teres to shed, Weeping for that cannot be remeded. 'Lasse you are farre deceiu'd ; if you suppose Teres can move Landf-lords : they are none of those, Their dispositions are more harder far, Then any other of Gods creatures are : For tell me (farueling) hath thy trickling eve. Pale-colourd uifage, heaven-ascending crie, Easth-bending knees, hart throbbing languishment, Eccoing fighs, fouls-fretting discontent, Famine at home, surcharg'd with forrowes loade, Debt with a Sergeant dogging thee abroad, Have any these whereof thou hast had part, Been of that force to mollifie his heart? Hauc all thy cries and Orphanes teres together Moou'd him? ô no: they are as if a fether, Were here and there toft with each gale of winde, Thou shalt not finde that temper in his mind : For he is cauteris'd and voide of sence, And thanks his God he has a conscience. Can fland remorcelesse 'gainst both winde and weather, (Though he and's Conscience goe to hell together, Yea he doth feele no more thy piteous mone, Then doth an Anuile when its strooke vpon.

Why

Why then (hould ft thou thus strive again ft the streame, T'importune him that seemes as in a dreame, Secure of hell, carelesse of thy distresse? Fie take vpon thee some more manlinesse, Rouse thy dejected spirits which now lie, As if surprised by a lethargie; Wipe, wipe, those eyes with briny streamelings drownd, And plant thy selfe vpon a firmer ground, Then thus to wast thy griefe-enthralled heart, Which done: pray tell me but, what better art? Well, if thou wilt but filence thy iuft wrong For one halfe howre, or hardly for fo long, Ile shew the best I can of art and skill, With an unbounded measure of good will, To tell thy cruell lord, that there's a doome As well as here in after time to come : Ile tell him boldly though I chance to moue him For all he's lord, there is a Lord aboue him, Before whose throne he must come to account : For Svons-Lord is that Lord Paramount. Who swayes the massie orbe of heaven and earth, Brething on every creature that brings forth; It's he that gives to each increase and store, Girdling the swelling Ocean with a shore : The proudest Peeres he to subjection brings, And prostrate lies the Diadems of Kings : By him oppressors feele there is a God, That can revenge and chaftice with his rodde; Yea, thy iniurious Lord, I meane to tell Though he thinks of no hell, he's finde a hell. P 3 And

214

And those distreaming teres which thou hast shed, Are by thy louing father bottled, For there's no teres, fighs, forrowes, grieues or mones, Which come from any of his little-ones But in his due compassion still exprest Vnto their cause, he'le see their wronges redrest. How thinks't of this? will not these things enforce In thy relentlesse Lands-lord a remorse, Sooner and deeper (of that minde am I) Then puling with thy finger in thine eye. Well I will make attempt (which if it fall Out to my wishes as I hope it shall) The onely fee which I expect of thee, Is that thou would ft poure out thy prayers for me, Meane time pray for thy selfe (while I expresse Thy grieues, and heavens grant to my hopes [ucceffe.)

Now (rent-inhauncer) where away fo faft? Pray ftay a little fir for all your hafte : Perchance you may more profit by your ftay, Then if you fhould leaue me and goe your way : For I coniecture whither you are going, Nay, (doe not blufh) to fome poore fnakes vndoing, To root out fome poore Family or other ; Speake freely man do not your confcience fmother ; Ift not (you Suck-blood) to oppreffe the poore, And put him and his children out a dore ; Ift not to take aduantage on fome thing Or other for his vtter ruining : Ift not becaufe thou art not halfe content That he fhould fit vpon fo eafie rent.

And

And therefore takes occasion vpon naught, Forging fomthing he neither faid, nor thought. If fuch effects make thee abroad to come, Thou might with fafer confcience ftay at home. For whence be these exactions thus to ftretch. And racke thy Tenants? thou wilt fay, t'enrich Thy private Coffers, which in time may be A faire estate to thy posteritie. Or if not to encreafe thy wealth, or ftore, For to maintaine thy ryot or thy whore. O thou forlorne and miferable man, Come these conclusions from a Christian? Be thefe the ends whereto thou wert created, (ted ? To loue those things which make thy foule most ha-Ime forry for thee, (yet vnhappy Elfe) Why fhould I grieue that grieues not for thy felfe? How canft thou thinke thy children shall posses Long that eftate is got by wickedneffe? Or how imaginft that it can fucceede VVell with thy fhort liu'd heires, or with their feede, VVhen all that welth (was gathered to their hand.) Came from the cries and curfes of the land ? No no, thou greedy fpunge that fucks vp ftore, Yet more thou fuckes, thou needeft ftill the more. Euill got goods (howbeit neare foe fayre) Seldome enioyed are by the third heire For wauering is that ftate is raifd by wrong, Built its on Sand, and cannot hold out long. Yea I have feene (even in that little time Which I haue liu'd) Som of you in their prime.

And

216

And fo erected to the height of ftate. As you might feeme to be admired at. For braue attendance, fumptuous attire, For fare & pleafure what you could defire. In building gorgeous, fo as you might be Styled the heires of Earths felicitie. Yet 'laffe (againe) how quickly haue I feene. Thefe men fhrunke downe, as if they had not been : Their pompe decreaf'd, their great attendance gon, And for their many difhes one, or none ? True ; for how can it any other's chufe, Since God hath promifd not to bleffe that houfe, Which aimes at welth, and honour, for to rife By Orphanes teares, and woefull widows cries. Then for the first thou fees how it is vaine. To thinke that thy posterity can raigne Or long abide in that eftates poffession, Is got by fraud, collution, or oppreffion. Now I will fee whereto thy labours tend, To squize the poore that thou may better spend On wanton conforts (Souls eternall curfe) The first was ill, but this is ten-times worfe. Its well observed, that when wee doe begin, One finne's attended by an other finne. They come in paires, which feemes approud to be, In none oppressor better then in thee. Its not enough to prey vpon the Poore, But thou must spend his state vpon thy whoore. So that me thinkes I almost might auer, Its rather he then thou maintaineth her.

Muft

Muft his night cares and early rifing to, His dayly labours, when and where to fow, His painefull tillage, and his flender fare, His griefe when's crops the leffe fucceffiue are, His many howers of want, few of content, His fpeciall care to pay his Landf-lords rent, Must he that earnes his liuing best we know, (Being as God command'd) in's fweat ofs Brow, Must he the fleepes with many a troubled head, To finde his wife and hungry children bread, Must he (I fay) for all his lifes difquiet, Maintaine thy whoredome and exceffiue riot, Must he support thee in thy vaine delights, Thy midnight reuels, and thy pagent fights, Thy new inuented fashions, and thy port, Muft he at th'Cart, maintaine thy pride at Court, If this he doe ? this doome to thee is given, Court it on earth, thou's neuer Court in Heauen. No Ahab no, there is no place for fuch. (tutch. Whom poore mens grieues and forrowes will not Such as will have compassion, shall be there, Receiud in mercy that had mercy heere. But fuch as thou, who in the Pride of heart, Had little feeling of an others fmart, Shall heare that Ve, Away thou curfed, goe, "Repent in time, or thou shalt finde it fo : For tell me ? why fhould whorish complement Force thee to foules eternall languishment. Why fhould a minutes pleafure take from thee, All after-hope of thy felicitie,

217

Why

VVhy fhould a painted cheeke be fo fought after, Beleeu't in common fense it merits laughter That her complexion fhould by thee be fought, That knows its not her owne, but that 'twas bought. Yea one would thinke more reafon theres to feeke, "Complexion in the fhop, then on the cheeke. And better wil't with generous humors ftand, To buy't at first then at the fecond hand. Both's to be bought : no difference in the fale ; The one in groffe, the other in Retaile. O then take heede, mix not two finnes in one, Sinnes linkt together make the foule to groane. Their burdens heauy, yea tis fuch as they, Draw fin in Cart-ropes (as the Prophets fay) But if thou wilt needes to perdition run, And follow on that chafe thou haft begun. If thou wilt make thy body (in few words) A filthy Caske, or Cage of vncleane birds, If that fame foule, which fhould a Temple be, And dedicated to Gods Maiefty, Must now be made (it grieues me to expres) A flew for Harlots and licentioufneffe. Yet let not thy oppreffion be the meanes For to maintaine fuch proftituted queanes, That doe expose themfelues to publique shame. "One fin's enough : fhun thou oppreffions name. I know indeede what was of Ahab tould Is growne a ftory now exceeding old. His mouldred bones and afhes who can finde, Yea his example's quite worne out of minde,

Since

To Landf-lords.

Since for most part, mens corps's no fooner rotten, Then they and all their actions be forgotten. The stories old indeed, its true they fay, Yet is the vse experienst everie day, " Ech day we fee a filly Naboth flaine, "And every day a wicked Ahab raigne. Who if he fee one plat of ground that is Delightfull in his eve, or bordering his ; Whether't be vineyard, garden, or that land, (The front I mean) where Naboths house doth stand, He cannot be content till he has got, By fraud or violence, that fame neighbouring plot. For like an eye-fore, it did euer grieue him, Nor till ge gain'd it, would he euer leaue him. Yet for all this, our moderne Ahabs they, No fooner heare what facred Scriptures fay, Of that example, then they ftraight begin, To give a curfe to Ahab and his finne. Who made no bones (poore Naboth to denye him) To have one little Vineyard lying by him. Cruell he was, fay they, and well deferu'd His punifhment ; for he was rightly feru'd. To be depriu'd of all, life, realme, and crowne, That would not fuffer Naboth have his owne. Yea the reward did fit his Tyrant-hart. Defpoyl'd of all, that fpoyld the poore of part. So their owne iudgements (moft vnhappy Elues) That thus pronounce the fentence on themfelues. Their owne mouthes do condemn them, for by this Each proue their guilt by th'guilt they flow of his. Where-

VVherefore as Nathan did to Dauid fay, Taking Vriahs life and wife away, VVhere he propofd this queftion thereupon. Of him had many Sheepe, another one: Wherein indeed the Prophet Inadowed, That fact which Dauid to Vriah did, Which when that good King heard, as th' Scripture faith He answered straight, he hath deserved death, Thou art the man (quoth he) fo fure I.am, I may be bold to fay thou art the man. Thou Ahab, thou that by extortion gaines, Some Skreads of Land to better thy demains. Thou that triumphes in wrongs, and brings the crye And curfe of widdowes to thy Family. Thou that with dainties doft that carrian feede, That maw of thine, while fuch doe begge their bread, As thou oppreft, (to their extremeft wrong,) Thou art the man, Ile fing no other fong. Doft thou not yet relent? no ftreams of grace, Thrilling or trickling from thy blubber't face ? No figne of reformation ? Las I fee, Cuftome in finne cannot relinquisht be Vpon the inftant, wherefore I must fet My refolution not to leave thee yet, And howfoere thou take it, I will goe, Yet further with thee Ile not leaue thee fo, Two fpeciall motiues I might here produce, To moue thee to a confcience, and to vfe. A chriftian-like refpect to fuch as be, Ordain'd by God for to liue vnder thee :

The first is: to have eye vnto that forme Or image, which doth euery man adorne, Euen his creators image, which might moue Vs to loue him for his creators loue. The fecond is : a due especiall care, Or a confideration what wee are, Men ; and in that we fhould be humbler ftill. "Since beft of vs, are Tennants but at will : On which two branches briefly Ile dilate, Or rather curfiuely fo fhadow at, As feeing his Forme, thy little caufe of pride, This good furueigh may make thee mortified. The comely feature which is given to man, Implies the place from whence this creature came, Euen from that fragrant garden of delight, That fpicy Eden, where in our makers fight, He did enjoy farre more then tongue can tell, Till from that height he to corruption fell : Yet ftill retain'd his forme which first was given him In Paradife, whence now the Lord had driven him? So precious was this forme (as he who made it, For as we reade in Scripture, where he faid it, Let vs make man after our Image : he Saw in this forme (I fay) fuch maieftie As he who (in his mercy fast did make it) Becomming man of God, vouchfaf'd to take it. So that what th' first man Adam did before Chrift, th'fecond Adam as man, did reftore. Thou fees this Image then how it was given And reprefented by the God of heauen,

Who

To Landf-lords.

222

Who in his great compaffions, thought 't no fcorne, That the Creator take the creatures forme : And how canft thou (irreuerent wretch) difdaine That forme which thy Creator did retaine ? How canft defpife that image, or prefume To wrong that fhape thy Sauiour did affume? How canft thou preffe that foule with difcontent." Which thy Redeemer daign'd to reprefent ? How canft abufe that type for hope of pelfe. Which Chrift thy louer fhadowed in himfelfe? How canft thou fee that image rack't to be, VVhich in thy Chrift was ract and rent for thee? How canft endure to have that foule bereft. Of all releefe, and to have nothing left. Driuen from his houfe, forc't from his Tenant-right ? VVhen he that is the way, truth, life and light, Taking his forme to fatisfie for finne. Had not fo much as houfe to hide him in. Birds had their nefts, and every beaft his denne. Yet had not he what was permit'd to them. O let me now perfwade, be not extreame, (Its easie faies the Proverb) to wade the streame, Where th'foord's at lowest, recollect to minde His noble image, and in it thou'l finde, Such fingular impreffions of reguard, As I doe thinke thou'l honour't afterward. VVhen thou obferu's, ther's nothing that's in him, VVas not before in Chrift excepting finne. O then refine the ayme of thy intents. In raifing rints, thinke on thy Sauiours rents.

To Landf-lords. 223

In taking of aduantage, thinke on this, If God aduantage take for each amiffe, In what a cafe wert thou, how woe-begon, That of a thousand cannot answer one? If thou to grieue Gods little ones begin, Thinke therewithall, that thou art grieuing him. VVho in his mercy heares the widdowes crie, And in his pitty wipes the Orphanes eye, Which thou haft caufe to thinke on, fo much rather Sith God's the widdows Iudge, the orphans Father ; And though earths Iuftice, be of th'fecond fight, Yet hee's fo iuft, hee'l doe the pooreft right. But if mans Image, which were ftrange, fhould faile, With thy remorfeleffe confcience to preuaile, From that transparent Mirror, Ile descend, Though it may feeme in it to comprehend All humane glory, yea I may fay more, The forme of God which he affum'd before, Vnto that due obferuance, or that care, VVhereby we come to acknowledge what we are. Man's of a fubftance meane, having his birth, As his first native Mother, from frayle Earth, Brittle's his composition, and fo weake, Be his refolues, as hee can vndertake Nought with fo firme a purpofe as may ftand, Or will not change with th'turning of a hand. His health's a stranger to him, for when most, It feemeth with him, it is fooneft loft : For his abiding, hee's as in a Tent, VVherein hees militant, not permanent.

The

224

The world's his campe, his profest enemies. VVherewith he is to grapple, they be thefe. The turbulent affections of his mind. Which every houre is feuerally inclin'd. The goale which he doth ayme at, or th'reward, After the fight, hee lookes for after-ward : Thus thou may fee, in this fame earthly cell, Though dwell we feeme, indeed, we doe not dwell, But foiourne : Its no manhon but an Inne,-Syons our home, this pilgrimage is finne. As for our states, we are but leacers all, And fhall be put off, when hee's pleafd to call ; Yea I may rather fay (and not amiffe) VVe are the Leffees, he the Leffour is. And howfoere our Landf-Lords make accompt, They'r but inferiour Lords, hee's Paramount. Then if thou wilt but duely looke vpon't; Thy tenure stands vpon a tickle point, Yea I doe find thy ftate not worth a ftraw, If I have any iudgement in the law: And why fhouldst thou bring poore men into fuit. Sith thou thy felfe haft no ftate abfolute, --But for thy terme of life : fo as methinks, VVhen that French gibberish to my braine-pan finks VVhere Iohn a Stiles and 's neighbour Iohn an Okes, With many other Law-baptized folkes, Are brought in feaz'd of land, as they doe finde, In Burrow, English, Soccage, Gauell-kinde, Fee-tayle, fee-fimple (it oft feemes to me) These Lawyers are the simplest men that be:

who

Who are perfwaded (and would have vs too) But let's difcent from them :---theres fools enough : That of al states and Tenures are posses, Or can bee had, Fee-Simple is the beft. Whereas I thinke, if well they vnderftood, What fpecially concern'd them, and their good. They would conclude, Fee-fimple will not doe, A double-Fee is better of the two. If we could find indeed a difference, In th'liues of th'tenures, then there were fome fence To fay, that fuch a tenure were the strongeft ; Becaufe by it the Tennant lives the longeft. But tell me, are not all eftates that be Subject alike to mutability : To the poffeffour you will fay they are; If vnto him, why fhould we further care, Since as the Prouerbe is, when he is gone, The world's gone with him, as all in One: (vant, O then thou Earth-bred worme, why shouldest thou As if thou wert a Lord prædominant. Why shouldft triumph ore th'meaner fort of men, Since thour't compofd of one felfe Mould with the? Thou art but Adams fonne, and fo are they, Both of you fram'd and fashion'd of one clay, Both haue one image : then compafion take, If not for them, yet for their image fake. For though thou canft not one good looke affoord, To thefe poore fnakes, they'r deere vnto the Lord, As is thy felfe, as pretious in Gods eies, Bought and redeemed with as great a price.

Q

And

And though there be twixt Substitutes and Kings, Superiour states, and lower vnderlings, A difference in the world, yet there shall Twixt them (in heauen) no difference be at all. Onely what's good fhall approbation haue, With King and fubiest, conquerer and flaue. O then receive the bowells of compassion, And beare like mind, as thou doft beare like fashion : Let thy vnrighteous Mammon get thee friends. That when thy pilgrime daies of Labour ends, Thou may poffeffe a glorious heritage, After the period of this pilgrimage. My leffons are but fhort, pray then remember, As thou the welfare of thy foule doft tender. " The best of vs are tennants but at will, " And fand in hazard of diffeisure still. And though our states feeme firmer then the reft, They are vncertaine tenures at the beft. In briefe, thou earthly Landf-lord striue to be, (thee As thou wouldft have Heauens Landf-lord towards Not too extreame : thou knowft the doome is giuen, That no extortioner shall enter Heauen. Refolue what thou wilt doe : for though it grieue me To leaue thee yet, I am enforc't to leaue thee, And turne vnto thy Tennant, who difmaide, Stands heere at doore to heare what I have faid.

howfoeuer.

7 Hat ftate foeuer thou are feazed on, Or in what Tenure thou doft hold vpon, Il'e now addreffe my fpeech in briefe to thee, Wherein I ayme in part to comfort thee, In part to rectifie what may feeme ill, In thy peruerfe and vn-conformed will; That in them both for th'loue which I doe owe, To him thou represents, I may fo flow, That deere affection which we're bound to beare. To one another while we foiourne heere. As when an end of all our forrowes are Reduc'd to one fet period, and our care Shall have a finall end, what I have done, "In loue may be approu'd when I am gone. To moue thee vnto comfort, in a word, I'le vfe th'perfwafion which I gaue thy Lord, To humble his ambicious fpirit, when I told him of the different flate of Men. How in the eyes of men indeed they were Efteemed great, but when they fhould appeare, Before that high Tribunall, where all fhould, (Though if they might auoid it, many would,)

Make

228

Make their appearance, then the great fhould know, They were no more refpected then the low : One aduocate, one Iudge, one barre one triall, Conscience the onely difference, when Deniall, Seald with abite, or th'accurfed doome, Or th'inuitation with Venite come. Shall in that generall iudgement there expresse, Or weale, or woe, or hell, or happineffe : " So as when all are fummon'd fore that feat, It's better to be good, then to be great. For then, as well it may be vnderftood, They onely shall be great that are found good. But thou wilt aske, is there no comfort elfe? Yes that there is, thy daily labour tells, There's a reward of glory that's referu'd, For fuch as have their Maister duely feru'd, In their vocation : there's a penny too, Which though it be not given vnto thee now, Yet be affur'd, (for he that fpoke't is true) "When th'euening comes, thou shalt receive thy due. And though thou feeme a little while to ftay, Doe not repine, it's th'euening crownes the day. Wouldft know what I by th' Euening doe intend ? I meane the fun-fet of thy life or end Of all thy pilgrime daies, which though they bee, A very death, or Martyrdome to thee, (So little ioy conceau's thou vpon earth.) Yet wil thy Comicke end include thy mirth, VVhen from this Vale of labour and of care, Thou shalt vnto a mount of ioy repaire.

When

VVhen from this floting Sea, this fading cell, Thou shalt depart, and with thy Saujour dwell. Yea on thy death-bed thou art comforted, Thinking how truly thou haft laboured. How many carefull nights thou haft orepaft, VVithout the leaft of reft, how thy repaft, VVas not delighfull feeding with exceffe, But th'bread thou eate was mixt with carefulneffe; Noe houre without affliction or fome griefe, And now to finde to all thy woes reliefe It may no little folace the, when th'end Of difcontents shall bring thee to a friend That will in armes of charitie receive thee, (thee. Where beeing lodg'd, no woe, no want can grieue · Happy translation, and by fo much more, In that those Lordings which triumph'd before, And plaid vpon thy weakeneffe, now shall stand, To th'doome which those oppress of the land, Are subject to : tell me (poore wormeling) then, What difference there will bee twixt thee and them ? Great were they heere indeed, and did refemble, Those Bulls of Bafan, yet fee how they tremble, How quicke their powerfull greatneffe is made fmall, For little is their pompe, or none at all: See, fee thefe Cedars now are ftrucke with thunder, And thogh they once fate high, thei'r now broght under Those glorious titles which gaue wings to pride, Those gorgeous buildings made them deifide. Those many state-attendants, more or lesse, Like Sommer-Swallows following their fucceffe.

Are

230

Are vanish't, ruin'd, and dispersed quite, Ther's none of these can come into their fight, Yea which is worfe in-fteed of Eminence : There is an enemy called Confcience, That still disturbs their quiet and their rest : VVhich if at peace, there were continuall feaft. But that's impoffible, fuch men as thefe; Haue in themfelues a thoufand Witneffes, (them, And these poore fnakes caufe they did heere contemn Shall with their Confcience ftand there to condemne VVhere that fame place, they are appointed to (thē. Shall Tophet be, their word, yee curfed goe. Thou feeft then no difference doth appeare, Twixt thou and them faue onely when you're heere A little garifh vanity there is, Which doth include that happineffe of his, Who feemes fo popular, yet thou shalt fee, From thence is drawne his greateft miferie. For (tel me) doth not that externall state, Make him forget whereto he was create : Doth't not be-lull his foule in finnes delights, (Not knowing how the flesh gainft fpirit fights,) VVhereby he comes, which is the worft of all, To bring his reafon to his fenfes thrall. Yea I have heard of many great mens end, So full of feare and horrour as God fend Me leffe delights on earth fo I may have, A quiet easie passage to my graue. "For reafon doth informe me, rare it is, That earths delight should bring a man to bliffe.

More

More could I fpeake to comfort thy diftreffe, And more I was determinde I confesse, To infift on thy affliction, but I found, By my Experience this efpeciall ground, Held euer firme when we doe comforts tutch, Such is mans nature he will take too much. Rather then too too little, yea its fed ; More haue through ftore of comforts furfeted, Then fuch as from all outward folace pent, Haue famisht been through inward discontent. With Gedeons fouldier therefore preft I am, Rather to lap, and like a Ionathan, To tutch the hony onely with my rod, Then on this fubiect make too long aboad. Which that I may, from comfort Ile defcend, To faults in the which I would gladly mend. That God commands from who proceeds all power, "Let each be fubiect to's Superiour. For it would breed confusion in the Land. If people did admit of no commaund. But like a Platoes Common-wealth, fhould be, Subject to none, but in equalitie. Therefore that Lord, who of his grace doth loue vs, Hath ranked fome below vs. fome aboue vs. Aboue vs that we might be caution'd thence, To fhew vnto them due obedience. Below vs, that we might thereby expresse, To them our loue, to God our thankefulneffe, Our love, that we might our affection flow, In love to them that ranked are fo low.

Q 4

Our

232

Our thankefulnesse, that we should more receive, Then other fome, that more deferued haue. Againe, aboue vs, to acknowledge here, Without that power aboue, how weake we are. Below vs, that if we vnhappy Elues, Should grudge to fee fom greater then our felues, By feeing thefe wee might fuppofe they're fent, By their degree to bid vs be content, In this fame decent comly order then Of high and low, great and inferiour men, Thou ranked art, nor richeft, nor most pore, For thou feeft many goe from dore to dore, Whofe scrips their store, whose wallet is their wealth, Whole staffe's their stay, whole treasure is their health. Now in thy ranke there's many things I wifh Thou wouldst referme, which I doe fee amisse. "As first for all thy pouerty and want, Thou haft a difpolition arrogant: Rash, heady, selfe-wild, prouder then thy state Can well beare out, extreamely obstinate. Foolifhly peremptory, faucy with all, Befides I fee in thee (I must tell all) A factious wavering nature, apt to rife Through discontent, in any enterprise. A very lack Straw, or a custome affe, Alleadging fuch records as never was. A peft'lent member to the Kingdomes quiet. Prone to division, enmity, and riot. Sower of discord, selfe conceitedly Wife, yet I cannot well imagine why.

Yea

Yea. I have feene, fome of thy crew to gather, Like wild-geele for the wagging of a feather, Making ftrange combinations, which did tend, Still to their owne fubuerfion in the end. Some Terme agoe on one I chanct to light, Was come to towne to trie his tenant-right, With whom discoursing, he impart'd to me, Mong A other things how most iniuriously He and the rest which held one tenure there. About their state or title troubled were, And therewithall alleadgd that he could (how, Customes and discords (so he said) enough, And that from Noahs indignation, when Of all the world there were but left 8 men; No, this is true, quoth he, I will affure yee, Without delayer pannelled a Iurie : Where those 12 men (the number scarse holds right) Rifing to 12, that were before but eight, Found that our ancestry did hold in pottage, Now I imagine he did meane in Soccage, Which to make fure, this Custom speakes for vs, And he with that draws forth a Mittimus. This I may fweare, more then a fennet after, I could not thinke on, but was forc't to laughter. But now to thee, for I have done thee wrong, To keepe me from difcourfe with thee fo long, Whom I refolu'd to have aduertifed. Of these precedent errors mentioned; " Conforme thy will vnto thy Lords commaund In fitting things, thou liu'ft vpon his land.

And

And art his liedge-man, therfore thou fhouldft fhow Thy felfe to him, as thou thy felfe doeft owe. Vnto the Heyre to, a refpect is due, For time may come when he fhall pleafure you. Yet meane I not that thou fhouldft pay a Fine, Vnto the heire now in his Fathers time, "For if I were an heire as I am not, "Belieue it I would thinke that fine ill got. What I doe wifh to the is briefely this, Succeffe in thy eftate, as thou wouldft wifh, Conformed fo vnto thy Landf Lord here, That with heauens Land-lord thou may live elfewher.

FINIS.

LOVESLABYRINTH: The true-Louers knot:

INCLVDING

The difatrous fals of two ftar-croft Louers Pyramys & Thysbe.

A Subject heeretofore handled, but now with much more proprietie of passion, and varietie of inuention, continued:

> By RICHARD BRATHWAYTE. Res eft foliciti plena timoris amor.

At London printed by I.B. for Richard Redmer and are to be fold at the Weft dore of Pauls at the Starre. 1615.

STEVISTREA. Des tru, -Laisten here: 0.01 3.4 · · · · ·

CANDIDO ET cordato, Amico fælici Genio, perfpicaci ingenio, Richardo Mufgraue de Harcley Baronetto, coq; titulo vere digno:

Richardus Brathwaite hofce extre-mos Amatorum amplexus, grati animi primitias, folenniq. officio perfunctas humillime

Dedit, Dicauit, Dedicauit.

Richardus Mufgraueensis.

ANAGRAMM.

Charus mufis diurna reges.

Dystichon.

Sicut amas Muías, Muíis redamaris ab ipíis, Charus vt es Muíis, fecla diurna reges.

Vpon

Vpon the Dedicatorie.

Heare one aske me, if I could finde none, To dedicate this Poeme to, but one That's now transplanted to another sphere, And better meafures fings then anie's here. Its true indeede, the world's large and wide, And many were there I confesse befide, My now deceased Patron, I could finde, But none fo well agreeing with my minde; He was one that I honour'd, and his worth Deferu'd a pregnant Muse to fet it forth, Which though I have not I will fhew my beft, To crowne him fleeping in the bed of reft, Where, while I write, my paffion fhall appere, By each lines accent mixed with a tere : But you will fay this fubiect cannot moue, Such firme impression, cause it treats of loue, A fadder ftraine would better fitting be "Drain'd from the streames of graue Melpomene, Where every fentence might that paffion breede, "as if himfelfe were here portraide indeed ; This I could doe and fo expresse him too (But that his worth would be a fhame to you.

240

That

Vpon the Dedicatorie.

241

That are defertleffe to fee him by Fate Lopt, that has left you much to imitate, Of honour I dare fay, (which ere 't be long, "May be a fubiect to a better fong.) But I would haue you know how ere this is, It was from th' cradle nat'ralized his : Nor would I raze my Patrons dedicate, "How ere he feem'd to be obfcur'd by Fate, But as I lou'd him liuing, my defire Is to expreffe my loue vnto him higher Being now dead; that though my friend be gone, Yet life and death to friendfhip may be one : For th' print of loue if it be ftampt aright, Is moft in heart when it is leaft in fight.

FINIS.

R

242

VPON THE PREMAture death of the most Generous and Ingenious; the right Worschipfull, Sir RICHARD MVSGRAVE Knight-Barronett of Hartley: Who died in Italy, being preuented of his religious purpose, intending to visit the holy Sepulchre of our Sauiour in Ierusalem, an EPICEDIVM:

The Author Dedicates thefe Obit-teres, vnto his vertuous and modest Lady, the much honoured FRANCIS MVSGRAVE, Daughter to the truly honourable PHILIP LORD WHARTON.

His Ladies Obit-teres.

TEres I do shedde, yet are they shedde in vaine, Nor can they call him backe to life againe :

Yet

A funerall Elegy.

243

Yet figh I will, to wake him from his Reep. Thus whilk he Reepes in Earth, on Earth ile weepe. So my fad groanes fent forth unfeignedly May move the hardest heart to pitty me, To pittie me, that though I cannot haue The priviledge to fee my husbands graue Yet may my teres (as one it doth behove) Transported be to testifie my loue : My love which ener shall these obites keepe. She can doe verie little cannot weepe.

Richardus

244

Richardus Mufgrauiensis.

ANAGRAMM.

Vnis refurgam charus diis.

Dystichon.

Nafcimur & morimur : fed tu moriendo refurges, Gratior & fanctis, charioratq ; deis. De profectione eius ad Sanctifs, Chrifti Sepulchrum.

Chriftus erat pretium, Chrifti quia morte sepulchrū, perlustrare cupis: quem moriendo capis.

Richard Mufgraue.

ANAGRAMM.

Graces reward him :

or

We admire his grace.

Two Anagrammes included in one verfe.

Dyftich. Graces reward him, we admire his grace, Serue both as proper Mottoes for this place :

A funerall Elegie.

245

The first t' expresse the hope of his reward, Whence is implie'd our comfort afterward.

Vpon his Graue.

In Mulgraues hearfe I finde the Mules graue, For by his loffe a Patron loft they haue : Yet he's not loft, but is afcended higher, And fings with Mules of the heauenly quire.

His Character.

Faire England gaue me breeding, birth, and name, Ierufalem was th' place where I did ayme, But loe my Sauiours graue I could not fce, For my owne graue was made in Italy.

Vnto the Italian.

Doe not contemne my corps Italian, I am th' remainder of a Gentleman, Who knew what honour was : fo after-time May shew like love to thee, thou shows to mine.

Vnto

246 A Funerall Elegie.

Vnto Report.

To fpeake well of the dead is charitie, If thou be then a Christian, taxe not me Of what I did: (if men, we're prone to fall,) Speake what is well, or do not fpeake at all.

		Morte		Vitam.
		Fide		Notitiam.
Mors fidelium		Agone		Brauium.
eft	(de-	Peregrinatione	in	Patriam.
Transitus		Labore		Refrigerium.
		Expectatione		Præmium.
		Mundo		Deum.

BERNARDVS.

Peregi officium morientis amici.

To all vnhappy Louers.

Ome neere me louers, croft by louers fate, And fee thefe ftar-croft louers, that their fight, May fomthing cheere the drowping of your ftate, Showing fuch beames of comfort in the night, Of your difcomforts : that both loue and hate, "May make you happy louers by renew, "Had to thefe louers croft as well as you.

You fay you lou'd ; it's true : and fo did these ; "You fay you lou'd a faire one; fo did he, Who fancied Thifbee ; you fay louers peace, Is feldome purchas'd but by enmity, Deriu'd from parents : fo did loue encreafe, "In these vnhappy Louers, who were croft, By Parents meanes, of what they fancied moft.

Tell me then hapleffe louer, haft thou caufe To grieue at that which others have endur'd, As if thou wert quite priuiledg'd from lawes, Firme in thy felfe, from louers hate fecur'd, "O no, beleeue it, prickles hath the Rofe, " The fweet her fower; the hony-Bee her fting, "Love though a toy, yet thee's a toileform thing. R 4

Repofe

247

248

Repofe thee then vnhappy louer heere, And fee loues fal in tragick meafures fram'd, That when thou feeft a louer loofe his deere, Thou of like chance may neuer be afham'd Since thou art but as other louers were.

" For shame its none, to loofe whats scarce begun, " But shame is't not to doe what should be done.

Your passion-pittier,

Richard Brathwaite.

The Author vpon his infant Poeme.

I F ought's amiffe, imputed let it be, Toth' time wherein this Poeme it was writ, Which was (I muft confeffe) my infancy Of Age, Art, Iudgement, Knowledge, and of Wit: Nor doe I thinke it would this time befit, To meddle with my youths minority. Vnpolifht and vnhewd, I therefore fend it Freely toth' World, that fhe may friendly mend it.

Vpon the Preffe.

TRide would I bin byth' Country, Bench, & Prince, Yet but a month agoe, no longer fince, Was I for fpeaking (as it may be thought) And not for filence to the preffe thus brought. Iudge you my friends what confcience there is in't : By th' weights I beare the errors of the Print.

The Argument of Pyramus and Thysbe.

Hildrens love and Parents hate. Pure affection cros'd by fate. True their love, fo true to either, That they chuld to die together. Curteous woodnimphs, Tigres fierce, " Wash with teares their doleful hearse, Mirtle branches, roses sweete, " Satyres strow about their feete. Woodnimphs with their Syrens voice, Call their parents by their noise. Who with pace (Now pace God wot.) " Made haft they could, yet hafted not ; Till they faw their children lie, " Arme in arme full louingly. Oft they fought, but all in vaine, To bring life to them againe. Trickling teares came dropping downe, "Groues with teares were ouerflowne, Water mixt with crimfon blood, "Made a deluge where they flood. Thisbees obsequies they see, " Grauen in an Olive tree. Their bones to a fhes they doe burne And place them in one facred vrne. That as their love was all in all, So they might have one Buriall.

To this fhrine, this flatue faire, Louers wont for to repayre. Who to confirme their fincere Loue, Offered them a Turtle Doue. But when their reliques fcattered were, Maids nere after offered there Their wonted incenfe, but forfooke, The Altar which was wont to fmoke, With mirrhe and thime, which they did burne, With folemne rites about their vrne. Yet left their fame fhould fo decay, Their tombe is to be feene this day, Which firft erected was to be, Conferuer of their memory.

Nimrods

Pyramus and Thysbe.

N Imrods faire City, beauteous Babylon, which admirations eies once gaz'd vpon, Though grac'd in all, in nought fo gracious. as in her Thysbe, and yong Pyramus. Thysbe a maid as faire, as faire could be, he for his fexe, was full as faire as fhe. These two resplendent starres, shone in one sphere, and by contiguate manfions bordering neere, Renewd their loues vnhappy memory, preff'd downe too much by parents iealoufie, Ave me too iealous, to preuent that good, of fincere loue which cannot be withftood. These two debarr'd of meeting, not of louing, (uing for loue, though fmothred, hath an inward moo-Sought means to fhew their mutual loue by woing, fupplying that in words, they mift in doing. Their walls abutting neree, fo neere did meet. That these two Saints might each another greete. A chinke there was, which Thysbe foone efpies, for maids in wanton feats, haue Linceus eves.

VVhich

The true Louers knot.

VVhich beeing feene (well feene) fhe did repaire each morne betime to fee if he were there : At last he spies it, (men haue duller witte, then women haue, yet better manage it.) This crany was the fhrine to which they came, where either call'd on other, by their name. And with deuotion ech to other kneeled. protefting loue, hid loue, fo long concealed. VVhy fhould our Parents, Pyramus would fay, feeke to protract our loues by long delay ? Or why fhould we, with fuch precifeneffe fhunne, that which our parents long before haue done ? Suppose their loue was pure: our loue's as pure, they full as fond as we, were drawen to th' lure. And why, my Thysbe, fhould that comely face, for all her feature, haue a ciphers place? Thou art no fhadow, but a fubftance (deare) in fubftances, impressions best appeare. Then for my loue, thy ioy, and beauties fake, that feemes eclypf'd, let me th' impression make, Lets to the field, ave me, we cannot goe, we are immur'd within the grate of vvoe; And why fhould I, fond man, my Thysbe moue, to vvanton pleafure ? vvhere's no vfe of loue ; I know thou lou'ft, in that thy griefe is more, pent from that S' vyhich thou yyould fain adore. Thysbe flood peeping through this narrovy chinke and though fhe fpake nought, yet fhe more did Her blufh, her fmile, her biting of her lip, (think. did all the fecrets of her hart vnrippe. Thus 254

Thus whilft they flood both flanding at a bay, wifhing fome private paffage, or fome way, To confummate their vowes : in comes her mother. which made them take their leave one of another. She fkoold her daughter: vyhat my trickfie girle, are you befotted with this worthleffe pearle, This beauties bloffome? faire enough, but poore, dote on the rich, affect his rags no more. Mother (quoth Thisbe) you are much decau'd, if I may speake with reuerence, he nere crau'd Loue at my hands : what did he here, quoth fhe, that he fo private fhould difcourfe with thee? He is (quoth Thisbe) come from Salamine, (vine and brought me grapes, pluckt from that tender Ætolus planted, which she gaue in hast, vnto her mother, praying her to taft : Shee tooke and tafted : fruits variety feru'd at that time for her Apology. The pitchy fhade of night approach't at hand, (mad vyhen Screech-owles, Fauns, and Satyres haue co-Where skipping in their lawne and flowry groue, Siluane to Siluane confectates his love. Yet when each chirping bird, goes to her neft, loues eyes be open, and can take no reft. Beafts to their caues refort, furceafe to prey, feeding on that they purchaf'd by the day. Each creature in his kind difpos'd to fleepe, but feruent loue continuall watch doth keepe : He toffeth in his bed, withing it day, the Ttrue-louers knot.

Hoping

hoping thereby his cares to throw away. Yet when the night is paft, the day yeelds more, then ere the night affoorded him before : Thus Pyramus enthrall'd twixt hope and feare, hopes, though fmal fruit of hope in him appeare. He cannot fleepe nor wake, but twixt them both, fleeping and waking as a letharge doth. Oft would he hugge his pillow in his arme, and cling it fast about, to keepe it warme. Supposing it was Thysbe, and would fweare, no creature ere could be more welcome there, Streight would he call on Hymen, then inuite, his friends and kinsfolke to his nuptiall rite. And faigning their replies, thanks he would giue, vowing requitall once, if he fhould liue. Oh what distractions haunt a louers minde paffing those bounds which nature hath affign'd, Nought vpon earth, but limits hath we fee, but boundleffe loue can nere contained be. Hearbs yeeld a foueraigne cure to euery wound, but for loues cure, in hearbs no vertue's found. Then bleft is he, and in an happie ftate, who for loues dart is made inuulnerate. Yet was it hard to fee and not to loue. Thysbe's admired beauty, which could mooue, Serpēts, birds, plāts brute beafts which grafe & feed, more then ere Orpheus with his mulicke did. Her goulden treffes, pure ambrofian, Fairer then all the twifts Arachne fpan,

Shone

Loues Labyrinth, or

256

Shone far more bright then Phæbus gliftring raies, by all mens iudgements, meriting more praife; Her corall lip, (no lip) but ports of pleafure, which feem'd to open to whole mines of treafure, Appeard fo fweet, that all was fweet about it, for I am fure nought could be fweet without it. Her brefts two iuory mounts, mounts may I cal the for many vales of pleafant veines empall'd them Thefe like two borders, did such fweets difplay, that who lodg'd there, lodg'd in the milkie way. Below a fhady vale, aye mee that fhade, which nature in her owne defpite had made, Had made for glory of that facred mount, with the fweet Nectar of a liuely fount. A ftill diftilling fount, an heauenly riuer, for theres no earthly fpring can fpring for euer. Her wanton gate, her glance, her fmile, her toying, all ioy'd in one, fhewed pleafure in enioying. So as^b Euphrates, where this city bounded, vents vp his paffions, for he oft refounded Beating his bancks, and eccoing in the aire, and then retiring backe, feem'd to defpaire. That Thysbe could not loue a fenceleffe one, at which repining, he would make his mone. Hath not my current ere renovvned beene, for th' eafie paffage of my quiet ftreame ? Hath not my torrent yeelded much content, (fpent? to gild his meanes, vvhofe meanes where vvholly Haue I not fuffered much ? fuftain'd great paines, fraugh-

the True-louers knot.

fraughting your trauaile with a double gaines. And for fupporting of fo many fhippes, may not Euphrates graze vpon her lippes, Whom thus he loues? vnthankfull coaft (quoth he) respecting least, who did the most for thee. This being faid, hee could expresse no more, but in a loue-ficke paffion, bett the fhore. And to ^c confirme, what I have heard men fay, he left his courfe and tooke another way. If fenceleffe rivers that were never feene to loue, or care for louing, held no meane, In their affecting Thisbe : what fhould hee that had both fence and reafons purity? Pure in his mind, and faire in beauties fhew, Narciffus fecond for his comely hew: Lipp'd like Adonis, Frycina loued, fhaped like Alexis Pollyos approvued. Grac'd with a fmiling countenance, which did breed, a louely white, mix'd with a comely red. Two fparkling eyes pierciue as Diamond, which, wherfoere they gaf'd, they feem'd to woud, That though the Sun were fet, yet his bright eies fhone as the Beames which from the fun doe rife : The night being gone, too long god wot in going, her wandring lights to Tethis banks beftowing, Titan came peeping in at Thyisbes chamber, whom the reflected with her locks of amber. Each other greeting, as if had beene there, two Suns at once, both in one hemyfphere. Hard S

258

Hard was the combat, but more hard it were, to tell whole beams difful'd their light most clear, Yet in the end Titan in an angry mood, feeming furpaft, did hide him in a cloud. Thysbe puts on her cloths, bleft were those cloths, thrice happy fhade, that fhadow'd fuch a Rofe, Where being dreffed, not dreff'd as fhee would bee, fhe tooke her to her praiers religioufly. (flow. High heauens (quoth fhe) from whence al pleafures deigne fome of then on Thysbe to beftow. For by your power, which I doe much adore, I loue but that which you have lou'd before. Thou thundring Ioue, did dote as well as I, when thou defired with Danae to lye; Which to effect, thou turn'd her to a showre. a Goulden showre her beauty to defloure, For cloth'd in lightning, Danae denaied, to ioyne with thunder : afterward arraid In dewie moisture, (moisture we do loue,) She cast off shame, and did thy shape approve. And Iuno lou's Ixion for his kiffe, Venus, Adonis, for his comelineffe. Daphne (poore Laurell) chafed by Apollo, running as fast before as he did follow. Thus did your love, your luft, your thoughts renew, if I thinke ill, I thinke no worfe then you. And well may gods with womens fexe dispence, Since they were first authoris'd their offence. My loue's not spotted with lascinious tutch. unleffe it be by louing ouermuch.

Nor

Nor branded with the note of Infamie. but pure as Delia Queene of Chaftitie. Thoughts are the worft, my actions they be cleare, & he'fe no man whofe thoughts nere foyled were. Then pardon if I loue, fuppofe it zeale, whole paffions be too hote for to conceale : Leauing her Orifons, composed of Loue, loue dallying praiers : her eyes afide fhe moues, And fees the chinke, which fhe first faw before, which did augment her dolors much the more. For fhee recall'd to minde, to memory, her mothers chiding, fathers Ieloufie; Both which a streame of teares extract from her, as if pale death her comforts fhould interre. Oft would fhe call on louely Pyramus, with fmothered fpeech, as one fufpitious : Left the pure ayre, and walls adioyning neere, fhould prattle loue vnto her parents eare. Oft would fhe nibble out a ftone or two, to make the crift feeme bigger to the flow Of her deepe loue : for they fufpected were, therefore debard, left they fhould come too neer. Pyramus pent vp all this while, at laft, gets out and hies him to the chinke as fast. Where what difcourfe their mutuall loue affoorded, feem'd by the Gods in heauen to be recorded. Either with greedy eye gaing on other, (ther: Thysbe look'd backe fomtimes, doubting her mo-For the fufpected much her iealous eye, in her loues prefence to be euer by.

S 2

Enuious

Loues Labyrinth, or

Enuious vvall, oft would thefe louers fay, diuide thy felfe and let vs haue a way. To meete, to kiffe, to parley and relate, the folemne feftiues of our nuptiall state. Why fhould thy marble ftructures hold vs out, vyhofe loue encircles Babilon about ? Or why fhould terrene composition moue a breach or feparation of our loue ? Loue is celeftiall : thou a marble fhrine, why fhouldft thou hinder loue that is diuine ? And yet we cannot fo ingratefull be, but we must offer vp our thanks to thee; Our vowes, our giftes, our best prif'd facrifice. in that thou yeelds a passage to our eyes, Yeelding some comfort in this gloomie night, fupplying kiffes with the vfe of fight. Loue hath fome harmonie, fome fmall agreeing, for what it wants in tutch it hath in feeing. Hefperias garden was by ferpents kept, whofe euer watching eye-liddes neuer flept. And Colchis Fleece was kept as warily. till Iasons meanes obtain'd the victorie So be our loues immur'd, interred rather. by two fufpicious dames, one fubtile father. Then would they kiffe the wall and oft entreat, that in compassion it would let them meet. We will not tell our parents, nor expresse. who twas, gaue way vnto our happineffe, Louers be faithfull, of our faiths beleeue vs, (vs. fince this straight durance cannot chufe but grieue The

260

The wall replyde not : yet their words had force, pierfing her hardneffe, foftned with remorfe. For euer fince, as well it may appeare, the marble fheds each morne a Trickling teare, Thus did thefe louers paffe the weary morne, depriu'd of that which louers best adorne. And that is private meeting, which being miffing, we beat the aire but with conceit of kiffing, A vaine conceit, to dally with delight, Expecting fun-fhine in a clowdy night, Imparadif'd in ioyes he cannot be, that's clad in sable roabs of mifery. Oh then conceiue what forrow he fuftaines, that in perpetuall languishment remaines. O what diffractions do his ioyes diffeuer, feeding like vultures on his hart for euer. If "Zeuxes pictured grapes, fo lively were; That many birds in flocks repaired there, Pecking vpon his ftatues, and did browfe vpon his liuely grapes, meere liueles fhowes. Well may we thinke, that Ioue himfelfe can make, a farre more lively, and proportion'd fhape, Then a poore painter; though his Grapes feeme ripe, yet they were drawne from Ioues first Archetype. Then Ioues best picture, Natures admiration, Thysbe, even Thysbe made for recreation, May well be thought to draw each bird each beaft, from Pastures greene, vpon her lippes to feast. It were a feftiue banquet there to be, whofe breath is Nectar, breathing deity. S 3

Heere

Loues Labyrinth, or

262

Here Pyramus would be, if heavens would grant it, for he efteemes no treafure whileft he wants it. Since fuch a Iewell, fuch a pretious Gem, in that it's rare, is more admired by men. Thus Tantalifed, the Gods doe feeme to loue him. fetting him fruite, but fruite too farre aboue him. For when his lips (pure lips) fhould but com ny them they mocke his lips and in derifion flie them. Doft flie my lips (quoth he) ô doe not flie me, for what I doe, I doe it but to trie thee, To trie thy loues which though our parents thwarted our conioin'd loue difioin'd fhall nere be parted, Well may our bodies be difioin'd a funder, but loue's to head-ftrong, none can keepe it vnder: Loue is free-borne, it cannot feruile be, to begge for curtefie with a bended knee. Thysbe kept concord, for each word he fpake, feem'd her retired paffions to awake, Stird vp her fpirit, as infpir'd by fate, making her ftout that was effeminate. Continue thy intendments fweete, quoth fhe, and as thy fhadow I will follow thee, Paffing a fea of dangers launching deepe, till I the fhadow to the fubftance creepe, Passe Oeta's as forrest, fnow-cliued Caucafus Thysbe will follow fteps of Pyramus; Thee Riphean Mountaines, or the Hetririan plaines, Each morne refounding with the notes of fwains. If thou loue Vinolus, with her fragrant fpices, or Ericthea famous for deuices: Thysbe will follow thee with fpeed fhe may, only only, her trauaile with thy loue repaie. But these are but discourses of our ill, which if not cured, be augmented ftill. For that you know renues the maladie, which rubs the fore, and yields no remedie : For why fhould any labour me remoue, From that admired mirror whom I loue. And I am of that nature : more they hold me, from fancying thee, more paffions do enfould me, Then plot (my Pyramus,) contriue, inuent, that we may harbour loue in loues content, Till wearied with ioy, wearyed too foone, thou leaue adoring of the watrie Moone. Where being cloyed with the fweetes of loue mayft leaue the vale, and tafte the fruits aboue. Thou art my fheepheard, I will be thy plaine, I the poore cottage, thou the homely fwaine, Thou fhalt refresh thy felfe vpon my banckes, which having don, I know thou'le give me thanks, For my diffuled ftreames, ftreams meerely fent, not much enforc'd from Thysbes continent, Come then, for why fhould any marble wall being materiall fubftance, fo appall Our ardent wifhes, wifhes which proceede from loue-fick paffions, which more paffions feed. Let our diftilling teares congeal'd in one, disffolue the hardnes of this flinty ftone. Remorfe may moue this ftone by diuine wonder, to let vs meete, diuide herfelfe a funder. This faid, maine rivers of diffreaming teares, in their woes-torrents purblinde eies appeares, Seeking S4

The true-Louers knot.

Loues Labyrinth, or

Seeking, but feeking all in vaine God wot. to moue that fhrine, which weeping moued not. It wept to fee true loue fo ftraite confinde, difioyn'd by fates, which fauours had combinde. It wept to fee their parents fo vnkinde, to curbe their bodies prefence, whofe pure minde, Rapt with content of feeing, not enioving, acts discontent, debard of further toying. It wept to fee their minds fo well agreeing in one felfe place, not to have one felfe-being. It wept and much repin'd that difmall fate, Should croffe pure loue by loue-difioyned hate : And pittying their cafe fhed many a teare, Shedding fo many, fhe her felfe did were. Oh what hard harted parents had thefe two, fince what the ftones allow'd, they'l not allow, Reproouing that in theirs, themfelues affected, foiling their youth with what their youth respected Are thefe the fruits and honours of our time, the fruitleffe bloffomes of a fterile clyme? Are thefe our louing Sires ? oh no, they are hard, to preffe downe loue, that cannot be debar'd. You high refplendent heauens, whofe cherifhing heat with feafoned warmth, our fpacious borders greet, Temper fuch parents hearts, as are not won, till both their line and linnage be vndone. Soften their ftifned minds, oppreff'd with rage, playing fharpe tyrants in declining age. For why fhould they find fault their children play, fince in their prime they playd as much as they. Decrepit

264

Decrepit age, ftilted for want of ftrength, with brinish teares deplores their fins at length; But thus I confter't : They their age deplore, theyr youth is fpent, and they can doe no more. And like an enuious viper, would have none, to vfe their ftrength, becaufe their ftrength is gone. But old age ers in this : experienc'd wit fwaies their proceedings, youth abandons it. Nor doe they know what hurt poore maides receiue, to pen them vp from that they wish to haue. For though they be immur'd in walles of Braffe, Love hath her loope-holes by which the will passe. In spite of iealous dotage, and espies fome privy chinke, though wacht by g Linceus eies, For loue enclof'd like raging elements of fire and water, though imprifoned, vents, And must eruption haue, it cannot be an heauenly motion fhould want libertie. ^hEurydice though fhes enforc't to dwell. in Stygian Plutoes court infernall hell, Yet her tranfmounting paffions doe remoue themfelues from hell vnto the earth aboue. Poore fwaine Dorinda though by Satires kept, in a vaft caue, whofe watchfull eies nere flept, But with reflexion both by night and day, had fpeciall care left fhe fhould get awaie, Comforts her felfe in louing, fearing not, but chaft defires ore long would get her out, Loue is enfranchifd not in bonds retained. fpotlesse as Christall, for no foile can staine it. The 266

The boiftrous windes fhut vp in iron grates, on each occafion and intendment waites. When they come forth their tempefts hurrie more grieu'd at their durance, then they did before. That morn which feds her glittering raies too foone, fables her funne in cloudes ere it be noone. But when its long ere that her beames appeare, we doe prefage ere night they'le fhine more cleere. ⁱ Thetis exiled from her marine feate, a willing exile with the Sea-nimphs meetes, To celebrate Achilles funeralls. in fable robes, in difmall feftiuals. Each wept whole flouds of teares to wafh his hearfe, whereon engrauen was a doleful verfe; That no hard harted paffenger came by, but feeing it, would fheede teares inftantly : Some made relation of his valiant fpirit, fome of the glory which his acts did merit : And wofull Brufis one amongst the reft, being his captiue, whom fhe loued beft, Emburied him with liquid ftreames of forrow, renewing griefe with each renewing morrow. So did thefe louers, louers too fincere, rife ere the morning dayftar could appeare, Bewayling much their parents frowardneffe, that kept them from the fupport of happineffe. Happie, if happy in enioying loue, to fee the Turtle billing with the Doue, The skipping Kid, the Goate, the penfiue Hinde, conforting each with other in their kinde:

Yet

Yet thefe two louers are debard from this ; what brute beafts haue, they haue not but in wifh: And wifhes yield fmall comfort, poore releefe to fuch as are preft downe with heapes of griefe. O that heauens fplendor, her tranflucent eie fhould fee, and feeing, pittie miferie, Yet fuffer man to be oppref'd therewith, Making him die a neuer dying death. Or why fhould man endu'd with reafons light, in his owne bowels harbour fuch a fight, As may fubuert the pallace of the foule, ecclipfing it, making her bewty foule ; Converting that by her depraued will, as first feem'd good to fome apparant ill; Not gathering hony from each bitter flower of difcontent, nor reaping fweet of fower, But in diffractions paffionate we run, in headlong courfe till that we be vndone : And then defpairing, we refide in woe fhut vp in fhelfes: we know not where to goe. The fillie Bee that labours in her hiue. in her Hyblæan works addres'd to ftriue, With nature in proportion : feemes to make, more for her felfe then nature for her fake. In her digefting and difpoling fit, what fhe had gathered by her native wit, She refts fecure of loue, worfe hap haue we, oppreft with loue-fick paffions then hath fhe But heauens haue fo decreed : this is our lotte Creatures that have most reason, most should dote. Thus 268

Thus each ore-fhadowing eu'ning fhadowed hope, ayming at loue, loue was their onely fcope : At which they levelled : But ('las) difdaine foaring aloft, the frute of loue retaines : Lockt from all comfort, fhut from fweete repofe, fhe to their parents doth their loue difclofe. Telling them how their children made repaire, vnto a chinke which breath'd a cooling aire. Yeelding content enough : and they fhould fee that ere long time Thy/be would frutefull bee. Their parents ftamp'd, but Tymon most of all, for hee was rich and feard his daughters fall. Yet well he could have brook'd her nuptiall bed, if he were rich that fhould his daughter wed. Fie on fuch Gould-adoring parentage, that refts refpectleffe both of youth and age, Who meafure loue by wealth are fure to haue, Midas his eares, depriu'd of what they craue, They wreft their childrens minds to make them tafte. the fweet of Gold, which works their baine at laft. ^m Thus parents are as vipers to their feed, fince they their venome in their bofomes feede. Which like to Naptha that being once inflamed, Burnes of it felfe, and cannot be reftrained. But loue the more represid the more confin'd, encreafeth fo much more in louers minde. (them, ⁿ For though their watchfull eies did ftill looke ore Gods pittying their diffres did more deplore them ; And Ioue himfelfe yields foueraigne remedy, to thefe two louers fraught with mifery.

And

the true Louers-knot.

And well might Ioue yield comfort to their wounds. fince he his paffions on like paffions grounds, For he (though God) did doate as well as man, transforming Leda to a milke white Swan. Ioue in his aiery throne with piercing eies, thefe louers griefes from high Olimpus fpies, And fpying them oppres'd, pref'd downe with louing Their humane paffions force a diuine mouing. You fruitfull fprigs fprung of a fruitfull tree, I heare your plaints, and I doe pittie yee, That the ioynt tablet of two louing hearts fhould be deuided into feuerall parts Hard-hearted Parents, made of Marble fure Or elfe they could not fuch diftreffe endure, That their owne budding bloffoms which did grow, from their vnfeafoned bofome fhould beftow Their oile, their labour in affections straines, yet kept in thraldome by their parents revnes. But I that have the Regiment above, rules Cupids arrows, knows the vfe of loue, I that have poafted down from heavens high fphere, to Danae, Io, and the milke-maides here, And to Latona bewties facred Queene, yet to this hower, as Ioue I nere was feene, Nor euer knowen, fuch was our diuine power, tranfuming fhapes of plants and roarie fhowers, Will pittie your affections and apply, Vnto your wounds are prefent remedy. For we (as men) do naught of woemen craue, but what they well may giue, and we may haue. If

269

Loues Labyrinth, or

If the orefhadowing cloudes whofe duskie face, obfcures heauens fplendor, Sols refulgent grace : If mifty vapours, foggy excrements, thickned by mixture of grofe elements, If Heauen, earth, Sea, plants, ftones, or ferpents may yield you content, or can your woes allay, Rely on me; for Ioues high diademe, was first ordained to fuccour wretched men, And by the flagrant creffet of the Sunne, wele either fee your minds vnited one. Or elfe my power shall contradict her selfe. Making affection vaffaile vnto pelfe, VVhich were difcordant mulique, harfher straines, then ere Pan fung among his countrie fwains For its not fit that hand-maids fhould command vs or fubiect powers fhould in their acts withftand Pelfe (worlds trafh) in loweft ranke fhould fit. (vs. loue as a Miftris framd to manage it : For who will contemne the daie, the night adore, fet best behinde, and worst part before. Ioue having in compassion feene their woes, to ° Helperus the evening ftar he goes, And bids her fhew her light, for by her aide, fhe might yeeld fuccour to a helpleffe maide, Hesperus roused, rous'd before her time in heauens horizon streight began to shine : Ore cannoping heauens beawtie with a clowde, all which by Ioue himfelfe was well allowde, Then wandring ftarrs in different dignity, fent out their lights difparkled orderly.

270

Areto-

Arctophilax begotten of the beare, and Calfiopeia likewife did appeare, The Pleiades, Orion, with the reft, Caftor and Pollux, whom Ioue loued beft; All these confort and make one constellation. at Ioues command for lovers recreation. The heavens be-fprinkled thus with fundry lights, limit the day by bringing on the night, To comfort wearied fpirits fpent with toyle, whofe troubled brains the night-time fhuld affoil. For Ioue at first conceiuing mortall feede, amidft his labors fome repaft to need. Created night those cares to take away, which had beene foftred on the toilefome day, Night wifhed night, to Louers that defire to be partakers of that heauenly fire. Cupid (blind boy) infufeth in their breft, which once infus'd engendreth their vnreft. But its no matter, leaue vve cannot louing, though bitter fruits redound to our approuing : This gloomy night yeelds comfort to their wo, (go, For Ioue had fhowen the place, where they fhould To Ninus toomb, a toomb to bury griefe fhaded with couert, fit for loues reliefe: Thefe two bleft louers, bleft in loues appearing, addreffe their eye for fight, their eare for hearing. Left their fufpicious Parents fhould fift out, Their fond intendments which they went about: The Night was very darke, darke nights be beft, For fuch as on the day-time take no reft.

Since

Since each difparkling beame which doth appeare, yeelds to a Iealous louer caufe of feare. But duskie nights which Louers beft approue, giue free acceffe of parly vnto loue. Thisbe loue-ficke, for loue had made her ficke, time thus occafioned, findes a pretie tricke To gull her keepers and her Parents too, which who can blame her, all that loue will doe: Decre be our Parents loues, their wils, their bleffings by which we profper: deerer be the kiffings Of those we loue fincerely from our heart, for where they be there is our chiefest part. No vnfrequented defert can remoue our hearts from them whom we entirely loue. No diftance can difioine vnited mindes. no labyrinth fram'd with Meanders winds : We reft the fame or elfe it cannot be. that our affections ground on constancie. Thi/be with creeping pace pac'd ore the floore, oyling the hinges of the creeking dore, Left it fhould fhew her meaning to her mother, whofe eies fhe q feared more then anie other. For they were too too iealous and would fpie, more in her dealing then her fathers eve : For he was bed-rid and could hardly moue his fenceleffe joints and knew not what was loue : Yet this bed full of bones, this fap-leffe wretch had fap within his cheft, for he was rich; And more, for which all wifemen-may deride him. he euer lov'd to haue his golde befide him.

For

For on his trafh he was fo deeply rooted, that he (fond-man could neuer fleepe without it : Thus had he much, yet he defir'd much more his gold, his Idole which he did adore. And though he had no vfe for that he got, yet he from raking more furceafed not. Which punishment was first inflict'd by Ioue, Rich men fhould haue no vfe of what they loue ; But in an in-bred appetite to golde, delight to haue it euery minute tolde : VVhich being done making an endleffe paine, they tell their trash and put it vp againe. Thus did this aged Tymon : and refpected, wealth more then youth of girles most affected, For richleffe was the fcope he leuel'd at, heele call none fonnes but men of good eftate. Worth worthleffe feemes, if worth haue no retire, nor meanes by which their honour might afpire. For beggar Irus whofe eftate was poore, made Ithacus to drive him out of dore. And feeing him arraide in beggars lift. in furious paffion flew him with his fift. Thus men are made refpectleffe for their want, and pouerty, though faire, yet whole not taunt? Deeming them most vnfit of honours throne. that have more wit then fortune of their owne. But he that poifeth worth as worth fhould be, will not obfcure true worth for pouertie; Being the fubftance and maine difference, twixt fauage beafts and humane excellence. T And

And more is trash inferior to the minde, then pith of trees fuperior to the rinde : Thysbe escaping, hies her to the place which was appointed : her admired face Caft fuch a luftre on the plaines belowe, as fteepy mountaines couered with fnow. In Maiden white appareld : maides fhould be arraied fo to fhew their modeftie ; Such piercing eyes fhe had, which fhon fo bright, that they gaue day vnto a gloomy night : So that each Wood-nimph, Faune and Satyre there, role from their caues perceiuing light appeare. Siluanus god of woods and defert groues, his fhaggy head from off his pillow moues ; And halfe afleepe feeing his arbour fhine and all about him, long before his time He girds his quiuer to him, and drew neere (cleere : to Ninus toombe, where fun-beames fhon most Where he no fooner came ; ay me! too foone to that vnluckie fhrine that ominous toombe: But feeing her he caft all fleepe afide, fewing, and futing Thysbe for his bride. Mirror of women, beft of Natures art, (heart heare a poore wood-god that hath pledg'd his To thee and to thy feature : heavenly queene that would these flowrie thickets well befeeme, Sit thee downe here: this is an arbour fweet, where al the wood nymphs vfe each euen to meet Making a concord ; whofe mellifluous found, would glad the birds and all the desert round :".... The

The Nimphs shall make their praiers and renew, each morne their hymnes, that they may pleafure The Mules nine from Pyerus shall defcend, (you and to our mulique their attention lend, Where if there anie difcord chance to be, Mules themfelues will yeeld a remedie. There Clio, Erato, and Melpomene, Euterpe, Thalia, and Calliope, Terpsychore, Vrania, and that fweet tong'd Poly-himnia finging at thy feet All thefe fhall grace thee in this rurall plaine, if thou canft brooke to loue a Countrie fwaine : Yet am I borne more high then mortall men, deriu'd from gods euen of immortall ftem, ^t Sprung my beginning, therfore fcorne not me, fince if thou match thou match's with deitie. The flowery fhrubbs thou feeft doe I command, nay euen the Cedar which fo high doth ftand, Refts at my power : there is no branch doth grow, whofe moifture doth not from Syluanus flow. The fweeteft fpices of Arabia, the preciou'ft perfumes breth in Lidia, Smell by my meanes: for my celeftiall power can make each ftinking weede a fragrant flower. Then deare affect me, for no perfume's good if I want thee that perfumes every Wood.

The

Thysbees replie.

F you (quoth Thysbee) as you doe profeffe, deriue your birth from gods then fhew no leffe : For its not fit that gods with ftarres araid, (maid. and heauens immortall fphæres, fhould loue a ^u A Countrie lasse best fits a Countrie swaine. his oaten pipe best fuites with her harsh straine, Those gods that in Olympus regiment, fit and beare rule skorne bafer elements. Then if you be diuine, as fure you be, furceafe your fuite which yeelds indignity, To that high of-fpring whence you did proceed, ftaine not your loue with any mortall feed. Doth mine high linage (quoth Syluanus) fhew, that I am too diuine to match with you : Thou art fure born of that ambrohan aire, which love infus'd in me : thou art too faire To be of mortall race, oh do not then debafe that faire fo much to mach with men : Yet if thou wilt not match but with a fwaine, Ile be no god that I thy loue may gaine. A Shepheards habite I wil take vpon me, if in that habite I may liue with thee. For credit me (heauens faint) if thou partake of man, all men ile honour for thy fake : Then loue Siluanus, doe not blufh be free, loue god or fwaine, Syluanus both will be.

Thysbe

Thisbees reply.

T ill becomes, quoth fhe, your peereleffe ftate, with filly maides to be importunate : You fhould protect our weakneffe and defend our brittle fexe, and euer be a friend To womans weake proceedings, ceafing ftill to drawe deuoted Virgins to your will : We that are confecrate to Vestas fhrine, must in no lasciuious meetings spend no time : If thou (quoth he) to Vefla dedicate thy vowes, thy hefts : what mak'ft the here fo late? For well I know dame Vefta cannot bide her maides fhould walke alone in euening tide. And those that meane to fatisfie her will, must both be chast and feare sufpicions ill. Thysbe flood mute, fhe knew not what to fay, without reply fhe went a prety way And could not answer, for her tripping tongue and modeft filence told fhe fpoke awrong. For the nere Vella lou'd nor Vellas order, but this was beft excufe the time afford'd her. Churlifh Syluanus (for he was a churle) fo to importune a poore Countrie girle, Halfe mad with anger that fhe would not yeeld vnto his fuite : takes in his hand his fhield. And raging fternely, fweares he meanes to goe, where he will plunge her in a depth of woe.

Are

Are you fo coy (quoth he) that youle denie, to ioine with gods immortall deitie ? Wele learn young girles manners if we liue, (grieue and make them rew, that they our power should With this he went fast trotting vp the hill, purfuing hot the project of his will. Intending to command fome fauage beaft, vpon her, whom he lou'd, he lik'd to feaft. And reaching neere vnto the hill aboue, he wagg'd his hand, and ask'd if fhe would loue ? But fhe denied him loue: doe you denie me? fond? quoth Syluanus, fauages shall trie thee, And thy affection : which no fooner faid, then he fent out a Lion to this Maide. A Lion new returnde from rauening pray, came to the fount, his blood to wash away. Where with a fhaking pace he feem'd to come towards the place appointed Ninus tombe. But Luna pitting poore Thysbes cafe, fends out her light, to tell her who it was That now approach'd her, whom no fooner fpide, then in a Caue, poore Thysbe did her hide. But out alasse for feare, she ran fo fast, that fhe forgot her tire through too much haft : For fhe all breathleffe, and quite out of winde, running fo fast did leaue her tire behind. And as one careleffe of her weale or woe, diftreffed thus, fhe knew not were to goe, Careleffe of what fhe left or what fhe had, not knowing what was good, from what was bad.

Yet

The true-Louers knot.

Yet nature grafts in all a natiue feare, by which th' event of all things doe appeare, As we conceaue yeeld daunger to our flate, and feare by time, left we should feare too late. Thus fhe pent vp within a defart caue, with fobs & fighes, expresse what the would have, For in that Caue fhe wifh'd her loue were there, For loues embraces would exempt her feare. Oft did the thinke the Lion flaid without, and therefore trembling Thysbe made a doubt, To take the open ayre, but pent within, wish'd in her heart, she had caractred him, Whom fhe admires and loues, whofe fweet refpect, makes her to haue her parents in neglect. But he too flow, aye me, too flow in doing, being fo forward in his formall woing : Staies too too long, being more warely kept, by fuch fharpe keepers, that all night nere flept: But as one grafing Hart the reft doth keepe, by watchfull eyes warning the reft that fleepe; So euer one was waking, that might call vpon the reft if any thing befall : The Lion having quencht his fcorching thirft, with fpringing water which he long'd for first : Found Thysbes tyre, and with his bloody pray, befmeard the fame, which done, he went away. Now in the end Pyramus tooke a time, a time too late to answere love divine : Yet in this filent courfe of nighterne race, with quick recourse he runs vnto the place.

²So that to fee him frolick ore the plaine, were worth more prife then ^zHipodamias gaine, For golden apples drew her tempting eie, But this young youth affects no vanity But the true touch of loue: vaine, if abufed ; but precious as pure gold, if rightly vfed. Then who wil blame vs, labours to endure, if we by labours can our love make fure? For constant love no travaile will eschew, that constant love by travaile may renew. Alcides he can ferue the Lidian queene, in fpinning, carding, which doe ill befeeme So ftout a mirrors magnanimity, but he must doe it, theres no remedy. For when his manly nature did withstand it, one glance of her could wel enough command it. No fpacious confines nor indurate labour, if these ore-past, could purchase ere her fauour, Would he refufe : one fmile reward enough, for all the labours he had paffed through. Thysbe the trophie of his breathing courfe, Thysbe the garland which doth him enforce. Her he refpects, and whiles he runs apace, he meditates of Thysbes beuteous face ; Her comely feature made for ¹Adons fhrine, whofe Iuory orbs like Pelops fhoulders fhine, Had made that deep impression in his heart, that Nature feem'd to ftriue with Natures Art. Nature had given her much, Art much the more, Art decking that which Nature dres'd before.

For

The True-louers knot. 281

For that fame creature cannot perfect be, where Art and nature joyne not mutuallie. If you would have the module of true wit, Nature creates, but Art must polish it. Thysbe was perfect both in Natures hew, and artificiall colours, which did fhew, As if both Art and Nature fhould contend, to make her fuch an one no skill could mend ; For fhe was witty, pregnant, full of fauour, Dictinna like, fent out a fragrant fauour, That when the walkt' in Babilons faire streete, fhe made the kennel with her perfumes fweet. Pyramus comming, comming all too late, to Ninus tombe expects his bewteous mate, Whom when he could not finde, he fear'd her end. Feare is an adjunct to a faithfull friend. Roundly he goes vnto the filuer fpring, where all the water-nimphs were wont to fing, In honour of their Goddeffe and her bewty, to whom they offred hymnes as was their duty. He afk'd the Nimphes if they his Thysbe knew, defcribing her, and eke her matchleffe hew: And if they did, he praid them feeke about their Nectar fprings with him to finde her out, For if you be immortall, as you feeme, and dedicate your feruice to your Queen, A beter feruice fure you cannot doe her, then to redreffe them owe their feruice to her. This if you will in your compassion doe, I fweare each morne Ile offer thime to you.

Better

Better then any Hyble, can affoord, with mufick fweete to which the heauens accord, And euer reft deuoted to your fhrine, in that you dayn'd to glad this heart of mine. The water-nimphs replide with curtuous cheere, they knew none fuch, nor any did apeare, But if it pleafd him, they their fprings would feeke, exquire each bushie shade, each private creeke, To fee if the were in their manfions hid. which he affented to; all which they did: But when with watrie tripping they had fought both brake and brier ; yet could not finde her out, Wearied with their diurnall labour, left Pyramus fighing, of all ioy bereft ; Yet did these nimphes bemone his hard mishap, for fitting downe vnder Nereus lap, They turnd their Warbling ftrings to that fad ftraine, that all the woods re-eccoed them againe. Each in their order fung their dolefull verfe, as if it had been ouer Thysbes hearfe, And tun'd their odes with that vnfeafoned time. as that brute beafts to pittie did incline, For they in fable colours did portend, that their two loues were neere a tragick end. Thus fhadie night, Sea-nimphes, ftars, plan'ts & all prefage to them and to their loues a fall. Yet Pyramus though fad, for he was fad to have those hopes extinguisht, which he had, Seeks still about the tombe : fad tombe (quoth hee) that hides my loue, fo much admir'd of me :

Yet

the True Louers knot.

Yet if thou wilt but tell me where fhe is. I vow by Heauens Ile pardon whats amiffe. Yea I'le remit thine error and thy wrong, for keeping her within thy cheft fo long. Say, wilt thou? tell me what became of her? Didft thou her bewty in thy fhrine inter ? Didft thou immure her in thy marble toombe? what makes thee filent ? bewty makes thee dumb : Wilt thou fo wrong a louer to conceale, From him the mirrour of his ioy, his weale, His heart, his liking euen the flower of youth ? and yet conceiues within thy heart no ruth. Fie, fie for fhame : ift fit that monuments fhould fo ecclipfe natures beft ornaments ? As to obfcure the glory of her face, that where fhe is giues honor to the place. Thou much abstracts from trophies Ninus won. in doing that which he would nere haue done. Thou leffens much the honour he obtained. loofing that fame which Ninus conquefts gained. For what great gaine or conqueft i'ft t' haue faid, I have possession of a countrey maide. A young vnnurtur'd girle fit for men, vnfit for liueleffe tombes which couer them ? This faid this doting young man, blind with louing, thinking ould mouldy fhrines had lively mouing. Mou'd with her loue, whom he did more efteeme, then any gem that ere on earth was feene. But when he faw into his error well. He feem'd those loue-fick paffions to dispell, And

And to repaire vnto his fearch againe, feeking each couert, each vnhaunted plaine, Each thick-fet hill, each groue that he might finde, the diapa fon of his troubled minde. At laft too foone, by feeking long he found, (Thysbe) not Thysbe, but her tire on ground. Vnhallowed ground, vnfeafoned her attire, to croffe the paffions of an hot defire. Oh now conceiue what forrows gall his breft, to fee the tire of her he loued beft, Befmeard with bloud, for it all bloudy fhews. her fanguine colour tinct with Lyons iawes ; Oft would hee looke vpon it, and would kiffe, the tire befmear'd with blood, wifhing it his, His fate, his fortune, to remaine with her. fince his long abfence thus had iniur'd her. How to remaine (quoth he) fince fhe is dead, oppreff'd by death, inclos'd in mourneful weede ? How fhould I liue with her whofe life is gone. and hath left me (vnhappy me) alone. Die, die, with her, with whom thou canft not liue, For thou by dying fhalt thy life repriue. And have her prefence that enthroned is, in perfect ioies of heauens Elifian bliffe. Yet ftay awhile, this is not Thysbes tire, ftay there (fond wretch) against thy tongue a lyer. This was her roabe, this was her comely weede, which having loft her owner gins to bleede. Oh Ioue what caufe hadft thou thus to remoue two, that had their intentions voud to loue,

Or why fhould thou this faire occasion fhow vs, which being fhowne, doft feeke for to vndoe vs ? Be gods fo iron-hearted, to requite conftant affection with a difmall fpite ? A fharpe reuenge it is, to fet vs on, and then to leaue vs when we are begun. Did not high Ioue yeeld vs more hopes then thefe. when he commanded Phæbus to furceafe, For to diffuse his beames, bidding him go, retire in haft vnto the fhades below. Calling for Luna to fupply his place, fhrowding heauens luftre with her clowdy face. That our efcape fufpected leffe might be, by the darke vaile of nights obfcurity. But heauens I fee, repine at our fucceffe, (leffe. fince Gods themfelues by Fates haue fhew'd no To plunge my weale in woe, my loue in teares, producing nought, but fighes, and fruitleffe feares. Thou harfh tun'd Nemefis, thou tragicke ghoft, against whose acts my loue declaimeth most; What caufe hadft thou to fing this dolefull fong, vpon her herfe that neuer did thee wrong? She neuer raild againft thy Soueraigne power, but like an harmeleffe doue, a fragrant flower; Flourish'd fecure at home, yeelding content, by gracefull fmiles, a maids beft ornament : She neuer curb'd thy rage, nor did fhe mell with ought but loue, which made worft for her fell: But Fates haue made the inftrument of finne, respectlesse of our loss, fo they may win.

The

Loues labyrinth, or

286

The pretious fpoyle of Thysbes bleeding foule, whofe fad mifhap the plants themfelues condole. Yet thou remorfeleffe art, ill may betide thee, that wold have none to love that live befide thee. Yet for all this thou canft not me depriue. of louing her, whofe life did mee reuiue, For being dead, Ile rather chufe to die, then liuing, lofe her loving company. This faid : he takes her tyre, and kiffing it, vpon the fountaine banks did water it, With dewie moifture of ftill-flowing teares. which being fhed, renuing drops appeares. Teares liquefied the arbour where he fate, which water nimphs perceiuing, wondred at. Oft would he beat his breft, and teare his haire, fhutting his hopes in clouds of deepe defpaire. Oft would he curfe the day, the houre, the night, that banifht him from Thisbes gladfome fight. Wifhing that night had neuer beene defcride, for nere did night more harfh euents betide. Oh Pyramus, and then he figh'd to fpeake, for gufts of forrow made his hart-ftrings breake. What meant thou to allure a fimple maid, to thefe vvild woods? her loue is well repaid, That fhe fhould come vnto the place affignd, and thou (bafe coward) come fo farre behind. Thou with a tardy pace came at thy leifure, fuch flow-pac'd courfers ill deferue fuch pleafure. Thou too precife, made bones of what thou did, fuch fond precifenes feldome hath good fpeed.

Shee

Shee to enioy her ioy, cut off delay, that fhe her minds perfection might difplay, And with a courfe as quicke as Pegafus, run ore thefe plaines to meet with Pyramus, Which thou requited ill, bafeft of men, which time fhall character with fcandalls pen. A fcandall to thy fexe, and to thy ftate, to leaue thy loue in deferts defolate. Oh what mifhap had fhe to loue a fwaine, that could not yeeld her loue for loue againe ? Hard was her fortune to affect that creature. who for a childifh feare delaid to meet her. The gods I know more forward would have beene, to meet loues Parragon, fo faire a Queene. As for her beauty, aye me, beauties faire, with Ericina fhe might well compare; And farre more modeft : Venus had her mole, but nere was Thysbe ftain'd with bewties foile. But thou haft ftain'd her beauty by thy fault, ruin'd that fort, which neuer had affault, But by thy felfe, and by thy felfe too foone, fince by thy meanes her fhrine is razed downe. Turne thee to heauen, and loe the heauens difmaid, to fee the tragicke downefall of a maide : Frowning at thee that was the caufe of this, caufing her end that was thy Soueraigne bliffe. Turne thee to earth, and fee her turn'd to earth, which makes the caues below refound with mirth That they enjoy which thou didft once enjoy, reaping their comfort from thy deepe annoy.

Turn

Turne thee vnto the Sea, and thou shalt fee, The Nymphes and Syrens crying out 'gainft thee. That fhould make promife, yet not promife hold, calling thee coward, but thy Thysbe bold. Bold, to aduenture on the gloomy night, bold to encounter with Latonas light. Bold in her courfe, fwift in her curfiue mouing, bold to efcape, and conftant in her louing : Thus heauen, earth, Sea, concording all in one, do fimpathize with thy difcording mone. And wilt thou liue for this? O doe not liue, but to requite her loue, let earth receiue This little All of thine: which when they haue, they may interre two louers in one graue. Adioyning to this fount, a rocke there was, fo fteepe and craggy, that no man could paffe. To which wilde beafts repair'd, making their den in th' hollow cauernes which did couer them. Which feene by him 8: what doe not louers fee? with face dejected, thus difcourfed he. If any Lion or fierce fauage Beare, lodge in this ragged rocke, or coucheth neere, Let him come out, for heere is amorous food, ⁹ and cooling ftreames to wafh away our bood, That this may beare record by every wight, two faithfull louers perifht on one night. But thefe are but delaies which cowards vfe, ¹⁰ their trembling paffions feeking to excufe, Caft off vaine feare, feare is a vallalls weede, and place true Refolution in her fteed.

288

This

This faid ¹¹ with praiers vnto his houfhold Gods, Offring to Venus altar, myrtle rods, Which grew hard by that fpring where he did fit, with other ceremonialls which befit A louers laft farewell : he wifht his friends for their too hard reftraint to make this mends. And to erect his fhrine by Ninus tombe, as witnes of his love in time to come. Which faid : with hand refolu'd, refolu'd to dye, with fword vnfheath'd, he ends his mifery. Thus having ended, ended ere begun, for thus the thred of his fhort life was fpun. The fad events and obfequies enfue, which thus in briefe my Mule relates to you. Thysbe, poore Thysbe, trembling all this while, fhut vp within her caue : began to fmile. And with a cheerefull countenance caft off feare, for in that coaft, no ill fhe faw appeare. And much delighted with her fpeedy courfe, vnto the fprings, fad fprings, fhee made recourfe. She tuck'd her cloaths vp, for the euening dew, had wafh'd the herbs that in the forreft grew; And tucking vp as Country maids doe vfe, the high bet path to Ninus tombe to chufe; Where fhe (vnhappy fhe) no fooner came, then like Narciffus eccho, founds his name, VVhom fhe affects, admires, whofe onely face, drew her (poore wench) vnto that difmall place. Come, come, quoth fhe, thou knowft not how to wo Come to thy Thysbe fhe vvill tell thee hovv. Shee V

Loue labyrinth, or

She wil prefcribe the rules, with fruits of woing, for fruitleffe be those fruits that have no doing. We that doe hazard our good names for men, if they'l not pleafure vs : what profit then, Of all our toylfome labour we fustaine, that reape no harueft from fuch gufts of pain ? We patient are to beare, and what we bore, we doe accept, and with it ten times more, That we might pleafure you : how fond are we? The weaker fort beares your infirmity. But its our Nature, Nature hath ordain'd, mans ftrength by womans weakneffe is fuftain'd. In this fame cloudy night, with what defire, did all my thoughts, and my intents afpire ? To that fame treafure thou haft promif'd me, promife is debt, it muft be kept by thee, With what affection have I croff'd thefe plaines. cheered by wood-nimphs, finging plefant ftrains, And danf'd Laualto till I came to thee, longing for that which thou didft promife mee. Sad Philomela skared from her reft. fung with a pricking flothorne at her breft, And fung of Tereus fomething, what I know not, which if I knew, yet would I neuer fhow it. 12 For Tereus impious in his prophane life, to wrong a fifter, and fo chaft a wife. Suftains the torture of his wickedneffe, transform'd into a Bird : whofe filthineffe, Loues marifh places, flies the folid ground, good reafon why : his confcience was not found. For

The True-louers Knot.

13 For Tireus was a King and for his luft, by Ioue himfelfe, was from his fcepter thruft. A fenfuall Prince to wanton motions ftirr'd. chang'd from a prince, vnto a loathfome bird. Thus did I paffe the filence of the night, till I arriu'd within my-louers fight, Which yet I cannot doe : oh why fhould we, 14 to get a little fport, paune modefty ? Thefe fhady thickets, and that fecret caue, those pratling Sea-nimphes, & this marble graue, Beare all record what trauell I have taken. yet like a Turtle of her make forfaken, Cannot enioy my loue, aye me, vnkind, w that feemes inconftant, to a conftant mind. VVhy fhould our fauors fo deuoted reft. to them, whofe hardned harts bred our vnreft And make vs fubiect to more inward griefe, then ere their comforts can affoord releefe. But thou art too too rafh : (beleeue me fweet,) in more remiffe Appearance doe I greete, Thy divine beauty; pardon what is faid, conceyue no harme fpoke by a harmeleffe maide; For if thou fhould (as fure I thinke thou doft,) lie hid vnder fome bufh, and hearft this noif'd, This fhrowd inuection, gainft thy loue and thee, thou might as well condemne my fpeech and me. VVhy fhould I fpeake against fo hallowed fhrine, to whom I have bequeath'd both me and mine? Or why fhould I detract from that faire funne, vvhich (if ecclipf'd) my gliftring raies bee done? V 2 Then

Then enuious thou, to daze that glorious bright, whofe first arifing gaue thy fetting light. Roufe vp thy felfe for fhame, and honour him, whom if I get, heauens treafure I doe winne. More prife and richer then those fifters three, which kept the apples of faire 15 Helpery. This was no fooner faid, then ferioufly, ech Bufh, ech place, fhe fought that bordered nie. Doing as children vfe, that feeke about, their hid companions, till they find them out. Hard by this tombe, a Mulbery there was, ¹⁶ encircled round with tuffs of greeneft graffe : Which tree look'd once as white as white could be, but now was chang'd, like to the Eben tree. (more ¹⁷ Whofe blooms were black as jeat, and which was it loft the forme which it retain'd before. Vnder thefe fhady fpraies, lay Pyramus, depriu'd of fence, a fcene too ominous. Which when poore Thysbe, judge what tis to fee a conftant loue in fuch perplexity? For fure I am, fuch heapes of paffions cloid her, that in his death a double death annoid her. Long time fhe brethleffe ftood aboue her loue, depriu'd of fences, for they could not moue. And as one liuing in a lethargy, hath not the vfe of fences faculty; But fleeping feemes fecure of any ill, fo in this fenceleffe mouing, ftood fhe ftill: At laft awaked with watry drops downe-falling, of her loues name, fhe fell to inftant calling. Calling

The true Louers-knot.

Calling him by his name : awake, arife, with that he heaued vp his heauy eies. Thysbe (faith fhe) calls on thee, fie awake, leaue off thy fenceleffe dulneffe for her fake : Thysbe no fooner spake, but at her name, he op'd his eies, and fhut them vp againe. Such was the force of Thysbe, that being dead, by loues reflexe, he mou'd his louely head. And when he lay him downe, as laid before, yet his two ftaring eies, ftill glimmering more Were preft vpon his loue, as if his heart, was giuen her by his eyes at lifes depart. For they ftill gaz'd vpon her, as if he had feen the heauen where he wifht to be. Thrice did he moue his head, yet all in vaine, for wanting ftrength, it bended backe againe. Thrice did he kiffe the ground, thrice kiffe the ayre, fuppofing that his Thysbe had beene there. And when he could not find her, hee vnrips, his loue effects, and fmackers with his lips. Thysbe conceiving what he meant, admired, his feruent loue, and to a fhade retired. Hard by this Tombe, where with all blubbered face, fhe made this fad narration to the place. Hapleffe and hopeleffe is mine ending friend, cruell the Fates that fhould fuch torments fend, Vnto a faithfull Louer: heauens haue done, that which the plants within this forreft fhun. They lofe their forme, their feature, and their fhape, and what they doe, they doe it for his fake.

V 3

For

For this fame Tree, beares record of our wracke, decolored quite from white, to difmall black, And this fame ground, all in a gore of bloud : No chirping bird within this fatall wood, And this for loue of him, that now is gone, the second leauing his forlorne Thysbe all alone. 1 Hard was mine hap, to fee his dolefull end, at whole fad hearle the Fates them felues attend : Hard was mine hap, more harfh the course of time. to crop my loue, my dazie in his prime. Hard was his hap to extinguifh his defire. with apparition of a bloody tire : Hard was his hap to forrage heere fo late, to miffe his loue, and meete fo foone with Fate. Turne to thy loue, fee if thy vitall breath, in the set can call him from the flumber of pale death. See if thou canft reuiue his gafping foule, for loe his eies within his head doe rowle. Embrace his joury necke with foulded armes, deftill life in him by thy louing charmes. Buzze in his eares of loue, it will not bee, his dying fences have no mind of thee. Thus round empalld with greefe, was Thysbes mind, no hope of life in him can Thysbe find, For he grew ftiffe engor'd with bloudy wound, and by his bloud faft glued to the ground. Thysbe efpied her Tire which hee did hould, faft in his hand, and did the fame enfould, As if it were fome Antidote to cure his gaping wound and make him ere endure :

Vnhappie

The true-Louers knot.

Vnhappy Tire (quoth fhe) vnhappy were, that gaue occasion to my loue of feare. Thou that haft preft my foule in anguish more, then all the robes which ere I wore before. Thou wandring ftragler, fliding from mine head, gaue the first onfet to this vgly deede. For if thou hadft not been, my loue had liu'd, that now of fence & mouing is depriu'd. What hap had I at first to put thee on, when darke Latonas lights were drawing on. Or what misfortune had I for to leaue thee. fince thy departure doth fo greatly grieue mee. It needes must grieue me: for it cuts my heart, as if my foule from body fhould depart. He was my foule, my body cannot breath, When as my foule is feifed on by death. Why fhould I haue fuch curious regard to Nightern robes, whe meaner would have ferud ? For well I know it was my loues defire, to meete my felfe and not my curious tire. Fie on this nice precifeneffe weomen vfe in garifh dreffings : men fhould weomen chufe, Not by their bodies habit, but their minde, in lifts of vertue, and respect confinde. We that doe loue as we proteft we doe, must not get husbands with a painted show, Like puppets in a play, addref'd to play ftrange acts by night, to purchase loue by day. Beft honour that befeems a countrey maide, is to be modeft, in her actions staid.

For

For this (beleeue me) modeft lookes doe win more hearty loue, then baits of tempting fin. And yet we cannot leaue lasciuious straines, to draw young men to our immodeft traines, But if young girles would be rul'd by me, They'l make their preciou'ft iewel modestie. Thysbe with this beheld the bloody blade which lay all moiftned vnder that fame fhade Where her true louer lay, and feeing it, with many a balefull ban fhe curfed it, Calling it cruell : 18 Cruell fword (quoth fhe) that in this fort did part my love and me, What made thee so remorcelesse, so hard-hearted, to see two constant louers so some parted ; Parted by thee; fie on thee for the deede, thou murdered him, and makes my foule to bleede. Bleede in despaire of seeing him againe, who gave a cordiall to my toilfom paine. He was the Saint that living I adored, this is his Trunke these watrie eies deplored. Yet ioyne with me to honour his fad hearfe, let plaints and teares thine hardned temper pierce. Pierce thine owne bosome, Bosom if thou have, that brought my love fo timeleffe to his grave. And thou vnhallowed 19 Tombe that couers him. who first enlargd this Empire and did win, Trophies of honour, which remaine to thee; in times succession to posteritie. 20 Open thy marble bosome and receive, two friends at once in one renowmed graue.

Thou

The true-louers knot.

Thou hides the honour of a worthy King, that living did great conquests hither bring, Send him abroade out of thy Ihrine, with Speed, and take vs two to thee in Ninus fleed : But thou wilt answere thou should wrong him then. to place our reliques among ft fuch prince-like men ; Which is not fo: For reft affur'd that we purchase more fame then ever purchas'd he. He conquered Realmes by fates auspicious : But thou may trust me, more is got by vs: For we have conquered Love, which he could never, which in our praise shall be recorded ever. What if his name be spread in enery place, this founds not much vnto his reliques grace ; Thon couers but his afhes turnd to duft, we turne to earth, and fo all Princes must. If that thy Monument were fo divine, as the huge gulfe of mountaine Inarime. That doth poffeffe Typhæus Gyant fierce, and shrouds him living in her hollow hierce. Where he with rest of his aspiring rout, at end of each seauen yeers doe turne about. Yet preffed downe with hills that lie aboue them, for all their strength they hardly can remove them. Then wert thou famous (for good might betide thee) to have such living wonders sleepe beside thee. But now thou art not fo: for what is he, that he can challenge more of death than we? He might whil' ft he furnin'd and bore the fway, his purple flag in every coast display.

He

²¹ He might command, and have what he commanded, but death, pale death now swaies, & she'l withstand it. Then honourd hearse, if hearses honour haue, yeeld to my fute, and perfect what I craue. Doe not denie me : to deny me this, were to deprive thee honour, me of bliffe. Nay doe not smile, (for I doe see thee smile) if that our bones thou in thy breft compile. And recollect them after Thysbes death, the Nimphes them felues shall fet a laurell wreath Upon thy back : e'r honourd shalt thou be, for this good turne thou did my love and me. But if thou scorne my vows, and cal them vaine, yeelding no eare to louers that complaine, Rest well assured the Nimphs reveng'd will be. And for our fakes will quite demolish thee. When trufty Aiax & Achilles came, to Patrocles tombe, with teares they bath'd the fame For every word they spake of Patrocles, was and drew teares from them, as streames from Caucasus. Whofe ragged top fends rivers out amaine, and being fent, renews her springs againe. So they deploy d his death, his facred hearfe, ranck fet with embleames and with dolefull verfe. The fwanes of Caifter and eke of Poe, came to enfable him in fongs of woe: Since which fad time the Poets have reported, that each daie twice the swannes have there resorted. Paffing by flockes along the Greequish plaine, feeking by fongs to make him live againe. But

The True-Louers knot.

But when it would not be, the Swans there fwore, that from that time they here would warble more : But at their 23 death which they performe : for why they neuer fing but hower before they die. Why should a Grecian have such honour done, that neuer any Trophies ere had wonne, But flaine by Hector : for no fame he had of doing greatly good or greatly bad. And yet for footh he must characters have, in golden letters ore his worthleffe graue. In polisht marble must his shrine be set in faphires, 24 tophies and in british ieate. Thus must he have respect, when we, god wot, must lie obscure as if men knew vs not. And yet our fame deserves more praise then he, more grace, more glorie, and more memorie : Time shall race out that marble hearse of his, time shall amend what time hath done amisse. For we shall live in spite of Fates decree, when lowe interr'd this famous Greeke shall be. Loue cannot die, we loued and therefore death Thall crowne our hearse with times immortal wreath, And though we die we love and live in dying, loue to pale death perpetuall life applying. Why should prince Ilus acts have such respect. whofe toomb with precious emeralds bedeckt? For well I know fuch acts did neuer he, In amorous passions of true love as we, 25 Yet Batias toomb must have inscriptions faire, to hew what man of birth was buried there. A

A crowne vpon his head, and in his hand, a royall scepter which did Troy command, These must exalt his glory and make roome, for Fames refounding trumpe in time to come; And as that hearse doth memorize his name. so after times by it might doe the same. O thou iniurious time, that time observes, yeelding not honour as our deeds deserves. Dost partialise and modest bounds surpasse, bestowing honour on each worth-lesse Asse: Ilus a ftranger was vnto thy foyle an ²⁶ vp-ftart Prince, who for a little toyle To win a crowne, was thus aduaunc't by thee, from Beggers ragges to Princes dignitie. Looke at his low beginning whence he came, what were his copes-mates his dejected name, Looke at his pompe, how ill he could befeeme, the stile of King, or she the name of Queene. And then exile his glory from thy coaft, thy great'st difgrace of whom thou gloriest most: Receive our ashes, ashes of true love, keepe them as hallowed in thy facred Groue, Receive our ashes and abandon his. that liuing, kiffing, dying we may kiffe. For what great grace wilt be in time to come. unto thy foile, to fay, thou keep'st the toomb Of two true-louers, mirrors of affection, louing fo long till love came to perfection. Perfect in love, so perfect in our love that nought (faue death) could our affections moue : And

The true-Louers knot.

And yet in death we languish not in louing. though 27 death deprive vs of all vitall mooning : For we conceive more ioy intoomb'd together, then if we lived deprived the one of other. More must I say to seale these obsequies ; for death is fearefull and inuents delaies, And most of all in vs: a weaker brood, the talke of death yeeldes feare to woman-hood. And yet, me thinkes I stay from him too long, and in my flay I doe him double wrong. First to deprive him life, and then begin with tardie pace aloofe to follow him. Well Ile prepare my selfe, the Fates decree two Louers (hould fustaine their crueltie. And yet not cruell, cruelty is showne when either is debarred of his owne. But we by 28 Cupids meanes, that pur blind boy, obtaine by death we could not ear ft enioy, Death yeelds more comfort then our life time did, flewing our love which long before was hid. No private cranie nor no secret chinke need we finde out, nor fearefull need we (hrinke. For Parents hot pursuite we rest secure, fince heaven our hearts, as earth our corps immure. Wee need not have our Parents in suspect, they may reft careleffe now whom we affect : For well I know we can be hardly feene, twixt heauen and earth, fo great a fpace between. Thus loue an heauenly motion doth afcend, from earth to heauen to gratulate her friend, Thysbis

Thysbees EPICÆDIVM.

VEt Thysbe ftay thine hand : thine obsequies, defire more celebrating exequies ; Die not inteftate, in this defert groue, but confecrate in token of thy loue Thine hefts to Vesta, yet let Vesta know, Thysbe unwilling is enforced fo. Then let thy 29Parents, Parents though vnkinde By Natures lawe, fome short memorials finde, Of thy affection : Swannes before they die, leue penfiue odes and warble merrily. ³⁰ Yet must I needs declaime against your feare, iealous of hurt where no hurt could appeare : For I am fure nere was your thriting bliffing, more deere to me then was my louers kiffing. Oh then vnkind vnkindnesse did not fit, our chafte defires that could not bridle it. Loue was the hott'ft when it did feeme conceal'd, and hid in afhes, yet in time reueal'd. Then blame your felues, not vs : you caus'd our end, barring a louer from her long fought friend, Which we doe pardon if youle let vs haue, our toomb in one, our ashes in one graue. Which if you fhall performe our hope extends, our difioin'd corps conioin'd you make amends. Well do I know our funerals renew, currents of teres and ftreames of griefe in you. And

The true-Louers knot.

And many pagent mixd with liquid teares. will make attendance on our defolate beres, Many diffreaming drops will dim your eie, to fee two louers end fo fuddenly. Yet all in vaine, being dead, your teares reftraine : for teeres cannot recall vs back againe. The ³¹ Nimphes themfelues with Poplar twigs will an ofier basket for Idalias fake. make Wherein collect you may fuch fragrant flowers, as fhall adorne our monumentall bowers : Yet when you fpreade your flowers ech in degree, Strow more on his fide then you ftrow on me. He was more conftant, he did first begin, I like his fhadow did but follow him. He came vnto the place, and fpite of death feeing my tire engor'd did lofe his breath. I like an Ape, to imitate my loue, follows his worth, his prefence to approue. A glorious presence where the gods accord all wealth, all ioy, Elisium can affoord. Fruitfull Ely/is where ech conftant mate, raignes in fruition of his happie ftate, VVhere Hero fmiles to grapple with her deere, Iealous of nothing, for no caufe of feare Can croffe loues action ? theres no Helespont, But the fweet relifh of a Nectar fount Hight the Castalian fount which Gods adore, where having drunke thei're neuer thirfty more. By this renowmed brooke, fhall he and I. prattle of loue, and parents cruelty. Yet

Yet fo wele prattle that we may receaue, loues harueft purchaf'd by our irckfom graue. A happy Graue, that is a spicie vrne, where louers vfe to fmile, furceafe to mourne, For by their dying they doe more obtaine, then euer here enthral'd they thought to gaine. And can that death be cald a death? O no : for by that death from death to life we goe. Reaping the bloffomes of experienc'd good, which while we Pilgrims were, we neuer could. Then doe not weepe deere friends; for we enjoy, the hauen of our hopes, where no annoy Can make difturbance, but empal'd by Ioue, we get renoume for our furpaffing loue. Let no fad Odes our burials folemnife, nor let no teares com trickling from your eies. The ³² folemne fire which euer old hath been, our buried reliques will full well be feem : Yet when you burne our afhes, you fhould fee, His ashes have the vpper hand of me: For Cupid with his mother Queene of loue, Pres'd downe the female, set the male aboue. Then for an order (fince the Gods ordaine it) It were prefumption for you to reftraine it. For reft affured if we had mift this chance, we had obaid ere this their ordinance. O let our loues recorded be by you, and when you fing vnto our hearfe adew, Euer imprint this caution in your minde, Be not vnto your childrens loues vnkinde. Hinge

The True-louers Knot.

Hang not the willow token of difdaine vpon our Toome : for that each country fwaine Can fet vpon his fhrine : let Venus tree, the louely mirtle fhew our constancie. If you want any rites or folemne heftes, which may befeem our graues : the birds protefts Each in their order to folemnife them, and gods themfelues for to eternize them : Each mourning Turtle having loft her make, will mourning make refort for Venus fake. And fweet Leucothoe will reprefent of Vmolus odours a delicious fent. The Nighterne owle, that night wil ceafe from prey howling by night, as fhe did howle by day. The little Batt (though fearefull heretofore) will flocke amongft the reft and feare no more. Thus every Bird, for it is Gods defire, will with their prefence decke our funerall fire. To purge our guilt dame Venus promis'd me, fhele goe to heauen with lowe and bended knee. And well I know Ioue, Venus loues fo well, he will believe what tale fo ere fhe tell. Then for her loue let Venus altars fmoke, and in each corner of her Temple looke ; No ornament which beft may her be-fit, Be there awanting but to perfect it. You know our Cittie much relies on her : for by her fuccour no diftreffe can fturre The profperous failes of our profperitie, but like a sterne she's euer fixed nie.

To

Loues Labyrinth, or

306

To rid her from those rocks vnto the shore, in liew whereof we do her fhrine adore. Yet ere I die I must take leaue of you, you facred manfions which my woes renew : Thou olive-tree that planted was fo nie vnto my fathers house where I came by This laft vnhappie night : thou tender vine, whofe fupple flips thefe fingers oft did twine. Thou 33 rohe border fet with rofes fayre, to which each morne I vied to repaire, And rob thee of thy ftore to bewtifie my hapleffe tire with crimfon puritie, Farewell at once farewell, long may the dew of filuer hair'd Aurora water you, Long may you flourish, this I onely craue, (graue. that with your flowers each morne you deck my Such fweetes, fuch fragrant rofes reprefent, that your repofe may make it redolent. Send out your fpicy odours and attend, with Hyble fruites vpon my bleeding friend ; For manie time and oft hath he and I, chas'd one another full lafciuioufly : And if he chaunc't to be too flow in running, I would hold ³⁴back and linger for his comming. But of all monuments I bid adew. broad fhadowing beech-trees to the fight of you : You many times have yeelded fweet repofe vnto our loue and feafoned haue our woes. By your contented fhades bleft be you euer, and like Elifian-shades fade may you neuer.

O many

The true-louers knot. 307

O many times haue we two fported there, (for we alone were priuiledged there) And twifting nofe-gaies we our flowers would hide, left by fome Satyre we fhould be efpide : (them, Oft would we crop fweete flowers and hauing cut within our wicker baskets we would put them : And when we more had gathered then we needed, we gatherd ftill for fo our loue exceeded, That euery flower we cropt we did apply vnto the flower of our virginitie.

" For if fuch flowers fuch fweetneffe did bestowe, flowers are much fweeter that do spring belowe.

Fare-well thou fpacious plaine amongft the reft, I have no caufe but to refpect thee beft : For manie time and oft have we two plaide at Barli-breake, but now that fports decai'd, Full many fecret corners doft thou yeelde, for Louers fports within thy louely field.

And thou vnhappy Pine that mounts fo hie. as if thou meant by height to tutch the skie; Thou mai'ft repine at fates that murdred me, fince Thyshees hand each morne did cherifh thee, Oft haue I planted grafts within thy flemme, which now are growne fo high they fhadowe men And with a ³⁵ Water-pot which I did bring each morne by time; I made thine arms to fpring: 308

But now, poore Pine, pine maift thou now and die, for none that I know cherifh thee but I: Now fhall thy fhadowing branches fall away, their falling leues to winters fury paie. And none remaines there now to pittie thee. When I am dead that living nourifht thee: But be content ; fhed teres in loue of me. and when thou hear'ft my death dejected be : Caft down fome withered leues & fend them hither, portending thus much, we must die together ; This if thou doft I will thee thankfull call, and wil with Laurel thy fad head empall : That though thou die, yet that thou dieft with me. in after-times ftill honoured thou maift be. And thou fraite chinke to which full many time we made repaire: through thee our loue did fhine, And fpearft her beames ; farewell, for neuer more, fhall we refort to thee as heretofore : Thou waft the author of our first vndoing, for by thy meanes thou gaueft vs means of woing. Giuing eyes liberty, which eyes fo wounded that by their paffions paffions new rebounded, Yet we do thank thee for thy fore-paft loue, for by our deaths the gods themfelues approue Our conftant minds, recorded which must be in heavens conventions to our memorie. O happy thou whilft our two fragrant breaths made thee fo rich, impouerifht by our deaths: For this I thinke, this is my prophefie,

Nere

The true-Louers knot. 309

nere fhall fuch lips beftowe their breath on thee, When thou fhalt heare of our difcording end, fome foftned teares vpon our funeralls fpend : Let thine hard marble be diffoly'd to ftreames of liquid water, fince those radiant beames Which our reflecting eyes the marble gaue might pierce him more, then euer Lyricks haue The fauage beafts, whofe natures were made tame, at the rehearfall of fweet Amphions name : What then fhould Bewtie ? whofe attractiue power commands ftones, ferpents & fweet budding flowr: What fhould the Splendor of faire Beawties eie act, fince fuch acts were done by harmonie ? Open your flinty bosome, let remorfe fhed riuolets of teres vpon my coarfe : Or if you will not fo, at least restraine your ayrie chinke, and fhut it vp againe : Let not fuch Monuments live when we die, for they'le augment our Parents iealoufie : That as we lov'd, kifs'd toy'd when we're liuing, fo we may loue, kiffe, toy at lifes depriving. Then fhut that crany vp left after time, impute the fault vnto that chinke of thine. This laft record by Thysbe thus recorded bred floods of teres : for teres their fighs afforded, the Balme-trees wept, their teres concrete in one diffilled into th' fubftance of a ftone : Which ftone it feemes, did after couer them. for after times found it laid ouer them, With many faire inscription which did shew of loue recorded neuer none more true, Then this of Thysbe and her louing mate, fuppofing mutuall death a bleffed ftate, A ftate more bleft in that they had their wifh, Thy/be had hers and Pyramus had his ; They were depriv'd of louing in their liuing, (uing but by their deaths the gods themfelues were gi-Tokens of loue, for they enioied their loue, which no transparent iealous eye could moue. Empall'd by diuine power, heauens maiefty, to honour them, that honour'd constancie : And which was more : dame Venns (as we read) yoking her Doues, came to high Ioue with fpeed, Her milke-white doues with avrie coloured wings, vnto Ioues throne their beawteous lady brings ; Where fhe with fmiling countenance, for her fmile, all foggie mifts Olympus did exile, Thus fpake to Ioue, who feeing her did grace her, and with enfolded arms 'gan to embrace her.

Loues Labyrinth, or

310

Heauen-habiting Ioue, that in compassion fees, louers inflamed passions: on my knees, Doe I entreate as I am Queene of loue for shipwrackt louers: that thou wilt remoue Their earthly members to participate the glorious sunshine of one heauenly state, For they were constant, constancy thou loues and in thy selfe their passions thou approues: Deigne to eternize them with sacred Baise, It's fit such mirrors should haue endless

That

the True-louers knot.

That confecrate their vowes to gods divine, then so propitious to these praiers of mine, They were enobled with a confant minde. Such facred lights, it's hard on earth to finde : They were adorn'd with Vestas puritie : Vestas pure shape deserves eternitie. They liu'd in louing, and in louing did'e. nor did two Vrns their ioyned loue diuide : But both inter'd together, they have wonne a fame recorded in all times to come. She was as faire as fairenes could be laid on mortall colours, though a country maide, Yet for her thoughts as pure, as was her face, The well deferues to have an heavenly place. Doe not frown (deare Sire) me thinks that frowne, doe ill beseeme, to such as be your owne. I am your daughter, and I know you love me; and I prefume my praiers needs must moue you, Or else I should despaire e're to resort from Idas mount, vnto your heauenly court. Then yeeld affent vnto your daughters fuite. if you denie it me, I will be mute, And neuer make recourse vnto your shrine, which cannot choose but gall this heart of mine. This earthly goddeffe will full well befeeme. in Iunoes absence to supply as Queene. Ioue fmilde at this, for he defired change, and therfore oft from heaue to earth would range For pleafure and delight: variety willing vnwilling, wrefted this reply. You X 4

311

312, Loues-labyrinth, or

You (peake of wonders (daughter) quoth high 37 Ioue, of mortall wights so constant in their love. These two in constant louing you surpasse, For they'r more constant then ere Venus was. Death cannot part a funder their defires, which like bright flames vnto our throne aspires, They're worthy (daughter) of a glorious crowne, and they shall have it : for wele vse our owne. But to enioy that ioy, that amorous die of bewties sweete complexion : how should I Difioyne thefe two, both would I gladly grace, if I could distance them in severall place. That faire form'd creature thou dost so much praise, I doe remember in her former daies : For the entirely witht the might have time to vse her love, and offred to my shrine Great store of incense; incense it was sweete, that I would give them time and place to meete. Which I did promise: but I did not pay: for leeing her more bewtious then the day. Faire as Orgon, purer then that white louely 38 Alcmena wore vpon the night When the suppos'd Amphitrio her deare love posses the place which was supplide by Ioue. Being thus faire, (for Thysbe was more faire) I much amazed flood, oppres'd with care, Seeming asleepe, yet sleeping I did moane. my too large promise which was past and gon. Oft did I wish I had been Pyramus, oft I resolu'd (the night so tedious) · For to tran/hape my felfe, and to descend, and meete with Thysbe as her pointed friend. But Iuno iealous Queene, with open eie flept not all night, but fraught with iealousie, Askt me full oft what aild me : turne (quoth fhe) and with my nectar lips ile comfort thee. Are you in love? I blush'd : that blush displaies, you are inclind (quoth she) some otherwaies : You have some trickse Girle, that doth keepe your heart enchain'd, your powrefull eies from fleepe. Fie fie (quoth she) as you are Ioue, affect her that affoords to you the most respect : I am celestiall 39 wife and fister both vnto your selfe: and Iuno would be loth To violate the glory of her spouse with every swaine, in ev'ry brothell house : And can you then without regard of me, or of your selfe, disgrace your deitie With every Leda, every milke-maide, toie, while Iuno is deprined of her ioye? Now by my God head mortall men adore, I'aue borne so much that I can beare no more. Either content you with your choice, your Queene, or ile tell that which would ful ill beseeme The glory of your state : the Gods shall heare, what heretofore to tell I did forbeare. Then as you tender th'honour of your name, Be charie henceforth how you foile the fame. This faid dame Iuno, but I curbd her speech with brows contracted, till shee did befeech With trickling teares, that I would pardon giue, protesting the would never after grieve

Loues labyrinth, or

314

My royall perfon; withing my delight, if it pleas'd me, even in my Iunos fight Wherewith I feemd appeald, and fayning 40 fleepe, with eie-lids (hut, my heart a watch did keep : Ever conceiving fomthing what I know not. which if I knew it's shame for Gods to show it. Being lascinious passions, which were bred of the distempred humors of my head. But to be briefe, I did by meanes contriue their long fought loues fruition to depriue, Which thus accomplish'd, I am glad of this, Venus intreates what Ioue himselfe did wish. This I will doe, (which done) may seeme a wonder. equall their ioies, yet distance them asunder. He from his Thysbe, Thysbe from her love, Ioue for his Thysbe, Thysbe for her Ioue. This faid : bright Venus happy to receive The full accomplisht fute which she did craue, Takes leaue of Ioue, and taking leaue he 41 kift her, amidst his kiffes with his prayres he blift her. Venus to 42 Ida hies, Idas fhe fends Embassadour to Thysbe, who attends, The Gods decree; where having come at laft, tels to Thysbe all difcourfe was paft Twixt Ioue & Venus, yet not all fhe told, for Venus bade him Ioues intendments hold. Left his narration fhould more forrow breede. then any comfort drawne from humane feede: For well I know no Ioue fo precious to her, as was her louely Pyramus.

When

The True-louers knot.

When Idas had exprest what Ioue decreed, he tooke his leaue of Thysbe, and with speede Return'd to Venus, Venus Queene of loue, whom he with Mars found lying in a groue Of leavy Poplars, fporting midft their pleafure. Vulcan was abfent, they had time and leifure. Where we will leaue them, and fwift Idas traine, and to our loue-fick Thysbe turne againe. Thysbe addreff'd to die, yet long in dying, Draws courage to her, & that blade efpying. VVhich was becrimfond with the bloudy gore. of that fame murder it had done before : Takes it into her hand, (her hand God wot as foft as downe, fuch weapons handled not Before this time, (and this time was too foon to vanquish bewty, and to cut it downe. 43 Poore wench fhe knew not how to vfe the blade. for other armour Nature had her made. But like an vntraind Souldier wanting skill, knows not to fight, yet vfeth his good will, Trauerfe his ground as other fouldiers doe, yet hath no method, for he knows not how : Euen fo this heauenly creature handled it, long time vncertaine how to mannage it. At last by reafon, ⁴⁴reafon did acquaint, which was the pummell, which the fatall point, Grafping the blade which fhe before did take, to th'fhade which fhadowed Pyramus fhee fpake. Thou hadowing tree, that 45 hadowes this dark tombe, shelter vs two, that passengers which come, Vnto Vnto this forreft, may thy pitty praise, and memorife thy love in after daies. Thou seeft we are deprived of friend or make, which may deplore with teres our forlorne state, Supply our want with thy remorfefull shade, fince (as it seemes) for pitty thou was made, Couer vs two (two louers) that would be gladly ore-cannoped with th' leaves of thee. Thou⁴⁶ couerst him already : happy time, that twifts about him with those spraies of thine. If Nature had accorded to our vowes, these armes had clept that necke, those flowry bowes, Doe now enfold; but heavens have so decreed, to have two lovers clad in fable weed. Which I accord vnto, heavens purge my finne, hee's gone before, and I must follow him. Which faid, the fix'd the fword vnto her Breft, with more then womans (pirit which exprest. Her love vnto her Saint, who lay along, congeal'd in bloud, whofe trunke fhee fell vpon. The tree fent out her Branches, which did couer, their corps with vernant blossomes, shadowed over. Aurora breath'd vpon them, whole fweet breath, perfum'd their bodies, seazd vpon by death.

Loues labyrinth, or

316

Siluan.

Siluan. Epicædium.

THis done in filent paffage of the Night, when ftars fhone fair & bright in Thetis fight, The rural Wood-nimphes did their Odes difplay, fabled with woes : which woes to take away, They fung these verses, verses ominous, Ore Thisbes hearfe, and louely Pyramus. Long may your fame 48 and glory heer remain, honour'd by vs, and by each country Swaine. Long may you live renowned, for your love hath made perpetuall eccoes in this groue. A thrice bleft groue, bleft graue, for fuch bleft Saints, That in this flowry pale heere pitch their tents, Wherein loues warre eternized for ave. lost that by night, which was restor'd by day, Smell (weet for ever, (weetest of all sweets : you (pringing bloffoms which the fpring-time greets. Send out your fragrant fauor and releeue, our troubled (prings which be addreff'd to grieue. Let not your vernant bosome so retaine, all comfort from the oat-pipe of a Swaine, That no release of forrow or distresse, makes diminution of his wretchednesse. What (hould we fing? no hymne of melody: [hall ere posses] our desert empery. No tune of ioy, no pleasant straine of mirth, hall yeeld contentment to Nereus birth.

For

317

318 Loues labyrinth, or

For farre more faire, more beautious, Thysbe was then any wood-Nimph, any Country Lasse. 49 Campaspe shee was faire, and was belou'd, of potent Monarchs : her proportion mou'd, Doting Apelles, loues effects to thew, to that same picture which his Pencile drew. Yet if Campaspe were enshrined heere, no cause of love would in her frame appeare. More divine feature was in Thysbes face, a more delightfull smile, more comely grace, Then ere Apelles, though in skill most rare, could make his picture any way compare. Bring mirtle branches, let vs couer them, fhrowding their corps with wreaths laid ouer them ; And every time and tide, let's fhed a teare, ouer the fad memoriall of their Bere, Well doe these odes of sorrow vs beseeme, and better would they please Arcadias Queene, Then if with feasts and triumphs we should spend, our dismall houres, about a louers end. Wee are not for Dianas cheerefull game, though we (foretime) have well approou'd the fame. No quiuer, nor no bow, will we receive, till wee have spent our dirges on their grave, Whofe glorious loues, fo well conioyn'd in one, makes their two teares distill into one stone. For every drop of bloud which doth descend, from Thisbes wound, flies to her louing friend : And those same streames which issued out amaine, from Pyramus make their recourse againe.

And

the true Louers-knot. 319

And ioyne with Thysbe, whole respective wound, licks vp the blood was fhed vpon the ground. Eternall Trophies hung vpon your hearfe. made everlasting, by our pensive verse; And let this marble which doth couer you, her teares (each morne) with moifned drops renew. Which in remorfe, compassionate may spend, fome dewie drops to witneffe your fad end. You pretty gliding streames which run apace, leave off your course, and flow vnto this place, That you may moisten this sad monument, this defert herfe with watry element. And gratifie our love, that love you deare, and with entirely your fweet prefence heere. Leave off to wash those clives and ruggy caues, and now repaire to monumentall graues, To rinfe all foule infection which did staine, the corps deceafd by your still streaming vaine. Why doe you stay? why seeme you so hard harted, to fhed no teares, at constant love departed ? If that our Queene (hould heare, as thee thall heare, this your remorfeleffe hart, would cost you deare. Doe you not see how we in fable weede, to weepe amaine, have heere repair'd with speed ? And in distresse enclos'd, full fraught with woe, may aske of you what's caufe you doe not foe? See how ech fprig 50 fends out a pearled drop, and when the pruner seemes their height to crop, They seeme to thanke him for it, wishing death, to decke these louers with a flowry wreath.

See

320 Loues-labyrinth, or

See how each bird reforts vnto their shrine, as if it were vnto some power divine : And dedicates vnto their mournfull tombe laies, which shal serve in after times to come. They warble out their dolefull funeralls, having forgot their forepast festivalls. Their fad 51 aspects such forrow doth affoord, that we our selues their forrows may record Time yeelds no tune, nor tune observ's no time, time, tune, nor measure keep we ore this shrine, We cannot descant, descant there is none, to such as know no descant but to mone. Like Spouse-lost Turtles, do we flocke together, and on each morn by time, confort we hither To celebrate their deaths with memorie. whofe constant loues make them charactred be. Nor will we cease, or make an end of griefe, till that their parents yeeld them some reliefe, To confummate their wishes, and supply their former hardnes by their clemency : For in no time did euer children find, parents more wilfull, to their loues vnkind. Yet for that Fate hath done her work of ill. in that she did the bloud of lovers spill. And tyrannif'd in shewing of her force, raging gainst love, deprived of remorse : Let Parents cease to hate, and make amends, by solemne hests for their untimely ends. It is not fit that 52 death and enmity fhould wage their battaile euer mutually.

For

For none I know, but when their foe is dead they fcorne bafe enuy in their brefts to feede.
But let vs to our worke, and build vs bowres, compof'd of fragrant bloffomes, and of flowers,
Hard by this tombe, this herfe, this defert graue, where we may giue what conftant loue doth craue,
An ode difplaying paffion : and relate, the fad euent of loues vnhappy ftate.
Each nimph addreffe her to her dolefull voice, that we may charme the furies with our noife;
And draw their hapleffe parents from their cell, to heare the faid Narration we fhall tell.
So fhall our firft mornes mone performed bee, in honour of thefe louers conftancy.

Siluanor: Threnodia.

F any rurall God, or poore fwaine, confecrate Leucothoes rod, to this plaine: This herfe, deckt with fable verfe, Shall commend Him as our friend, Our fprings, or groues, our ftraine.

Let your Temples fweet, mixed be, With perfumes, let their feete embalmed be. Then will we, mutually Still expreffe, And confeffe, You deferue eternitie. Y

Venus

Loues Labyrinth, or

Venus with mintlewand, Cupids bow, Pelops with his Iuory hand will bestow; All in one, to this stone To declare Loue is rare, Loue that hath no painted show.

322

Ioue admires Thysbes face full of fauor, Mirrha likes the striplings grace and behauiour, Venus lippe, Ios skippe, Were both rare, Yet both are, In one Thysbe, Ioue would have her.

From Olympus Ioue espies Thysbes beauty, Which no sooner he descries, then in duety. Cupids dart wounds his heart, He by force, Sues diuorse, Iuno cannot please his fancy.

Thus did Thysbe liue and dye, liue by dying Death confirmes her deity, in applying To her shrine, power diuine, Which doth shew, And renew: Life anew, renewed by dying.

This ode thus tuned in more dolefull fort, Then any Muse of mine can make report:

Such

Such errours made refound both farre and neere, that thefe fad Araines came to their parents eare. They much perplex'd to heare fuch wofull newes, vyhich floods of teares in their moift eies renues : With fpeed they could, (which fpeed but eafie was,) they made recourfe vnto that forlorne place. Teares trickled downe, as drops from Ætas hil. (fill which with their ftreams ech hollow 53 caue did For woes exceeded more in that their Tombe. had bard them hope of future iovs to come. For they were old, old folkes defire to fee, a good fucceffe vnto their progeny. But now no hope, mifhap had croff'd their hope, e're to attaine at their defired fcope. Oh what ⁵⁴ falt feas for feas they feem'd to be, no drops but floods, vvhich run inceffantly From their dim eies, for teares had made them dim, which, nere the leffe, they took much pleafure in. Oft would the Mother clip her Thysbe round, vyhich lay all fenceleffe on the bloudy ground. And with a kiffe (as old vviues vfe to doe,) her entire loue, her withered lips did fhow. Turne to thy Mother (quoth he) or receiue, thy dolefull Mother in thy hapleffe graue; Acknowledge her that first ave me too foone, brought thee to light, which is eclypf'd & done; I nourifhed thee, and with a kind embrace, made me an Idoll of that beauteous face ; For I conceiu'd, deceiu'd I could not be, No birth more perfect, then the birth of thee.

Thus

324 Loues Labyrinth, or

Thus did doting 55 trot deplore her fall, (all with dropping nofe, faint breth, more then them That did attend her paffion : for the reft did more represse those passions she express, Nor is it proper, well I know, that man [hould fhed his teares with eafe as women can ; For they more prompt to comfort, yeeld releefe, to fuch as are oppreft with heapes of greefe, And can conceale their forrow, as is fit, knowing the meanes and way to bridle it. They thus remaining ore their childrens graue, the hatefull ground, which did their corps receiue, They did confult how they might expiate, that wrong of theirs, which they had done fo late. Which whilft they did aduife, they ftraight did fee, their childrens vowes, grauen in an Oliue tree. Which were to this effect. "Surceafe to mourne, "and place our feuerall afhes in one Vrne. For whilft we liu'd, we lou'd, then fince we dye, let one poore vrne preferue our memory. And let this day recorded bee by you, and feftiue kept : eternife louers true. Giue vpper hand to him, for he was first : refpect with care, our bones be not difperft Amongft vnhallowed reliques which will ftaine the glorious Trophies which our loue did gaine, Bee not vnkind vnto your childrens loue, but what they like, let your confent approue, For if your minds difpofed fo had beene, this fpacious glaffe of woe you nere had feene. But

But we forgiue, forget, fo you performe, what we have wish'd : we feast, cease you to mourn. These hestes, these rites thus read : without delay, they fought their forepast guilt to take awaie, And rinfe their former ill by prefent good, yeelding to loue which they before with-ftood : For admiration rapt them, and they faw, no curbe could hold the reins of Venus lawe : For fhe enioyn'd them loue, which they obey'd, which by no Parents wifhes could be ftai'd. Each in their order did their obfequies, with folemne rites as their laft exequies, Making a fire of Iuniper compos'd, in which their louely corps feem'd well difpos'd, Which were confum'd to afhes and conferu'd. in one fmall 57 pot, as wel their fame deferu'd. This vrne, poore vrne, which kept their ashes fure, was made of Braffe, that it might ere endure, And as a relique, reliques then were vfed, in 58 Nimrods Temple in a cheft enclosed. There was it put, to which as fome report, all constant louers vf'd to make refort. No marriage rite was to be confummate, Before they did this relique inuocate, That it would be propitious to their loue, in figne whereof each gaue a Turtle-Doue, To explicate their truth, their conflancie, which they obferu'd for euer folemnly. Thus were these true with honour well rewarded. their afhes, as times Monuments regarded, Y 3 Kept Kept and referu'd for Fame, Fame grac'd the earth, in fuffering Nature bring fo faire a birth Into the world, which world vnworthy was, to have two mirrors and to let them paffe. But time, vnthankfull time, too foone forgot the Gem she had, as if she had it not. Soild in the luftre, luftre it had none, depriu'd of Fame, when her renowne was gone, For Parents breathleffe were, and with their birth, by times fucceffion were interr'd in earth. In felfe-fame earth for they defir'd to have, (graue their childrens 59 hearse their vrne, their comely Which having got, men neuer did adore, their facred hear fe as they had done before. For leffe were they efteem'd, fo from that time, nere any louer came vnto their fhrine. Yet to this day, their pictures doe remaine, in Marble wrought, defcribing euery vaine. Ech ruby blufh, mix'd with a crimfon die, with Thysbes fmile decolour'd wantonly. With face defac'd by times iniurious frowne, hath fhown more beauty the my Mule hath fhown.

326

The

The anfwere of Hipolitus vnto Phædra.

The Argument.

Hippolitus fon to Thefeus, by the Amazo Hippolite, folicited by his step mother Phedra to fenfuality, feekes by all meanes to represse her inordinate lust by exemplifying the worth, resolution, and magnanimity of his father & her husband Theseus : as also aggrauating the foulenes of the fact the intended producing reasons to dissuade her from prosecuting her purpose any further : as more particularly the scandall of the world, which of necessity would ensue vpon committing of a fact so detestable to the supreame deitie, so exorbi tant to the law of nature. Next he proposideth the ineuitable revenge of the Gods above, who could not fuffer such impieties to passe with impunity : but would chastife incestuous actions with the exquisitest punishments they referue for any delinquent : concluding his Epiftle more emphatically: affuring her if the would not defift from her lasciuious intendments, Theseus (hould be acquainted with her entirest thoughts, who in no wife could brooke her infatiable defires, but ere long would explate the guilt of her fin with the facrifice of her blood.

The Epiftle of Hyppolitus vnto Phedra.

I F modeft lines fend out a modeft fmile, and those immodeft vows you dedicate Vnto my youth; youths frailty to beguile, my vertuous bloss to extenuate, What should I write? or in what tempred file should I describe the ruine of my state? Since vertue is my centre, truth the fcope, At which I aime the leuell of my hope?

I will not call you wanton, but you feeme too too refpectles of your glorious fame,
That once in Creet for bewty deem'd a Queene, fhould now grow careleffe to eclipfe the fame.
O better fruits fhould in that groue be feene, then to neglect the glory of your name. Minos efteemed was more pure, more iuft, then to expose his house to shamefull luft.

Turne to your fpoufe my father, and obferue his worth, his merits, and difclaime your vow,

See

The true-louers knot. 329

- See what refpect your Thefius doth deferue, who confecrates his loue & life to you : Then I am fure you will be loth to fwerue from your allegeance, which is Thefeus dew. He thinkes him bleft in you, O doe not then impaire the bleffing of fuch bleffed men.
- But if you will diftaine my fathers bed, make it a brothel profitute to finne, Reft well affur'd Ile neuer heare it faid.
- that I his fonne that leudneffe did begin,
- To prime the prime rofe, or to fee it fade within his bed where I haue nourifh'd been,
- For ill it would befeeme both him and me, that his gray head (hould weare my liuerie.

Let not the glory of your ancient houfe attainted be, or dazed by your flaine : For after ages would fpeake worfe of vs, and this our fhame would euermore remaine : Which could not chufe but grow pernicious to the renowme your Thefeus did attaine. That he who many monfters vanquifhed, fhould let a monfter live within his bed.

Employ those thoughts fo wantonly inclin'd to th' comfort of your fpoufe, let him receaue
Th' elixir of your loue anew refin'd your loues the haruest which your Lord doth craue:
Then keepe not from him that which is affigned,

By

Loues Labyrinth, or

by powers fupernall for his worth to haue : Adore no fhrine but his, let mine alone, I am his image, he and I are one.

330

How ill would it befeeme diftaftfull youth, to wrong the winter of his reuerend age : Whom (if not graceleffe) would it not moue to 'ruth ? to foile his bed, Whofe nie-fpent Pilgrimage Craues pitty by prefcription, grac'd by truth, and vertues colours, making fame his page, To follow euery action with her breath, to giue him life when feaz'd vppon by death.

Looke at the trophies Creffa doth poffeffe, times monumentall characters of worth,

And you fhall fee his fpoiles deferue no leffe, then adoration deifi'd on earth.

Since every act proclaimes his mightineffe, as if defcended from Ioues divine breath.

His wars, his conqueft, each expresse his merit, indude with more then Adamantine spirit.

Leaue of inuiting your Hyppolitus to feftiue banquets, of inceftuous meeting,
Well loues he Phædra, better Thefeus, then to wrong age with fuch licentious greeting,
To make his owne to be most trecherous. the fowrest tast from him that feemd his fweeting,
In working shame 'gainst him who first fustained far more for me then in me is contained.

Much

Much do I wonder how you fhould conceiue, fuch a fufpicious thought of my neglect,
Vnto my fathers age ? or how you haue, grounded the reafons of your fowle fufpect ?
That I his childe, my childehood fhould depraue, affecting that which loue cannot effect, (wot,) Which loathed pleafures, loath'd they are (God to vfe those fports which Nature fancieth not.

Thefe ⁶⁰ pa/times which I follow yeelde content without repentance : heere's no Parents fhame, No worlds Rumor: dangers imminent, haue no repofe mongft thefe : admired fame Followes the Court, and places eminent, each feeking how they might dilate their name. But I refpectleffe of Fames admiration, reape the content of harmeleffe recreation.

Heere fteepy clifts, and heauen-afpiring Hilles, Yeeld a fweet aier to relifh my delight, (deftills There pleafant fprings, from whence fweet ftreames to quench my thirft : and when the glomie night,
Shuts vp the raies of Phæbus, reft we ftill till rofie check'd Aurora fhew her light.
Then we addreffe vs to our fports againe, For where we take delight there is no paine.

Then pardon me, (if pardon I may aske) that knowes no other pleafure then is heere, That neuer tooke vpon me any taske,

but

332 Loues Labyrinth, or

but the purfuing of the harmleffe Deere. I need not fhame, my blufh requires no mafke, I haue no objects of affection neere, But the true fplendor of a Natiue face, not mix'd with colours to augment her grace.

If Ariadne defolate, forlorne, fhould heare of your intendments : what would fhe Reply, but ieaft, that he who had forfworne those folemne vowes which should observed be,

Hath well deferu'd to weare his wantons horne, that dedicates her felfe to luxurie.

O fie for fhame, let fhame represse that finne, which not repress'd will fhame both you and him.

How glad would Ariadur heare of this, who refts deiected, rob'd of that fame Gem, Which you refpect not : fhe conceiu'd a bliffe in his fweet fmile, whofe fweetneffe did regaine Her much prifd loue, her fpels explan'd no leffe; In the fubduing him, who more had flaine, Then any monfter, that in Crete was bred; yet by her Art was foone difcomfited.

But fhe ! vnhappy fhe, as Bachus would, depriu'd of him, for whom fuch paneis fhe tooke, In Chios left, neere after to behold her darling Thefeus, who (you know) forfooke Her much diftrefs'd diftreffes did enfold

the very manfion pitch'd on 62 high to looke,

At

The true-Louers knot. 333

At that vnhappy place where Thefius left her, whofe abfent fteps all comfort had bereft her.

Then you that are preferr'd before her loue, fet not at fale the treafure you poffeffe,
Let Ariadnes exile fomething moue that fickle minde of yours, whofe wantonneffe, Seemes more transparant in that you approue more of my loue, then of his excellence.
Whofe beautious outfide's faire, but you may finde, a farre more beauteous infide of his minde.

Constant he is, witneffe Peritheus, whofe two combined hearts fo well vnited, Haue eterniz'd the loue of Thefeus: Mirrour of men, that men fhould be exiled, To paffe fuch fhelfes of perrils dangerous, With fight of poore Proferpina delighted:

Whom to exempt with Pluto, they remaine, the one imprifon'd clofe, the other flaine.

Yet could not Pluto barr his eies from teares, which he pourd out each morne vpon the hearfe, Of his deare friend, loue after death appeares, which like an Ecco earths abyffe did pierce, Opprefs'd with woe, furmifes of vaine feares, Maugre the furie, of thofe Furies fierce,

And Fiends below, which could not him furprife with daftard feare : ⁶³Braue Spirits feare defpife.

Loues Labyrinth, or

O doe not then expofe his vertuous age, to fuch difhonour adde no difcontent
Vnto his outworne ftrength, left you enrage his patient fpirit aboue his element.
Doe not corrupt your honour nor engage, the glory of your birth fo eminent.
Scandalls are foone engendred fooner bred, then after-times can make extinguifhed.

Doe not degrade your Thefeus from his throne, Which he enioies, conceiuing more delight, In that he hath this little of his owne, reaping contented harbour on the night, Then th' husband man to reape what he hath fowne, or the poore Turtle, in her Turtles fight. Beleeue me Queene, more doth your prefence pleafe Your Thefeus heart, then any one of thefe.

If you would have Hippolitus to love, Love aged Thefeus for Hippolitus fake;

For by those heauenly powers that raigne aboue, more comfort shall Hyppolitus partake

By that affection, then Idalias groue, ere reap'd in Venus when he did awake,

And rous'd from filent flumber to returne, vnto her Birds which for their Queen did mourn.

Alas, faire queene, why fhould you thus affault, the vnprouided fortreffe of mine hart;

334

Or why fhould you your colours thus exalt, difplaying ruine to my chiefeft part, And vnder ground as in fome fecret vault laying your fhot, intending to fubuert, The Bulwarke which fupports my flender being, to raze my Fort and put my friends to fleeing.

The fort which I poffeffe is my pure heart, my friends the vertues which doe keepe my fort, The firft in all my dolours beares a part, the fecond in diftreffe do make refort, To arme my foule againft inuafions dart vpon their foe, their furie to retort. Were 't not a pittie then to fee that fall. which doth fuftaine my felfe my meanes and all ?

But fure you fee in me fome fhew of pleafure, and gladly would haue me expressed my thought, Objecting to my fenses time and leafure, feldome are fuch delights fo lightly bought,

High is the price of fuch a precious treafure, and well deferues it to be throughly fought :

But I reply that pleafure lafts not long that tis vfurp't by force, and tane by wrong.

I loue no bitter fweets immixd with gall, whofe fharp repentance drowns the pleafure paft, A pure vnfpotted foule, whofe ⁶⁴*Brafen wall* can hold out battrie and wil euer laft That feare no ruine, no declining fall,

Soil'd

336 Loues Labyrinth, or

foilde with no blemifh of her mindes diftafte, But fraught with wealth, thrice happy in her wealth feeding on free delights, not got by ftelth.

What is that pleafure, where attendeth feare, As faith-infringers doe: who violate The faith they owe : whereby it doth appeare. they reft respectlesse of their future state, Preferring lust before their Spoulals deare, their fhame with fhameleffe Acts to aggrauate : O none God wot : no pleafure can be there, where there is nought but actions of defpaire. O let those hests inuiolable stand, which heauens aboue confirme, and let them be As Charactres, writ by dame Natures hand to eleuate our fenfes purity : Proceeding from the immortall powers command, to confummate our liues integrity. That loue's well fquared by an equall line. whofe ground-worke is grounded on the lawes di-(uine But if thefe motiues cannot caution you, not to adulterife your Nuptiall bed, Be you affur'd to Thefeus I will fhew those indigested humors which are bred, By your vnfetled thoughts which doe renew an heape of paffions in your troubled head.

All which concording make that difcord true. No faith more faithleffe then the Faith of you.

Your

Your brittle fexe, fo brittle is your mould, you cannot long be free from alteration :
Grounds her foundation on no certaine hold, but toft with fundrie gufts of times mutation, Expos'd to fhame and to confusion fold, infringing loue to purchase recreation,
Which we by nature do accompt a fhame, to fet them light that haue efteemed them.

Vertues furprifer, chastities depriver, fower of difcord, refuge to the worft, Forge of ambition enmities contriver: an hatefull monster, vipers birth accurst, Friendships diffoluer, simple foules deceiver, which from perdition had her birth-right first. The foile and sale of honour soonest showen, where men affect all pleasure save their owne.

And what be thofe but vaine, vnfauourie ioyes, whofe fruits vnfeas'ned yeeld but fmall delight, When comforts are conuerted to annoies, the beauty of our day obfcur'd by night, And that we iudg'd for ferious feeme as toies, which haue eclips'd the glory of their light : And then reuoluing what we did admire let fall our hopes, to greater things afpire.

O be afham'd to blemifh that faire Roote, which had derivall from the powers aboue,

Staine

Staine not your bed with your polluted foot, loue him alone whom you are bound to loue,
Giue no occafion to your Spouse to doubt of your licentious paffion, but remoue,
Both guilt and guilts, sufficient, whole bright eyes, lealouse of nought your fecret's councels fpies.

Will you for any pleafure lofe refpect, of all your kindred that attend your fame,
Which once furpriz'd by infamies fufpect, will call your acts augmenters of their fhame ?
O doe not fo : let not your luft effect, the ruine of that houfe from whence you came :

But as your glorie doth furpaffe the reft, fo in your heart let virtue build her neft.

Vaine is the flower, foone fading, foone forgot, which you do pamper to your ouerthrow,
Time will be, when those beautious corps shall rot, their poore remainder to the earth bestowe;
Then you shall be as if you flourish'd not plac'd in earths centre, Stigian lake belowe,
Where Minos indgement gives of every fin, that those are guiltie may remaine with him.

He was your father, yet his equitie, will not permit his Phædra to tranfgreffe : His lawes haue no exception, puritie onely exempted is, whofe eminence

Was

Was first ordain'd to raigne eternally, in the Elifian fields Ioues refidence; Then chufe which two you pleafe, whether you'le dwel, in heaven with Ioue, or with your Sire in hell.

Erect your thoughts depreffed downe belowe, and let them foare vnto an higher pitch Then terrene pleafures, let that beauteous flow of outward colours your affection teach (flowe To tafte the Spring of fweetes, from whence doth fuch mines of treafure, as will more enrich The Ars'nall of your minde then vaine delight, which lopped is before it come to height.

Recall to minde Ixions punifhment, fee in a mirror what his folly got, Who whil'ft he foar'd aboue his element, kindly receiv'd of Ioue, himfelfe forgot : And as a ftreame which runs too violent, paffing his bounds and limits, knoweth not How foone that flowe fhall haue a fudden fall, whofe boundleffe current kept no mene at all.

So did Ixion who in felfe-conceit of his proportion did afpire too high, Affecting Iuno which did ruinate, the manfion of his Priftine dignitie, Dafling that fun which fhone fo bright of late, for with a clowde deceiv'd engendred he

The Centaurs varied formes, which being bred, to Pelion came, where they inhabited.

O then confine affection with the bound, of vertues honour, giuing her the place In euery action, making reafons ground the ftrong foundation, Time cannot deface, With beautious faire contexture clofed round, a correfpondence twixt the minde and face : The one renown'd by th' others puritie, as if both made to make one vnity.

Shall Hymens temple be defac'd by you, Her facred hefts by your inconftancy :

O be affur'd the gods will punifh you, imbranding fhame in your pofteritie,

To breake your faith and wrong a friend fo true, vnder pretence of mere fimplicitie :

Leue vertus fhadowe, and your felfe betake, to loue the fhadow for the fubftance fake.

VVhat vertues did your maiden yeeres attend ? white was your roabe but whiter was your mind, VVhen all your actions did to vertue tend ; Each fence her proper function had affign'd, Vertues foundation had perfections end, (finde, youth mix'd with grace : rare was't your like to But now your luftre foil'd by fhameleffe finning, argues your end farre worfe then your begining. Crete Crete made renown'd by fathers memory, fhal't be extinguifh'd by the daughter's fhame? Times auntient browe records his equitie. for time-impartialifters merit fame, Proude was the earth to haue fuch men as he : earth feem'd by him to change her earthly name.

For nere did fame with truth fo neerely meete, as when your aged father gouern'd Crete.

O then be daughter to fo good a father, be his lifes pattern, fhew from whence you fprang, Seeke to reuiue his glorie tropheis rather, then by your fhame to fee them ouerthrowne, Some fruitfull bloffomes from his vertues gather : fo may you make your fathers fame your owne : Crete was fultained oft by others fall. but file's fultain'd by Phædra most of all.

How will this trumpe of glorie make your mind too low deiected, feeke an other port
Then that you aime at now : where you fhall finde, more perfect folace when you make refort
Vnto the fhrine of Vertue, that's refined with pureft colours, where the ftrongeft *fort*That could be built by Nature or by Art, conferues the facred treafure of the heart.

Z 3

O time deceing youth abufing time, making her ftale to objects of delight,

Seeing

342

Seeing the beft will to the worft decline: (light, Night-owle, whofe works dare not approach the Prophaning that which was before diuine, Truth's great'ft opponent, vertues fecond fight, Whofe minde bewitching vanities ensnare, our captiv'd reafon with a feeming faire.

More fhould I write, but that I loath to write of fuch a fubiect whofe lafciuious foyle,
Makes my poore lines afham'd of fuch delights, That Parents birth, fhould Parents bed defile,
Or to play falfe when he is out of fight : diftrufting nought fhould I his truft beguile ?
O ceafe to loue liue to aduance your fame, freeing your Bed and me from Parents fhame.

Yours if your owne: But being not your owne, I will not reope what other men have fowne.

FINIS.

To the understanding Reader.

FOr your better direction I have reduced thefe enfuing notes Alphabettically, with an apt relation to each particular included in the Poeme, which may minifter no leffe Grace to the inuention, then delight to your reading.

^aS Alamina infula est Atheniēsis, quam Telamon gubernasse dicitur, vitibus et myrtetis eiusq. generis arboribus vestita. vid. Plutarch.

^b Flumen maxime omnium inclytum, &c. Flumen è Niphati monte originem ducens, et Babiloniam celerrimo curfu fecans, in rubrum mare prolabitur.

· Alueum mutasse fertur ibid. &c.

^d In perfonam amatorum.

• Zeuxis vuæ viuis coloribus depictæ. &c. vid. Plutarch. in Apoth.

^c Riphæi montes Arcadiæ, qui asperrimis verticibus subnixi sunt. vid. Cæs. commen.

Ruphai

⁸ Lynceus & Argos incredibili perspicacia luminum præditi.

^h Coniux Orphei, quæ per deferta loca currens, vt Aristæum, eam immodeste nimis sequentem, euitaret, a serpente venenato infecta extremam diem obijt, eam vere legimus, a Plutone raptam esse, et sub imperio suo miserrimam vitam transegisse, vid. Ouid. et Senec. Trag. Her. Fu.

ⁱ Homer. in Iliad. vid: fuper hunc locum. Calabr. in quar. lib. de fupple.

k Turture sic Turtur iungit amanda suo. pöet.

¹ Timon pater Thisbis qui ingëtem Thefauri molem in Arca recondidisse arbitratur, eiusque aspectu mirum in modum delectabatur, vid fab. in Ouid. Metam.

^m Naphtha bituminis genus quod afperfione aquæ vehementius exæftuat. Teftat. Plinio.

ⁿ Loue is more vehement depriued of her object.

° Stellam Veneris appellat Homerus "Εσπερον.

P Vid Lucan. et pallin, de sid : nominibus.

9 Res est imperiosa timor.

^{*} Sordities, iræ, nummorum copia mira, his natura fenis tribus est infecta venenis.

¹ Vnde Vestales virgines candidis stolis indutas esse legimus in Aulo. Gell. in noct. Att.

' Sublimi stemmate ductus.

" Nam si vis apte nubere, nube pari, Ouid.

* Succinctis humeris scuto.

Y Vid. Plinium in natur. hift. & Arift. de Natur. animal.

Quos

Quos fi Argus feruet? qui occulatus totus fuit. Plaut. in Aulular.

² Hippodamia filia ænomai quam Pelops celeritate curfus obtinebat.

1 Pelopid : humeri : prouerb.

² Diana.

³ Lustra ferarum. Virg.

4 Noctis opaco cardine fulgebant stella.

5 Campi Elysij.

6 Nemesis vltionis dea.

⁷ Pegasus alatus equus, a quo Hypocrene originem duxit.

⁸ O quicunque fub hac habitatis rupe leones, &c. Ouid. in Metam.

⁹ Vna duos (inquit) nox perdit amantes, Ouid.

¹⁰ Sed timidi est optare necem : ibid.

11 Myrtus Vener., &c.

12 Progne Philomela, & Itys.

¹³ Ter. in vpupam. Rex fueram fic crista probat : sed fordida vita immundam è tanto culmine fecit auem, Campan. in Ter.

¹⁴ Exegi monumentum ære perennius : marmore durius, ebore ferenius, vid. Eleg. Flac. et Propert.

¹⁵ Ægle Aretufa, & Hefperitufa Atlant : filiæ, quæ hortum Hefperiæ aureis pomis refertisfimum ope serpentis perpetuam vigiliam seruantis tenebant, quam postea Hercules interemit, vid. ope : Her : in Sen : Trag.

¹⁶ Arbor niueis pulcherrima pomis — Ardua Morus erat : Ibid. ¹⁷ Corticis exiguæ, nigrique coloris Ebenus, &c. de natura gagatis : vid. Plin.

Postquam

18 Postquam vestem cognouit, et eiusdem. Ouid.

19 In tumulum Nini, allocutio.

20 Viscera plus quam marmorea.

²¹ Purpurea vela, leniorem auram trahentia, &c.

²² Homer in Iliad. vid. Calab. in deliquijs fuper hunc locum.

23 Fluminis vt cecinit littore cicnus, obit.

²⁴ Gagates quæ monumēta excolere folebat non tam ob eximiæ naturæ proprietates, quam politæ et exaratæ Formæ elegantias vsurpata. vid. Plin. in Natur. histo.

 ²⁵ Batia, fepulchrum Ili, quod in Ilio erigebatur et in Troiano bello folenni honore effici legimus. vid. Hom. ib.
 ²⁶ wos. honos.

²⁷ Et mihi fortis in vnum hæc manus eft: et amor, &c. Ouid. ibid.

28 Quoq. magis tegitur tanto magis æstuat ignis.

29 In parentes nænia. 30 Vt fup. vid. eleg. Mart.

³¹ Volat irreuocabile verbum. ³² Pyra folennis vid. Funer. antiq. in Gell. et al. ³³ Rofa quæ redolet, crefcit cum fpina quæ punget. ³⁴ Et fugit ad falices, & fe cupit ante videri. Virg. ³⁵ Vid Virg. in 1°. lib. Georg. de Irrigatione, &c. ³⁶ a Poetical fiction. ³⁷ Ioues reply.

³⁸ Vid. Hefiod de generat. deor. de natal. Hercul. et Plau. in Amphitruo—pol me haud pænitet; Scilicet boni dimidium mihi diuidere cum Ioue.

39 Et foror et coniux, &c. Virg. in Anead. 1º. lib.

40 Nocte fomniat, quæ vigilans voluit. Terent.

⁴¹ Ofcula libauit natæ. Virg. ⁴² Idas filius Apharei qui celeritate equorum incredibili, Marpeffam egregia forma puellā corripuit. vid. Ouid. ⁴³ Horat. in 1. lib. Ratione

346

⁴⁴ Ratione verum a falfo difcernimus, quam a Natura nobis infitam habemus vid. Cic. 1. lib. offi. ⁴⁵ Quæ lato culmine Buftum occulit, arbuftis teneris intexit opacis. vide Proper. ⁴⁶ Tu quæ ramis arbor miferabile corpus, nunc tegis vnius mox & tectura duorum. Ouid. Metam.
⁴⁷ Qui viret in folijs venit e radicibus humor, et patrum in natos abeunt cum ftemmate mores. ⁴⁸ Viuit poft funera virtus, &c. ⁴⁹ Vid. Apoth. rom. apud Plutarch.

50 — Et germina gemmis effulsere suis, fragrantia pascua veris præmia diffundunt, noua sert noua semina.
Terra. 51 O quam difficile est crimen nö prodere vultu?
52 Cessit post sunera liuor. vid. Apoth. Plut. de Aeschin. et Demosth. inimicit. et de obitu Demost.

53 Ingentia terræ antra replere folent currentia fonte perenni, &c. 54 Mare mittit amara, &c. 55 Vetus vietus veternofus mustellino colore. Terentius.

⁵⁶ De Oliua refert Plinius, quod post initi fæderis focietatem, ramos eius arboris Fetialis gestare folebat, cuius indicio pacis specimina proferebantur, vid. in Philip. comm. de Bell. Neapol. Oliuæ ramos pacis indicia circumferre solebant ij, cum quibus cöditiones pacis consirmatæ sunt. &c. ⁵⁷ Recipit populos vrna citatos. Senec. ⁵⁸ Babilon nunc vero Bagadeth appellata, a Nimrode extruebatur, & a Semiramide extendebatur. In Euphratem Flu: amæmis: sita : vid: Geo-graph. comen. ⁵⁹ Quia ossa parentum eorum rogis immiscebantur.

⁶⁰ Minotaure. ⁶¹ Afcendo : vires animus dabat aeque ita late Æquora prospectu metior alta meo. Ouid. in op. Ariad. Thef.

FINIS.

LIMITED REPRINTS.

EBSWORTH'S

Drolleries of the Restoration.

400 Copies only Small Paper, and 50 Large, numbered and signed.

Literal Reprints, reproduced with the utmost exactitude, for students of old literature, page for page, and line for line, not a word being altered, or a single letter departing from the original spelling, with special Introductions drawing attention to the political events of the times referred to, and some account of the Authors of the Songs; also copious Appendices of Notes, Illustrations, Emendations, &c.

The originals are of extreme rarity, perfect copies seldom being attainable at any public sale, and then fetching prices that make a book-hunter almost despair of their acquisition. So great favourites were they in the Cavalier times, that most copies have been literally worn to pieces in the hands of their many admirers. There is no collection of songs in the language surpassing WESTMINSTER DROLLERY, and as representative of the lyrics of the first twelve years after the Restoration it is unequalled : by far the greater number are elsewhere unattainable : while CHOYCE DROLLERY is one of he rarest books in the language.

Handsomely printed, 3 vols. fcap. 8vo., published to Subscribers at 31s. 6d., at present offered for £2 2s.; or Large Paper, Original Subscribers' price £3 3s., present price £4 4s. Every copy numbered and signed.

Limited Reprints.

As the edition was so limited, not a great many sets remain on hand, and as it is not intended to reprint them Collectors should lose no time in securing copies.

These Books have been praised by most of the leading reviews, including the Athenæum, Academy, &c. Also in letters from eminent literary men—F. J. Furnival, J. P. Collier, J. O. Halliwell-Phillips, W. Chappell, A. B. Grosart, &c., &c.

Extract from a Letter from F. J. Furnival, Esq.

"You have added a most rare and curious set of Reprints to the Ballad and Song-Collectors' Library of now-a-days, and have revived the picture of the Stuart times. I hope your series will meet with the success it deserves."

1 . . 1 : M.

A Book for a Shakespearean Library.

NATURES EMBASSIE:

Divine and Morall Satyres : Shepheards Tales, both parts : Omphale : Odes, or Philomels Tears, &c.

BY

R. BRATHWAITE.

The "Shepheards Tales" are so graceful and melodious, and are so full of allusions to old customs, sports, and the actual details of the country life of the period—the England of the time of Shakespeare—that it is very surprising the whole book has not been reprinted before. "Philomels Tears" are among the most charming Odes of the period, and will be appreciated by all true lovers of old-fashioned poetry. Although the "Divine and Morall Satyres" of the above are like most others of the family—rather dull, they have been included to make the book perfect.

Limited Reprints.

The original has long been in great request with Collectors, and has grown to be very scarce and dear: one of our foremost booksellers lately catalogued a copy without the very scarce first part of the "Shepheards Tales" at \pounds 10, and I believe it readily found a purchaser at that price.

The present Reprint contains the whole of the various parts published under the general titles of "Natures Embassie," "Shepheards Tales," &c., and is a literal Reprint, all the peculiarities of spelling being carefully preserved. The amusing title-page, and the old-style head and tail pieces, initial letters, &c., have all been facsimiled or imitated.

Four hundred copies only on Small Paper at 10s. 6d., 50 on Large Paper at 1 Guinea, and 10 on Whatman's Drawing Paper at 2 Guineas. Every copy numbered and signed.

"There is a pleasant flavour of the old times in this volume, and much opportunity of adding to a dictionary of quotations. The whole is creditable in the highest degree to Mr. Roberts."—Notes and Queries.

ROBERT ROBERTS, BOSTON, LINCOLNSHIRE.

[&]quot;Mr. Roberts has expended on the book all the wealth of his experienced taste; and type, paper, and binding are all most winning."-Academy.

LIMITED REPRINTS.

The Apophthegmes of Erasmus

Translated into English by Picolas Udall,

Literally reprinted from the scarce edition of 1564, the only difference being, that, to make it easier for the general reader, the contractions have been filled in, and the Greek quotations, which were exceedingly incorrect, have been, in most cases, put right.

To make the volume more complete, a Memoir of Erasmus, by the Rev. E. Johnson, M.A., has been added; also an Appendix of Notes and Illustrations, facsimiles of leaves of the original edition, and a portrait.

Probably no old English work so abounds with colloquialisms and idiomatic expressions. It is a pleasant, gossipy book, containing a good deal of grave pleasant humour, the thoughts and sayings of great men, with the notes and remarks of Erasmus upon the same. It is well printed on antique ribbed paper, demy 8vo., 540 pages.

 Only 250 are printed, which are numbered and signed. Price £1 Is.

ROBERT ROBERTS, BOSTON, LINCOLNSHIRE.

	DATE DUE
GAYLORD PRINTED IN U.S.A.	CANLORD

